2516a. —— —— Official Solicitor.]—In the first case defts. in an action for personal injuries attributed the blame to a third person, who had since died. He left no estate, but he had been insured against such claims for negligence by an insurance co. Pltf. applied under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 46, for an order that the Official Solicitor should represent deceased's estate & be added to the record as a deft. The order asked was made without the consent of the Official Solicitor. In the second case, the facts were similar, except that deceased was one of defts. in the action, & that the order was made without the knowledge of the Official Solicitor. The Official Solicitor appealed in both cases:—Held: there is no power under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 46, to appoint a person against his will to represent the estate of a deceased person.—PRATT v. LONDON PASSENGER TRANSPORT BOARD, GREEN v. VANDEKAR, [1937] 1 All E. R. 473; 156 L. 2585d. —— Death of settlor fifty years earlier—Personal representatives not traced.]—G. died in 1882 & the chain of representation to his estate was not known & could not be ascertained without considerable expense. E., testator, died on Mar. 27, 1930, & the present appcts., who were his exors., had taken probate of his will in due course save

& except land vested in testator which was settled previously to his death & not by his will & remained settled land notwithstanding his death. Testator was interested in land settled by the will of G. as follows: (a) he was tenant for life for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), of a portion of the N. estate subject to a compound settlement consisting of the will of G. together with an indenture of resettlement of the N. estate dated Sept. 25, 1909; (b) he was absolute owner of certain portions of the N. estate, which by reason of a rentcharge upon them continued to be settled land after his death. These portions were included in a settlement created by the will of G. but were not subject to the compound settlement or the resettlement. They were therefore the subject of a separate settlement; (c) certain portions of the N. estate of which testator was absolute owner were subject to the same conditions as to title as (b) but testator had exonerated these latter from the incidence of the rentcharge as between the various portions of the estate, but he could only do so in so far as the income from both (b) & (c) was adequate to meet the rentcharge. As regards the burden of the rentcharge as a whole both (b) & (c) remained subject to it in favour of the chargee. Of these interests in settled land of testator all three remained subject to the rentcharge, the object of which was to provide an annuity to the still surviving widow of G., & apart from the operation of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 30 (3), for the purposes of that Act, there were originally no trustees of any of these interests of testator under the settlement created by the will of G. On July 22, 1931, S. & W. had already as trustees of the compound settlement & resettlement obtained a grant of special probate to testator as his special exors. limited to settled land, vested in him as tenant for life under the compound settlement & resettlement. Probate of testator's will having excluded settled land there was no representation in respect of the settled land of which he was absolute owner which remained settled land because of the existence of the rentcharge. On the application of the general exors. of the will of testator the ct. revoked the earlier probate & granted general probate to them save & except settled land, of which special exors. had already been appointed by the grant dated July 22, 1931, under the authority of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 155, without citing the personal representatives (if any) of the settlor, G.—In the Estate of POWELL, [1935] P. 114; 104 L. 3022a. Absence of necessary party—Non-disclosure of material facts.]—On an ex parte motion in this matter in Dec. 1933, a grant of administration with the will annexed was made to creditors of deceased, & the ct., in dispensing with the citation of the exor., expressed it as an exceptional course which should not be regarded as justifying in ordinary cases any relaxation of the usual practice of giving an exor., by a formal notice, the opportunity of appearing before the ct. In July, 1935, the exor. applied for the revocation of the grant, & after fresh evidence the President revoked the grant which he had made, on the ground that on the original motion material facts had not been disclosed which, had they been disclosed, would have caused him to require the citation of the exor. In the order embodying the grant the administrators were not described as creditors, & it was directed that in all future grants of administration to a creditor he should be so described in the order. The administrators appealed against the revocation of the grant :—Held : the decision of the President must be affirmed, owing to non-disclosure of material facts. 3127a. ——.]—The proviso to R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, that nothing in that rule contained shall deprive an exor. who has not unreasonably instituted or carried on or resisted any proceedings, of any right to costs out of a particular estate or fund to which he would be entitled according to the rules theretofore acted upon in the Chancery Div., governs the case of bare exors. who reasonably propound a will & codicil, even if, though the will is pronounced for, the codicil is pronounced against. The position of such exors. differs from that of persons named as exors. in a testamentary paper which they unsuccessfully propound. Having established the validity of the will, & made good their position as testator's exors., they are entitled to their costs of the litigation out of the estate as between solr. & client, & can be deprived of that right, which rests substantially upon contract, only if they have acted culpably or unreasonably. Until that has been established, their costs are not in the discretion of the ct., & notwithstanding Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 49, repealed & re-enacted by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 31 (1) (h), an appeal lies without leave from an order condemning them in costs or depriving them of costs out of the estate.—In the Estate of PLANT, WILD v. PLANT, [1926] P. 139 ; *sub nom. 3127b. ——.]—The principle of the decision in In the Estate of Plant, Wild v. Plant, No. 3127a, ante, that exors. who have established the validity of their will are entitled to their whole costs of the litigation, although they fail in establishing a codicil, does not extend in all cases to costs incurred by them by reason of their insisting upon probate not only of clauses in a will expressing the testamentary mind of their testator, but also of a clause which is found not to be his testamentary act. If a residuary gift is excluded from probate on the ground of want of capacity the question still arises whether the costs so incurred by the exors. are due to their "violation or culpable neglect of duty." If the ct. finds on this issue that an exor. is a wrongdoer, his primâ facie right to receive out of the estate costs not otherwise provided for is displaced.—THOMAS v. JONES, [1928] P. 162 ; 139 L. 3692a. —— —— ——.]—In my view Collis v. Flower, No. 3691, was wrong, for the reasons that I have been stating. The common law tenancy was terminated. The exor. had a common law tenancy, & it was terminated by notice to quit. He did not remain in occupation of the house, &, in my view, the original tenant having no right, as we have now decided, to dispose of the property by will, had no right to give any statutory right to the exor., & the exor., who had not lived in the house, could not claim to be a statutory tenant. In my view, therefore, Collis v. Flower, No. 3691, is no longer an authority.

The administrator case stands on a different footing, because one has to look in all these cases to see what the facts were. The administrator case is the case of Mellows v. Low, No. 3692. There the facts were different. The original tenant was a weekly tenant. It was a common law tenancy, & during her tenancy she died intestate. Consequently, whatever rights she had in

PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—J. (a) ii.

3660 i. Right to receive dividends.]—Dividends paid out of the profits of industrial cos. in Quebec, Canada, declared periodically so far as circumstances permit, are generally speaking to be treated as "civil fruits" within art. 449 of the Civil Code of Quebec, & must, pursuant to art. 451, be considered as having been acquired day by day & belonging to the usufructuary in proportion to the duration of his usufruct.

E., who was entitled under the will & a deed of gift of his father to certain dividends payable by a co. of which his father had been the founder & sole shareholder, died three days before the declaration of dividends on its preferred & common stocks out of profits admittedly earned during E.'s lifetime. On a claim by applt., the widow & executrix & universal legatee of E., to the proportionate share of the dividends so declared which she alleged was due to her husband at the date of his death under the will & deed of gift :—Held : (1) although E. was not a usufructuary under the deed of gift, having only a right as beneficiary to share in certain "fruits & revenues" (the dividends) distributed from time to time by the trustees under the deed of gift, he was, by virtue of the provisions of art. 981 (a) to (p) of the Civil Code of Quebec, a beneficiary under the deed of gift & the will with personal rights against the fiduciary donees & the fiduciary legatee respectively; (2) art. 451 of the Civil Code was applicable by analogy to the rights of a beneficiary under the will & deed of gift in respect of the dividends declared by the co. The dividends in question, therefore, were civil fruits subject to the principle contained in art. 451 that they should be considered to have been acquired day by day, & E.'s widow was accordingly entitled to her husband's proportionate share of the dividends which were in fact declared three days after his death.—LAVERDURE v. DU TREMBLAY, [1937] A. C. 666; 106 L. J. P. C. 107, P. C.—CAN.

her common law tenancy remained to her representatives in an intestacy. No notice to quit was ever given. Consequently the common law tenancy remained. Then the landlord claimed that on the death of the tenant intestate, with no member of her family residing in the house, the tenancy lapsed. It was held that the administratrix was a person who derived title under the original tenant, &, consequently, that the residence could not be interfered with. The point of that case which renders it a right decision is that no notice to quit the common law tenancy had ever been given. The common law tenancy, therefore, remained, & it remained in the person who at common law was entitled to it, & her tenancy had never been terminated. Consequently, Mellows v. Low, No. 3692, on the facts, is right, but if notice to terminate the common law tenancy had been given the ct. could not, in my opinion, have said, unless the matter could be brought within the very curious clause about intestacy to which I have referred, that such an administratrix not being in possession is entitled to be protected by the Act (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—SKINNER v. GEARY, [1931] 2 K. C. who was the right heir of H., by his will appointed the applicant T. exor. & trustee & devised his lands to the use of the applicant for life with remainders over. On Jan. 1, 1926, the commencement of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), the lands passing under the wills of H. & C. remained subject to the settlement created by the will of H., &, in the event of the termination of the limited ownership under the will, also subject to the settlement created by the will of C. On the same date J. was tenant for life under the will of H. By a vesting deed dated Apr. 16, 1926, the lands were declared to be vested in J. in fee upon the trusts operating from time to time under the will of H. or otherwise. J. died Apr. 27, 1928. General probate of his will including the settled land was granted to his exors. in the first place. Later the grant was amended limiting it "save & except the settled land vested in testator settled previously to his death & remaining settled notwithstanding his death." J. having died without issue appct. T. then became tenant for life in possession under the settlement created by the will of C. as well as the trustee of that settlement. On appeal from the registrar a grant of probate of the will of J. limited to the settled land was directed to issue to the appct. as special exor. of J.—In the Estate of TAYLOR, [1929] P. 260; 98 L. S. M., 1913, is to be considered one of the "exceptions."

A farmer died intestate leaving four dependent infant children. The administrator of his estate sold certain chattels which were during the lifetime of the deceased "exemptions" under Executions Act, s. 29. On an application by the administrator for directions as to the disposition of the moneys realised from the sale, the creditors of the deceased, none of whom had recovered judgment, contended that the right of exemption terminated on the deceased's death ; that all the assets of the deceased, including the exemptions, were liable for his debts ; & that even if the chattels continued to be exempt, the proceeds of their sale was not exempt : —Held : the administrator, who had also been appointed guardian, held the money received from the sale of the exemptions for the benefit of the children.—Re MCKENZIE ESTATE (Man.), [1930] 1 D. She was not, however, a lunatic so found by inquisition, & never had a committee or receiver. She died at the home on Feb. 1, 1929, a spinster & intestate, aged seventy-six :—Held : her real estate went to her heir at law under Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 51 (2), which exemption sect. read with the definition sect., sect. 55 (1) (viii.), was not confined to cases where a lunatic or defective had a committee or receiver. However, the exemption in sect. 51 (2) only extends to the devolution of the beneficial interest, & the real estate must bear its rateable share of the funeral, testamentary & administration expenses, debts, & liabilities, under sects. 32, 33, 34, & Sched. 4101b. —— "According to value"—Meaning of "value."]—In Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), Sched. I., Part II., para. 6, "Property specifically devised or bequeathed, rateably according to value," the word "value" means the value to testator. Where, therefore, property is devised subject to a mtge. created by testator, & other property is devised burdened with the payment of specified legacies, & the personal estate of testator is insufficient to pay pecuniary legacies & debts, in order to ascertain the proportion payable the word "value" means the value of the property to testator & not the value of the property to the devisees. The "value" in the case of the property burdened with the mtge. is the value of the property less the amount of the mtge., whereas in the case of the property burdened with the payment of legacies the amount of the legacies is not to be deducted to ascertain the "value" of the property.—Re JOHN, JONES v. JOHN, [1933] Ch. 370 ; 102 L. 4485a. —— —— Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 36 (2)—Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 34, Sched. I., Part I.]—S. P., the debtor, died in Oct. 1934, intestate & insolvent. His widow, who had taken out letters of administration, having in her husband's lifetime advanced him certain moneys for the purpose of his business, & having after his death received certain sums which formed part of his estate & which equalled the amount so advanced by her, on Feb. 1, 1935, paid them as his administratrix into her own private account. On Feb. 8 an order was made for the administration of her deceased husband's estate in bkpcy., the sums then still remaining in her hands. These sums paid into her own private account having been claimed by the official receiver as trustee of the husband's estate, who alleged that by virtue of Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 36 (2) (replacing Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 3) & Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), the widow had no right of retainer as against other creditors, a special case was at the request of both parties sent by the county ct. judge, before whom the matter first came, for the opinion & determination of the High Ct. :—Held : on Feb. 8, the widow had in her hands the sums in question forming part of her husband's estate & she had not made these sums her own by paying them in to her private account on Feb. 1, for she had no right of retainer as against the other debts due from the estate, which were all of higher degree than the debt owing to her, & the sums must accordingly be handed over to the official receiver.—Re S. 4538a. —— Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 34 (1).]—Under sect. 34 (1), & the rules set out in Part I. of Sched. I., to Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), in the administration of insolvent estates an exor. has no right of retainer of a simple contract debt against the Crown so far as the Crown has priority under the bkpcy. rules affecting debt priorities; consequently the Crown has priority for a claim for taxes, not exceeding in the whole one year's assessment.

In my opinion there are now only two, or possibly three, degrees of priority of debts, being, first, those which are by the Bkpcy. Act expressly given priority; secondly, those which are expressly directed to be paid pari passu; & possibly, thirdly, those mentioned in Bkpcy. Act. 1914 (c. 59), s. 36, & in sect. 3 of the Partnership Act, 1890 (c. 39), the effect of the latter section being expressly retained in the Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 33. It follows that the balance of any Crown debt in excess of that portion which is given priority is now of the same degree as the debt of the executrix in the present case, & that she can retain against such balance (LORD ATKIN).

The right still remains as before, the right to retain against debts of equal degree. Some debts have been put in a higher degree than they were before; but the exor.'s right always has been subject to changes of that description. What has been affected is not the right, but the classes in respect of which the right is exercised (LORD ATKIN).—A.-G. v. JACKSON, [1932] A. C. 365; 48 T. L. R. 261; 76 Sol. Jo. 146; *sub nom. 4877a. Capitalisation of reserve fund.]—A testator bequeathed to his son & grandson on the death of his wife the shares belonging to him at his death in a certain co. Between the death of testator & the subsequent death of his wife each of the 460 shares of the value of £35 each which belonged to him at the date of his death became, as the result of the capitalisation of a portion of the reserve fund of the co., consolidated with a new share of the value of £15 into a share of the value of £50. Testator's estate, as the result of the capitalisation, also became entitled, in consequence of his holding of 460 ordinary shares, to 920 preferred ordinary shares of £10 each :—Held : (1) following Smell v. Dee (1707), 2 Salk. 415, the gifts were contingent. & (2) the original 460 shares together with the accretions became, on the death of testator's wife, the property of the specific legatees.—Re BUXTON, BUXTON v. BUXTON, [1930] 1 Ch. 648 ; 99 L. From that date the trustees accumulated funds until 1924, when they brought an action of multiplepoinding & exoneration for distribution of the estate :—Held : (1) while as a general rule interest was allowed upon legacies from the death of testator or from the prescribed date of payment, there was no absolute rule compelling the ct. in all cases to allow such interest, the general rule being displaced if circumstances showed it to be inapplicable ; (2) the general legatees were not entitled to interest on their legacies from 1890 to 1919, in respect that, owing to the insolvency of the estate during that period, there was no asset realisable to meet the legacies nor any interest-bearing subject ; (3) there was no absolute rule to the effect that the rate of legal interest should be 5 per cent., the rate of interest being in every case for the discretion of the ct. in the particular circumstances.—WADDELL'S TRUSTEES v. CRAWFORD, [1926] S. The will declared that the two legacies to the grandchildren were subject to the widow's life interest & directed that they should be paid when the grandchildren should attain twenty-one. but in case the estate should be divided before they attained that age, interest should be paid on their legacies. If the grandchildren died before attaining twenty-one, the legacies were to fall into the estate. 4827 iii. —— ——.]—In determining the right of legatees to interest upon legacies the payment of which is postponed for a definite period by the will, the mere direction of such postponement will not of itself alter the date from which interest is to run, & testator's reasons for such postponement may be taken into consideration. If payment was delayed in order thereby to benefit a residuary legatee, then, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, no interest upon such postponed legacies would be payable before the expiration of the prescribed period. But where the postponement was intended primarily to enable the exors. to collect & realise the assets, the postponed legacies would carry interest from such a time after the end of the "exors.' year" as the exors. had in hand realised assets which could rightfully be applied to the payment of such legacies.—MORPETH v. WILLIAMSON, [1926] N. She then made a will appointing him one of her exors. & giving him a legacy of £100 & a protected life interest in the income of her residuary estate. She then guaranteed the son's overdraft on his current account. On each occasion the son charged his estate & interest in a public-house to secure such sum as the testatrix might be called upon to pay. The estate of testatrix was about to be called upon to pay a sum of over £5,000. The son after the death of testatrix executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors:—Held: (1) the fact that testatrix required security for the repayment of the debt after the execution of her will showed an intention not to release the debt, & the son was liable to the estate in the amount which would have to be paid to the bank; (2) notwithstanding that the debt or some part might remain unpaid, the trustees of the will were entitled to pay in their discretion such part of the income as they might think necessary for the son's maintenance & support.—Re EISER'S WILL TRUSTS, FOGG v. EASTWOOD, [1937] 1 All E. 5513 i. Whether mixed fund primarily liable—Necessity for direction in will for payment out of mixed fund.]—Since the Wills Act a residuary devise must for the purposes of administration be regarded as a specific devise, & in the order of assets for the payment of debts ranks with specific devises & specific bequests. A residuary devise does not lose its right to contribution from specifically bequeathed personalty for the payment of debts so far as the general personal estate is insufficient, merely by reason of the facts that it is given together with the general personal estate on trust for conversion & the proceeds of conversion are made a mixed fund for the purposes of disposition, & that the whole estate is subject to a general constructive charge for the payment of debts. To entitle specifically bequeathed personalty to be exonerated from such liability by the residuary realty further evidence of testator's intention to that effect is necessary ; such as a direction that the debts are to be paid out of the mixed fund, or that the proceeds of conversion are to be regarded as personal estate.—Re FORSYTH, WYATT v. FORSYTH (1929), 29 S. 5594a. Direction in will for payment of "money secured on mortgage" out of residue—Balance of unpaid purchase-money.]—Testator, who at the date of his will in 1912 was the owner of several freehold properties, one of which was subject to a mtge. & of leasehold & other personal estate, gave & bequeathed all the freehold & leasehold properties of which he might die possessed upon trusts in favour of certain of his grandchildren & great-grandchildren, & the residue of his estate upon trust for sale & conversion; he then directed that his trustees should out of the money thereby produced pay (inter alia) his debts & legacies, & should out of the residue of such money pay & discharge "any sum of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold properties," & should stand possessed of the residue of such money in trust to divide same as therein mentioned. After the date of his will testator paid off the mtge. & took a reconveyance of the mortgaged property. Shortly before his death, in June & Oct. 1917, testator contracted to purchase certain freehold properties in respect of which he paid deposits, leaving balances of the purchase-money owing to the respective vendors. On Dec. 23, 1917, testator made a final codicil, by which, after revoking the appointment of one of his exors. & bequeathing a legacy, he confirmed his will in all other respects. Testator died on Dec. 26, 1917, without having completed the purchases or paid the balances of the purchase-money, & shortly after his death his exors. completed the purchases & paid the balances of the purchase-money; whereupon the question arose whether, as between the persons claiming under testator's will, those balances ought to be borne by the freehold properties of testator in respect of which same were payable, or ought to be satisfied out of his residuary estate :—Held : (1) inasmuch as a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money differs essentially from a mtge., even in the modern & wider sense of that term, upon the true construction of the will in the absence of any context enlarging the meaning of the term "mtge.," the balances of the unpaid purchase-money owing at testator's death were not "sums of money secured on mtge.," & no contrary intention was signified by the direction in the will to pay & discharge such sums out of testator's residuary estate, so as to exclude the operation of 1854 Act, which by virtue of 1867 Act, s. 2, extends to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money; with the result that the balances in question ought to be borne by & satisfied out of the freehold properties in respect of which same were payable, & the devisees thereof were not entitled to have those balances discharged out of testator's residuary estate; (2) the confirmation of the will by the last codicil thereto, although executed after the mtge. on testator's freehold property had been paid off & after the vendor's lien had arisen, had not the effect of extending the meaning of the words "any sums of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold & leasehold properties," so as to include the balances of unpaid purchase-money in question.—Re BEIRNSTEIN, BARNETT v. BEIRNSTEIN, [1925] Ch. 12; 94 L. 5620a. Special fund for payment of debts—"Contrary or other intention"—Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 35.]—The provision by testator in his will of a special fund, not being any of the funds mentioned in sect. 35 (2) of the above Act, for payment of his debts operates as the expression of a "contrary or other intention" within the sect., so as to exonerate, as between the different persons claiming through testator, a personalty fund which at testator's death was subject to a mtge. from the primary liability to discharge it; but the fund is only exonerated to the extent that the special fund is available for discharging the mtge. debt, &, in so far as it is inadequate, the mortgaged property remains primarily liable.—Re FEGAN, FEGAN v. FEGAN, [1928] 1 Ch. 45; 97 L. 5654a. —— —— To revert to residue on death of legatee.]—By his will, testator bequeathed a legacy of £16,000 to trustees for his daughter A. during her life & after her death directed that the legacy should revert to & be added to his general residuary personal estate & go as the same was bequeathed by his will. Testator then gave his general residuary personal estate to B. Testator devised his estates in certain places to other trustees as a fund for the discharge of his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses & his pecuniary legacies in aid of his personal estate, with power to his trustees, if they thought it expedient or necessary either before or after his residuary personal estate should be exhausted to raise money for those purposes by sale or mortgage & subject thereto upon trust for B., in fee. The personal estate of testator was insufficient for the payment of his debts & legacies, & B. supplied such deficiency, including the annual payments to A. in respect of her legacy. A. survived both testator & B. On the death of B., the question arose whether, as testator's personalty was insufficient for the payments before mentioned, testator intended that the corpus of the legacy should be raised out of the real estate devised to B. for the benefit of B., who was testator's residuary legatee :—Held : the words " revert to & be added to my general residuary estate " in the will, showed that the testator meant the legacy to be restored to the funds from which it was taken ; & it was not to be taken from the real estate merely for the purpose of augmenting the personal estate.—Re SOMERSET (DUKE), THYNNE v. ST. She then gave several legacies, payable out of her own personal estate, & other legacies payable out of an unappointed moiety of her brother's personal estate, after the decease of his widow, & she directed the duty on all the foregoing legacies to be paid out of her personal estate, & if deficient for full payment either of duty or legacies, such deficiency was to be made good out of the real estate, on which she charged same. 5917b. —— —— —— —— ——.]—A testator by his will, after directing his executors to pay all legacies free of estate duty & to pay out of his estate any duty which might become payable on any gift made before his decease & after bequeathing certain legacies & annuities & the use & benefit of two freehold cottages, directed them to collect the income from the remainder of his estate & to pay 75 per cent. thereof to E. H. during her life & on her death the income of the whole of the estate to be invested for the benefit of the children of M. & A. on their attaining the age of twenty-one years, & if there should be no children then the whole of the accumulated funds was to be divided between two named charities. Testator died on Mar. 12, 1929. It having been held upon the originating summons that, in consequence of the will having been attested by the husband of E. H., the 75 per cent. share of the income of the residuary estate was undisposed of by the will, until the death of E. H. or the birth of a child to either M. or A., the question then arose whether testator's funeral, testamentary & administration expenses, debts & liabilities other than the estate duty in the will mentioned ought to be paid primarily out of such undisposed of income or out of the corpus of his estate:—Held: (1) the "real & personal" estate of a deceased person made assets for the payment of his debts by Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 32 (1), include the share of income of testator's residuary estate accruing after his death as to which he died intestate; (2) that property "undisposed of by will," made by sect. 34 (3), Sched. I., Part II., para. 1, of that Act the primary fund for payment of the expenses, debts, & liabilities mentioned in that subsect. includes a share of future income of residuary estate which lapses by reason of the statutory inability of the legatee to take under the will; (3) upon the proper construction of the will & the sub-sect. there was no provision for payment of the funeral, testamentary, & administration expenses, debts, & liabilities, with the result that those expenses & the debts & liabilities, except the estate duty in the will mentioned, must be paid primarily out of the share of income which lapsed & any other property undisposed of by the will.—Re TONG, HILTON v. BRADBURY, [1931] 1 Ch. 202; 100 L. Testator died on Aug. 15, 1928, & was at his death entitled, subject to the effect of the provisions of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), to two equal ninth shares of certain freehold property comprised in his father's residuary estate, & to one equal fourth part of certain freehold minerals purchased by him. He also owned the entirety of certain other freehold property. The residuary gift of personalty lapsed as regards three equal seventh parts owing to the death of two legatees in the testator's lifetime: — Held: testator by directing that his debts should first be paid out of the residue before division amongst the residuary legatees had shown an intention that in regard to the lapsed shares of residue the order of administration prescribed by Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), Sched. Testator died on Aug. 1, 1928, & his exors., in pursuance of the directions contained in the will, carried on his business, until Feb. 1, 1929, when, testator's tenancy of the business premises being about to expire, they removed the business to other premises, a lease of which was shortly afterwards granted to deft. alone, of which lease to deft. pltfs. did not become aware until a few weeks after the grant thereof, when deft. claimed the right to hold the lease of the new premises for his own benefit, to exclude pltfs. from the new premises & to set up & carry on his own account a business similar to & in competition with testator's business. Deft. having, since the issue of the writ in the action, assigned the lease of the new premises to B. & the goodwill of the business also having been assigned to her, it became no longer necessary to grant any of the relief claimed & necessary to determine only whether deft. was entitled at the date of the issue of the writ to the right which he then claimed, for the purpose of deciding how the costs of the action ought to be borne:—Held: (1) in face of the claim made by deft. to the benefit of the lease, pltfs. were justified in bringing the action; (2) having regard to the special nature of the business of a yacht broker which necessarily involved competition between every individual broker with all the others, it would have been a breach by deft. of his fiduciary duty towards the beneficiaries under the will, if he had at the date of the issue of the writ set up on his own account an independent business of a yacht broker in competition with pltfs., carrying on their testator's business; with the result that deft. must pay all the costs of the action.—Re THOMSON, THOMSON v. ALLEN, [1930] 1 Ch. 203; 99 L. 6014a. —— ——.]—Testator devised & bequeathed to trustees estate A. & also all & singular his freehold & leasehold estates & effects in H. & W. together with the steam engines & machinery, money in hand, etc., together with all & singular other his real & personal estates & effects, upon trust, that his trustees, etc., should carry on his cotton manufactory in the best & most proper manner they possibly could & he empowered them to retain as much ready money, as a capital in the business, as by them might be considered necessary, with full power to carry on the same, & to keep the whole in good repair, & to renew the machinery: & directed that at the end of every twelve months next after his decease, provided his daughters L. & E. were living, the profits, if any, & the surplus income from his H. & W. estates, after paying certain annuities, after retaining a sufficient capital to carry on the manufactory, should be equally divided between his two daughters, share & share alike; but if his trustees were not inclined to carry on the cotton manufactory, he empowered them to let the same, when he directed the reserved capital to be immediately divided between his two daughters L. & E. share & share alike: & he further directed that the surplus rents of his H. & W. estates, after paying the annuities, were to be equally divided every twelve months after his decease between such two daughters, share & share alike. He directed his trustees to allow his daughter E. to receive all the rents, etc., of his estate A. for her life & declared that at her death her issue were to be entitled to such estates, but if she left no issue then such estates were to go to his daughter L. & if she should then be dead, having left issue, such issue were to take; he then gave to L. an annuity of £600 during her life, & charged the same on all his real & personal estates in H. & W. & bequeathed the same at her death to her issue equally: &, if she should die without leaving lawful issue, his daughter E. if she should be living, was to take the annuity of £600 & the whole of the surplus rents, etc., of his H. & W. estates, both real & personal: & if neither of his daughters left issue, the whole of his estates, both real & personal, were to go to R. H. for life, with remainder to his issue, remainder to his heir at law. L. & E. survived testator: E. & L. both died without issue:—Held: (1) the representatives of L. & E. were absolutely entitled, in equal shares, to all such personal estate as was situate in H. & W. & which was not retained by the trustees as capital for carrying on the manufactory; (2) on the death of the survivor of E. & L. without leaving issue, the whole of testator's personal estate described in his will as situate in H. & W. consisting of his leasehold estate & the manufactory, & the capital retained by the trustees for carrying on the business, subject to the trusts declared in favour of R. He also directed that all his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & the "costs, charges & expenses of carrying into effect the trusts of his said will," should be paid out of the capital of said business:—Held: (1) the widow was entitled for life or until her second marriage, to the whole of the profits made by such business after testator's death; the cash at the banker's & the trade debts being assets or part of the capital of such business; (2) the debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & the costs of suit, etc., should be borne out of the capital of such business; testator having exonerated his residuary estate from any such or similar charges.—DIXON v. DUTFIELD (1862), 5 L. 6053a. Effect of Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 39.]—The expression " personal representatives " in the Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 39, does not include trustees in the ordinary sense, even when the personal representatives themselves become trustees upon an assent. The introductory words of sect. 39, conferring powers on personal representatives " during a minority of any beneficiary or the subsistence of any life interest, or until the period of distribution arrives," are explained by the fact that under the new law of intestate succession the existence of an infant beneficiary or of a beneficiary, such as a widow, entitled to a life interest only may postpone distribution, & that in these cases sect. 33 places the personal representatives substantially in the position of trustees. The provision in sect. 39 (1) (ii), conferring on personal representatives " all the powers, discretions & duties conferred or imposed by law on trustees holding land upon an effectual trust for sale " does not operate referentially to make Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), applicable to pure personalty. Accordingly, where under the will of a testator unauthorised investments are retained under a power to postpone conversion, the rule laid down in Howe v. Lord Dartmouth (1802), 7 Ves. 137a, still remains applicable in regard to the income payable to a tenant for life.—Re TROLLOPE'S WILL TRUSTS, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. TROLLOPE, [1927] 1 Ch. 596; 96 L. Being unable to effect a sale of a certain dwelling-house property which upon its conversion into money would form part of the residuary estate, the exors. leased it for 16 months, reserving to themselves the right to determine the lease if they should wish to sell. A few weeks later they & the tenant entered into an agreement, called an " option to purchase," under which he made a cash payment & agreed to make monthly payments thereafter in addition to rent, & which also provided that on $1,000 being thus paid, or at any sooner time, he would be entitled to a conveyance, the amounts so paid as well as the rent to be credited on the purchase price, & the balance to be secured by mtge. payable in monthly payments. The " option " was stated to be irrevocable within the time for " acceptance " thereof, but was to remain in force only so long as the purchaser remained tenant of the property, & payment of $1,000 at any time during the continuance of the agreement, was to constitute the " acceptance " of the option :—Held : a sale within the power given by the will.—CLOSE v. MCMEANS, [1931] 3 W. 6770a. Negligence.]—A co. was formed for the purpose of buying the business of a firm of bill brokers, & by the memorandum of assocn. the directors were empowered to buy it upon such terms & under such stipulation as to guarantee or otherwise as might be agreed upon. The prospectus referred to the memorandum of assocn. & to a certain deed of covenant. By that deed the business was assigned to the co., & all accounts, except such as the directors should require to be reserved & excepted, were to be carried on by the co., & the partners in the business guaranteed that all debts due to the firm & taken over by the co. were good. By a second deed of the same date, not mentioned or disclosed to the shareholders, assets of the firm to the nominal value of £4,213,896 were reserved & excepted, & provisions were made for guaranteeing payment by the partners of the balance which, after a certain period & under certain arrangements, should not be got in on this account. The co. carried on business for some time, & then stopped payment. A bill was filed by the co. against the living directors & the exors. of a deceased director stating these facts, & that the co. had lost £1,500,000 by taking the liabilities of the business, & by the insufficiency of the guarantee, & charged that the directors had been guilty of a breach of duty in buying the business without obtaining the sanction of a general meeting, & in not taking mtges. on the property of the partners in order to secure the guarantee, but no fraud was charged

The partition was built, pltf. contributed the $1,000 & the lessees went into possession. H. died in Jan. 1923, & his wife, deft. A. & deft. co., the executors named in the will, obtained probate thereof. In Oct. 1923, M. made an assignment in bkpcy. & deft. co. was appointed custodian of the bkpt. estate. Pltf.'s claim in this action was to recover a large sum made up of rent, taxes, cost of repairs & interest. D. died, & at the time of his death was under contract with the purchaser of the adjoining house, No. 11, to erect a garden fence for him & to give him a similar right of way to his garden. Pltf. entered No. 10 shortly after the death of D. & a few days later H., a sub-contractor, on the orders of W., the builder of the houses, erected the fence at the back of No. 11 so as to constrict the right of way granted by D. to pltf. Pltf. sued defts., the exors. of D. as exors., & by his amended statement of claim founded his action (a) in breach of covenant, & (b) in nuisance, but it was argued solely as an action of tort. These facts being proved by pltf., defts. called no evidence, & there was no evidence of the contract of D. with W., the builder. Deft., as sole exor. of testatrix, employed to wind up her estate a solr. who, unknown to him, had at one time been suspended from practice, & who obtained from the first pltf. the Post Office Savings Bank deposit book & the Savings Certificates. Deft. heard for the first time of the solr.'s suspension three months later, when the first pltf. told him of it. Under deft.'s written authority, a warrant valued at £62 4*s.* had been issued in favour of the solr.'s firm, & the first pltf. wrote to deft. objecting to his having taken that course. Later, the first pltf. asked deft. to employ another solr., but deft. did not do so, as the solr. was then promising to settle the matter. Ultimately the solr. absconded, & the sums of £14 14*s.* 5*d.* & £62 4*s.* were not recovered. Counsel's fees—Estate of deceased solicitor.]—Counsel has no right to prove for his fees in the administration of the insolvent estate of a deceased solr. in a case where the client reimbursed the solr. the amount of the fees upon the faith of the solr.'s false representation that he had in fact paid them to counsel. Further, as the exor. of a deceased solr. is not, as a trustee of a bkpt.'s property is, an officer of the ct., the rule followed by the Ct. of Bkpcy. that the ct. ought to be as honest as other people will not be so extended as to give the ct. jurisdiction to order the exor. to refund fees to counsel. 74a. —— ——.]—Applts. were brought before a magistrate in Trinidad under sect. 5 of the French Guiana Extradition Ordinance of Trinidad charged with being fugitive criminals from French Guiana, where there is a penal settlement. At the hearing it was proved that they had each been convicted in France of a specified crime, & had each received a sentence of imprisonment which was unexpired. The magistrate made an entry in his magistrate's book against their names "extradition ordered." He did not, however, make, as he should have done, an order under Extradition Act, 1870 (c. 52), s. 10 (made applicable by sect. 5 of the Ordinance), for committal to await the Governor's warrant for surrender. Instead another magistrate, who had not heard the case, made a detention order under sect. 3 of the Ordinance, which section applies to suspected fugitives. Upon habeas corpus proceedings:—Held: the appellants should be released: (1) because under the terms of the extradition treaty with France they could be extradited only if the crimes of which they had been convicted were committed in French territory, & there was no evidence that that was so, nor was it necessarily involved in the convictions; (2) because sects. 11 & 12 of the local Summary Conviction Offences (Procedure) Ordinance did not make the entry in the magistrate's book equivalent to an order under Extradition Act, 1870 (c. 52), s. 10, & the irregularities with regard to the order signed prevented the detention of applts. from being warranted.—KOSSEKECHATKO v. A.-G. n i. —— ——.]—The Commonwealth of Australia having, by passing the Commonwealth Extradition Act, 1903, acted as a central legislature under the Extradition Act, 1870 (Imperial), may be assumed to have power to deal under the external affairs power of the Constitution with the rendition of fugitive offenders. If this is so, the effect of the Commonwealth Constitution Act upon the definition of "legislature" in Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69), s. 39, is to create an

Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69), s. 5, provides : " A fugitive when apprehended shall be brought before a magistrate. . . . If . . . such evidence is produced as . . . raises a strong or probable presumption that the fugitive committed the offence mentioned in the warrant . . . the magistrate shall commit the fugitive to prison to await his return " :—Held : in requiring, as a condition of committing an alleged fugitive, such evidence as raises " a strong or probable presumption " that he committed the offence, the sect. means such evidence as, if it remained uncontradicted at the trial, would entitle a reasonable jury to convict the alleged fugitive upon it.

Where, in proceedings under this sect., a magistrate has found that the evidence produced before him raises a strong or probable presumption that the alleged fugitive is guilty of the offence & has committed him, & the alleged exception to the definition so that it must now be read as meaning that the expression " legislatures," where there are local legislatures as well as a central legislature, means the central legislature only ; but, in respect of the Commonwealth of Australia, means the Parliament of the Commonwealth only when it has exercised its powers to deal with the surrender of fugitive offenders between the Commonwealth & other parts of His Majesty's dominions. The Commonwealth Service & Execution of Process Act, 1901, was not an exercise by the Commonwealth of any overriding powers which the Commonwealth possesses in respect of the subject-matter of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69).—Re MUNRO, [1935] N. n ii. —— Jurisdiction of States.]—For the purposes of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, Australia is one British possession. But within the several States, State judicial officers have authority under the law of the " possession " & so are competent to act under the provisions of that statute. A New Zealand warrant was brought to Australia & indorsed by a police magistrate for New South Wales under sect. 13 of Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881. Deft. was arrested under the warrant & was brought before a stipendiary magistrate at Sydney, who made an order reciting that he was satisfied, as required by sect. 14 of Fugitive Offenders Act, that the warrant was issued by a person having lawful authority to issue it & directing that the deft. be returned to New Zealand :—Held : the New South Wales magistrate had jurisdiction to order the return of deft. under sect. 14 of Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881.—MCARTHUR v. WILLIAMS (1936), 55 C. f (p. 891) i. ——.]—Objection was taken to the form of a warrant, as failing to show jurisdiction, since it did not show that M. was a fugitive offender & that he was charged with an offence to which the Act applied :—Held : this objection was unsustainable in view of the facts alleged in the warrant, & also because the Act did not require the warrant to state that the offence charged was an offence within the Act ; moreover, the warrant was merely one to apprehend, & had been endorsed in the manner provided by the Act.—IRISH FREE STATE v. LITTLE, [1931] I. st. Cancellation of warrant—Jurisdiction of High Court.]—Although Extradition Act, 1903, s. 15, empowers the Govt. of India & the local Govt. to stay proceedings taken under chap. III of the Act & to direct any warrant to be cancelled & accused released, this does not oust the jurisdiction of the High Ct. to interfere where action has not been taken under a valid warrant.—JAIPAL BHAGAT v. R. sb. Authentication of warrant & depositions.]—In proceedings before a magistrate under Fugitive Offenders' Act, 1881, the endorsed warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive bore the signature of a person who signed as a magistrate ; the signature was certified by the Acting British Resident of the locality. A witness before the magistrate gave evidence identifying the signature of the magistrate & of the Resident, & stated that the magistrate was de facto exercising jurisdiction. Depositions put before the magistrate bearing the endorsement " True Copy " were similarly signed, certified, & identified :—Held : both the warrant & the copy of the depositions were duly authenticated as required by Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, ss. 5, 29. —Re POUNDALL, Ex p. WILLIAMS (1931), 48 N. sd. Application of Order in Council—How proved.]—Promulgation of an Order in Council may be proved by the production of a copy of the Government Gazette containing the notice of proclamation of the Order in Council. The application of Fugitive Offenders' Acts, 1881 & 1915, to a Protected State by Order in Council, which is proclaimed in the London Gazette, may be proved as an Act of State by tendering a copy of such Gazette. An Order in Council of the State of Perak made the penal code of the Straits Settlements applicable in Perak " upon the publication thereof in the Gazette." A book containing such Order was in evidence before a magistrate & contained a note that the Order was published in the Perak Government Gazette of a certain date :—Held : this notification afforded prima facie evidence of the due publication of the penal code in the State of Perak since it fell within the terms of N.S.W. 44a. "Occupier" of factory.]—Resp. co. was charged, as occupier of a factory, which was subject to certain regulations made in pursuance of the Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 79, for the generation, transformation & distribution & use of electrical energy, with having neglected to observe a certain provision of the regulations, in that, certain work having to be done on a switchboard for high pressure situated in the power-station, the co. failed to make dead the switchboard, contrary to the requirements of the regulations, & that, in consequence of such neglect, a workman was killed. The work on the switchboard was being carried out by another co., & at the time of the accident the work had not yet been completed nor had the switchboard been handed over in working order to resp. co. The justices dismissed the charge, on the ground that in the circumstances resp. co. was not the occupier within the meaning of the Act at the time of the accident :—Held : (1) as the object of the switchboard was to control the distribution of extremely powerful electrical energy which came from resp. co.'s power-house, resp. co. was the occupier, within the meaning of the Act, & was therefore guilty of the offence with which it was charged ; (2) as the switchboard in question was not a "machine or implement moved by steam, water or other mechanical power," within sect. 142 of the Act of 1901, that sect. was of no avail to the resp. co.—TURNER v. COURTAULDS, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. 68a. —— ——.] — Resps., the occupiers of a factory, provided adequate guards for securely fencing the mill-gearing, & exhibited a notice prohibiting workmen from removing any guard without special instructions. The workmen removed nine guards for the purpose of setting the rollers, &, having replaced only eight of the guards, started the rollers. Owing to their neglect, one workman, who slipped & fell, was dragged into the coupling gear & was killed. An information against resps. under 1901 Act, s. 136, for neglecting to observe the provision of sect. 10 (1) (c) that the mill-gearing must be securely fenced, was dismissed, on the grounds that resps. had taken all adequate precautions by providing the necessary guards, & that it was the fault of the workmen that caused the accident :—Held : under sect. 10 it was the duty of resps. not merely to provide guards, but to fence the machinery securely, & as they had not performed this duty, the justices ought to have convicted them.—THOMAS v. BOLTON (THOMAS) & SON, LTD. The mill gearing consisted of a countershaft 12½ ft. from the ground to which a belt was attached, & the workman was injured in replacing the belt. The justices dismissed the charge, holding that the said mill gearing need not be fenced, as it was as safe as it would be if fenced :—Held : as the essential purpose of Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10 (1) (c), is to provide absolute safety, so far as fencing can provide it, it was clear that the sect. had been contravened, & the offence charged was, therefore, proved. —FINDLAY v. NEWMAN, HENDER & CO., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. Resps. had put up a notice in the factory as follows : " Do not put your hands in the machinery while it is in motion. Persons disregard this notice at their own risk." The pinion-wheels, although usually stopped, were occasionally allowed to remain in motion, for the purpose of greasing. The magistrate dismissed the charge, holding that the pinion-wheels were not dangerous parts of the machine unless in motion, when it was not usual for greasing to be done :—Held : as the wheels were dangerous parts of the machinery, they ought to have been securely fenced, despite the fact that greasing was not usually done while the machinery was in motion, as it cannot be assumed that every person will always exercise the necessary care. The offence charged was therefore proved.—CHASTENEY v. NAIRN (MICHAEL) & CO., LTD., [1937] 1 All E. R. 376 ; 81 Sol. Jo. 238 ; 35 L. G. R. 195, D. C.

72a. —— ——.] — An infant workgirl lost the ring finger of her right hand by accident arising out of & in the course of her employment. She received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for a time, & then accepted £20 in purported settlement on the promise by the employer to re-employ her. No memorandum of this agreement was recorded. She worked at this employment for five years, when, by reason of trade conditions, she was discharged. She then commenced an action against the employer for damages for personal injuries resultant from the employer's alleged breach of statutory duty to fence the machine. The action was tried by a judge alone, who found that the injury had been caused by the employer's breach of statutory duty to fence, & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. He, however, also found, having regard to the fact that the infant had received employment for five years after her accident under the agreement, that the agreement to accept compensation, though not registered, was for her benefit & therefore binding, with the result that the action was barred by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 29, of the Act. The infant appealed :—Held : (1) without deciding whether the agreement was for the infant's benefit or whether further proceedings might be taken under the Workmen's Compensation Act, the action for breach of statutory duty failed because, on the evidence, the machine was not a dangerous machine within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, & therefore there was no duty on the employer to fence it; (2) on the evidence, the accident was caused by the negligence of pltf., which was a complete defence to the action even if such negligence had only been of a contributory character.—HIGGINS v. HARRISON (1932), 25 B. 72b. ——— What amounts to "dangerous."]—Pltf. was employed by defts., a firm of brickmakers, & was being taught to drive a mechanical excavator. When going, as he was entitled to do, to the tool-box, he slipped & his leg was caught & severely injured by a wheel of the machine which was not cased or fenced. No negligence on the part of anyone was alleged. Pltf. claimed that the absence of fencing made the machine a dangerous machine, & claimed damages for breach of statutory duty:—Held: in considering whether machinery is dangerous, it must not be assumed that everybody will always be careful. A part of a machine is dangerous if it is a possible cause of injury to anybody acting in a way in which a human being may be reasonably expected to act in circumstances which may be reasonably expected to occur. In the circumstances the part of the machine complained of was a dangerous one within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10.—WALKER v. BLETCHLEY FLETTONS, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. R. 170.

76a 1. ——— ———.]—Defts. were the occupiers of a factory. A workman in their employment, following his daily duties, climbed up a ladder to the shafting in the dye-house to fix a belt on a pulley, & was caught in the shafting, whirled round & killed. No one actually saw the occurrence, but, as portions of deceased's clothing were on the shaft, they probably got caught in it. An information against defts. charged that, contrary to Factory & Workshop Act, 1901, s. 10 (1) (c), a part of the mill gearing, namely, a line of shafting, was neither securely fenced nor in such a position nor of such construction as to be equally as safe to every person employed or working in the factory as if it had been securely fenced. The justices dismissed the information, but stated a case for the opinion of the K. B. D.:—Held: defts., in failing to fence the line of shafting, had contravened Factory & Workshop Act, 1901, s. 10 (1) (c), & should be convicted.—MINISTRY OF LABOUR FOR NORTHERN IRELAND v. COWDY & SONS, [1929] N. A workman was injured while testing the machinery of the saw in a manner which was held to be the direct cause of the accident. In an action for damages for personal injuries it was argued on behalf of the workman that, in order to prevent him from obtaining compensation based upon a breach of a statutory duty, there must be contributory negligence on the part of the workman limited to acts done in breach of some order or done outside the ambit of his employment :—Held : the negligence of a workman which would prevent him from obtaining compensation based upon a breach of a statutory duty was negligence of the ordinary kind, & as the workman had been negligent in the present case he could not recover.—CRAZE v. MEYER-DUMORE BOTTLERS' EQUIPMENT CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. 98a. Duty to keep in repair & free from obstruction —Part of factory in occupation of lessee.]—[supply of mechanical power referred to in Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 149 (1), is not limited to the case of supply by the owner of the building, & there is no reason to read into the sub-sect. after the word " supplied " the words " by the owner."

X. owned a building which was a factory where more than forty persons were employed, & carried on business as a shirt manufacturer in the basement & on the ground & first floors. The second floor was unoccupied. The third & fourth floors were let to Y., who carried on business there as a blouse manufacturer, employing more than forty persons. The factory of X. & that of Y. were respectively worked by separate & distinct electric motors, driven by electricity generated & supplied by the electricity undertaking of a municipal corpn. & each factory had a separate meter. Without this supply of electricity the electric motors could not be driven :—Held : mechanical power, namely, electrical current, was supplied to different parts of the same building within sect. 149 (1). Accordingly, as the building was a tenement factory, etc., the owner, was responsible under sect. 14 (6), (7) of the Act that the means of escape in case of fire provided throughout the factory, including the two floors occupied by Y., should be maintained in good condition & free from obstruction.—MUMBY v. VOLP, [1930] 1 K. 138b. —— ——.]—A workman in a ship in dock fell through a hatchway of which the fencing had become loose & was injured. He was employed in replacing the insulation on refrigerator pipes, & his employers were in no way connected with either of defts. He sued the stevedores working on the hatch, & the owners, for negligence & breach of their statutory duty to light the ship efficiently & to fence the hatchway while it remained open. The Factory & Workshop, Dangerous & Unhealthy Industries Regulations, 1934, reg. 12, provides that decks where work is being done must be efficiently lighted when "processes," which include unloading, are being carried on. Defts. contended that the "process" was finished when the hatchways had been fenced in accordance with the regulations; & also that pltf., who was not engaged in any of the processes, was not within the benefit of reg. 37, which provides for the fencing of hatchways:—Held: (1) the process of unloading continues until all the hatch covers have been replaced; (2) on the authority of Manchester Ship Canal Co. v. Director of Public Prosecutions, No. 138a, the effect of Docks Regulations, 1925, was to protect any workman employed in the ship even if not employed on any of the processes & the 1934 Regulations did not withdraw this protection.—HAWKINS v. THAMES STEVEDORE CO., LTD. & UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. -.]—Pltf., employed as a labourer, was assisting in the unloading of timber from defts.' ship. Having finished unloading one kind of timber, a different skid was required to unload the next kind. It was suggested to pltf. that a suitable skid was to be found in the after part of the ship & he proceeded there in search of one. In a badly lighted part of the deck space he fell down an open hatch & was injured. It was contended for defts. that there was no invitation to pltf. to go to the part of the ship where the accident happened. Pltf. relied upon a breach of the regulations made under the Factory & Workshops Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 79, namely, that in breach of reg. 12 (c) the deck space was insufficiently lighted & in breach of reg. 37 (a) the hatch was insufficiently fenced. The only fence in the present case was some distance from the hatch & in any event of an insufficient height:—Held: (1) pltf. was an invitee & was entitled to recover; (2) in the above reg. 12 (c) "required to proceed" does not necessarily mean ordered to proceed; but includes any place where a workman might properly go for ropes, slings, skids, etc.; (3) in the above reg. 37 (a) "accessible" means accessible without reasonable let or hindrance & the "fence" is a fence situated in close proximity to a single hatch.—HENAGHAN v. REDERIET FORANGIRENE, [1936] 2 All E. 138d. Hatch covering not strengthened—Docks Regulations, 1934.]—Five stevedores were loading a ship, &, following instructions given to them by the hatch foreman, a servant of deft. co., placed 49 tons of iron upon a between-deck hatch covering. The hatch covering collapsed & pltfs. fell into the hold & were injured. The claim in negligence was barred by the doctrine of common employment, & reliance was placed upon a breach of statutory duty imposed by Docks Regulations, 1934, regs. 36, 38, made under Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22). Reg. 36 requires a deck-stage or cargo-stage to be substantially constructed, & reg. 38 provides that no cargo shall be loaded or unloaded by a fall or sling at any intermediate deck unless either the hatch at that deck is securely fastened or a secure landing platform has been placed across it:—Held: (1) the ct. was bound by the dictum of SCRUTTON, L.J., in Hillen & Pettigrew v. I.C.I. (Alkali), Ltd., to hold that the hatch of a ship is not a deck-stage or cargo-stage within the meaning of that word in reg. 36; (2) the placing of the weight of iron upon the hatch coverings when they were not so strengthened & reinforced as to be capable of bearing the weight imposed upon them was a breach of reg. 38; (3) reg. 38 imposes a duty upon the shipowner & does not impose a duty upon the persons employed in the process of loading or unloading. It could not, therefore, be said that pltfs. were guilty of any breach of statutory duty.—HANLON v. PORT OF LIVERPOOL STEVEDORING CO., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. R. 39.

q 1. —— Defective hoist—Liability of scaffolding firm.]—A scaffolding firm were employed by builders to erect a hoisting machine for use in the construction of a building which the builders were erecting. The scaffolding firm erected the machine & handed it over to the builders. It was not used until after it was handed over; when it collapsed, owing to defects in its construction, causing injuries to certain workmen:—Held: the scaffolding firm were guilty of an offence under para. 4 (a) of the Building (Amendment) Regs., 1931, in respect that a duty of compliance with the Regs. was imposed upon them as well as upon the builders; & the fact that the Regs. applied only to premises in which machinery was "temporarily used" did not preclude the commission of an offence under para. 4 (a) before the date on which the machine was brought into actual use.—SCAFFOLDING (GREAT BRITAIN), LTD. v. STHERN, [1936] S. machinery. By sect. 105 the provisions of the Acts with respect (inter alia) to fines in respect of death or injury are applicable as if any premises on which machinery worked by steam, water, or other mechanical power is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building or any structural work in connection with a building were included in the word "factory," & as if the person who by himself, his agents or workmen, temporarily uses any such machinery for the before-mentioned purpose were the occupier of a factory. The Secretary of State, in pursuance of s. 79, made certain regulations casting upon employers of workmen the duty of fencing floor-openings with a suitable guard rail & toe board or other efficient means:—Held: (1) the words "temporarily used" are not confined to the actual moment when the machinery is in use, but extend to the whole period during which the machinery is available for use in the constructional work, & therefore that persons who had brought such machinery upon the premises were liable to conviction as the occupiers of a factory in respect of the death of a workman who fell through an unfenced shaft at a time when the mechanical hoist for which the shaft was made was not in use; (2) the words "employers of workmen" imposed upon sub-contractors, engaged in laying floors in a building in course of erection, liability in respect of the death of one of their workmen who fell through an unguarded well hole which the sub-contractors had left for a staircase in the construction of which the sub-contractors were not concerned.—BARNETT v. CAXTON FLOORS, LTD., BUTLER v. KLEINE PATENT FIRE RESISTING FLOORING SYNDICATE, LTD. 153b. —— Electric crane.]—By para. 31 of the Building Regulations, 1926, made under Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), which apply to all premises on which machinery worked by steam, water or other mechanical power is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building: "Any part of the premises in which any person is habitually employed shall be covered in such a manner as to protect any person who is working in that part from being struck by any falling material or article."

Pltf., a bricklayer, having been struck while at work on a building under reconstruction by bricks falling from a higher floor & thereby injured, claimed damages for negligence, as having been due to the breach of a statutory regulation—namely, para. 31 set out above. The county ct. judge dismissed the action on the ground that the scaffolding where the accident happened having only been in position for a day & a half, neither pltf. nor any other person was habitually employed there. On appeal:—Held: (1) "mechanical power" includes an electric crane; (2) the regulation assumed that workmen would have to move about from one part of the premises to another & imposed a duty upon the employers to afford protective cover against falling material in all parts of the building where it might be required, for the benefit of any person who might be working there. Pltf. was therefore entitled to recover damages for his injury.—KEARNS v. GEE, WALKER & SLATER, LTD., [1937] 1 K. B. 187; [1936] 3 All E. R. 151; 106 L. J. K. B. 16; 155 L. T. 519; 52 T. L. 180b. —— Extensive building site—House on site completed.]—Injuries were sustained by two workmen in the employ of resps., who were contractors engaged in the erection of a number of houses on a large area of unenclosed land. At one point on the building site was a mortar mill driven by a petrol engine, & there was also on the site a concrete mixer on wheels, which was moved about the site as occasion required. In the first case the workman injured himself while working on the roof of a house which had almost been completed. The mortar mill was 100 yds. distant from the house, & was not within its curtilage or precincts. In the second case the accident occurred in a completed house from which the mortar mill was 25 yds. & the concrete mixer about 400 yds. distant; neither of these machines had any connection with the accident. In both cases the workmen were disabled for more than three days, but resps. did not send written notice to the inspector of the district. Informations for failing to give notice were preferred against resps. under the Notice of Accidents Act, 1906 (c. 53), as amended by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42). The justices dismissed both informations:—Held: (without deciding whether an extensive building site may be a "factory" within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 105 (1)), the question of the extent of "premises on which machinery . . . is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building" was one of degree & therefore of fact; & the justices had not misdirected themselves in holding that a house on such a site, when completed, or nearly completed, became a separate set of premises, which could not be deemed to be a "factory" within the Act.—PEASE v. SIMMS (W. 264b. ——.]—By order dated Mar. 3, 1897, the Secretary of State exempted from the provisions of Truck Act, 1896 (c. 44), persons engaged in the weaving of cotton in the county of Lancashire. Resp., a weaver of cotton in Lancashire employed by applts., was negligent in performing certain work &, in accordance with a custom which had long existed in the Lancashire trade, the employers deducted a reasonable sum from the "standard list" rates of wages which had been agreed between the employers' & workers' organisations, as the remuneration for good, merchantable cloth, & paid her the balance as her wages:—Held: this deduction was not illegal as being in contravention of the Truck Acts.—HART v. RIVERSDALE MILL CO., [1928] 1 K. 264c. ——.]—Pltf. was a weaver in defts.' employment & his wages were calculated on the amount & kind of cloth woven in each week in accordance with a uniform list of prices agreed between the employer's & workmen's unions. According to the list of prices, pltf. became entitled for the week ending Aug. 1, 1928, after agreed deduction to a sum of £2 5*s.* 0½*d.*, but defts. only paid him £2 4*s.* 0½*d.*, claiming the right to deduct 1*s.* in respect of three yards of cloth woven with a fault rendering them unmerchantable. The evidence showed that it had been the practice of the mill for many years to make deductions for work not done with reasonable care & skill, the deductions not exceeding in amount the loss sustained by the employers & often not being exacted. A similar usage existed in the bulk of the mills carrying on the Lancashire weaving trade, though some of the mill owners were trying to do without deductions:—Held: this practice was not rendered illegal by the Truck Act, 1831 (c. 37), s. 3, as it did not involve a deduction for bad work from ascertained wages, but a deduction for bad work made in calculating the wages.—SAGAR v. RIDEHALGH (H.) & SON, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 310; 100 L. Pltf. subsequently sued to recover this amount on the ground that the pay ment to the W. co. was a contravention of the Truck Act:—Held: payment in such circumstance was not a contravention of Truck Act. The father ceased to be employed by resps., but remained tenant of the house, in which he lived with his family including applt. The father failed to pay the rent for the house, & resps. deducted the rent from applt.'s wages, applt. signing a written consent to the deduction in order to save the family from eviction. Applt. brought an action to recover sums amounting to £37 15*s.* 4*d.*, which he alleged were illegally deducted :—Held : he was entitled to recover the sum claimed as the deductions were illegal, null & void under Truck Act, 1831 (c. 37), ss. 2, 3.—PENMAN v. FIFE COAL CO., LTD., [1936] A. One was an application to defts. to allot to her a number of shares in deft. co. The other contained (inter alia) a request that " you [the co.] should deduct from my wages each week & allocate towards payment for my shares the following amounts. . . . Similar applications & requests were later made in respect of further shares. For some weeks pltf. received her net wages in coin & an envelope containing the share subscription in coin, which was immediately handed back to defts. Thereafter pltf. was handed only the net amount & a receipt for the deductions made. Pltf. sued to recover the amount of her wages which had been applied in payment of shares. Defts. counterclaimed the amount due in respect of unpaid instalments of shares :—Held : (1) the agreement that deductions should be made from pltf.'s wages was illegal under Truck Acts, & pltf. was entitled to recover the sum claimed, there being no distinction between the two methods employed for the deductions ; (2) the agreement to take & pay for shares was not severable from the illegal agreement relative to deductions, & the counterclaim failed.—KENYON v. DARWEN COTTON MANUFACTURING CO., LTD., [1936] 2 K. Pltfs., the county council, owned land adjoining one of the approaches & built a school on it. Defts. denied pltfs.' right to free access to the school over the approach :—Held : as the old highway consisted of the approaches to the ferry plus the passage across the river, & the substituted highway consisted of the approaches to the bridge plus the bridge, & as the old approaches were highways to which owners would be entitled to access, the substituted approaches were highways by which adjoining owners had similar rights of access, & defts.' claim was ill founded.—YORKSHIRE, EAST RIDING, COUNTY COUNCIL v. SELBY BRIDGE CO. Extent of right—Whether exclusive right of ferry—Construction of Act.]—By a private Act pltfs. were empowered to make & maintain a motor road from South Haven Point in the parish of Studland in the county of Dorset to a public road leading from Studland to Swanage. By sect. 56 of the Act they were empowered to establish, maintain, work & use a ferry service for passengers, animals, vehicles & goods between the Sandbanks & South Haven Point within Poole Harbour. By sect. 62, passed for the protection of the Poole Harbour Comrs., pltfs. were required to establish or acquire & thereafter continuously work the ferry by means of a vessel propelled by steam on a chain cable system, & by sects. 62, 97, passed for the benefit of certain landowners, they were required to provide from seven o'clock in the forenoon when summer time should be in force & from eight o'clock in the forenoon at all other times of the year until one hour after sunset on every day a minimum hourly service of vessels from each shore. The two sects. contained provisions

71a. Exemption from tolls—Crown.]—By a local Act of Parliament private landowners were authorised to establish & maintain a ferry service at Torpoint, Cornwall, across the river Tamar, & to charge tolls for its use. Avoidance of the tolls by the running of any boat service for hire in competition with the ferry was penalised by the Act, but officers & other servants of His Majesty were exempted from this provision, & their vessels were allowed free passage between the points served by the ferry. By another sect. of the Act, the ferry owners & their successors were exempted from the payment of rates & taxes in respect of the ferry. By Ferries (Acquisition by Local Authorities) Act, 1919 (c. 75), deft. council became the owners of the Torpoint ferry. Upon a summons to determine what, if any, officers, men, or other persons in His Majesty's service were entitled to be borne free of charge or toll, by the Torpoint ferry : —Held : the Crown's general prerogative of exemption from the payment of tolls cannot be deemed to have been abandoned by implication, in respect of tolls created by any Act of Parliament, either (a) by reason merely of the specific exemption in such Act of any class of His Majesty's servants from the payment of tolls, nor (b) from the fact that the Crown has foregone or curtailed its rights in any other direction (e.g. that of imposing taxation) elsewhere in such Act.—A.-G. v. CORNWALL COUNTY COUNCIL (1933), 97 J. In an action of trespass for this arrest, defts. gave much evidence to show that P.'s fishery included the place where the pltf. was apprehended. The jury, however, defined the limits of the fishery so as to exclude that place by a few yards; but they also found that P. & defts. believed that it included that place:—Held : defts. were entitled to the protection of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, ss. 35 & 63.—HUGHES v. BUCKLAND (1846), 15 M. & W. 346; 3 Dow. & L. 702; 15 L. Defts. carried on the business of beet sugar manufacturers at a factory abutting on the Ouse some miles above pltf.'s fisheries. Pltf. alleged that in the course of defts.' manufacturing operations, & in particular from Sept. 1933, to Jan. 1934, following the beet harvest, large quantities of refuse & effluent were discharged from the factory into the river, & by reason of that he had suffered damage & his fisheries had been prejudicially affected. He claimed an injunction accordingly & damages. At the hearing evidence was also given as to injury to the fisheries between Sept. 1934, & Jan. 1935:—Held : disturbance of a several fishery is an invasion of a legal right, & in such a case it is not necessary to prove pecuniary loss, but the injury to the legal right carries with it the right to damages; but pltf. had failed to show that the injury to his fisheries had been caused by the acts of defts.—NICHOLLS v. ELY BEET SUGAR FACTORY, LTD., [1936] Ch. 343; 105 L. The owner of the fishing rights over that part of the river affected commenced an action for an injunction & damages against the owners of the gasworks:—Held : it was satisfactorily proved that the effluent from the gasworks was, on each occasion, the cause of the death of the fish, & pltf. was entitled to an injunction & damages.—GRANBY (MARQUIS) v. BAKEWELL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1923) 87 J. sr. Duty to erect grating in tail race of mill—Although banks of adjoining owner affected.]—Deft. was fined at petty sessions for failing to erect a grating or lattice across the tail race of his mill at a point where the tail race re-enters the river "F." The river "F." is a river in which there are salmon. For a certain distance before & at the point where the tail race re-enters this river it is bounded on both sides by lands that belong to an adjoining owner, & not to the deft., the owner of the mill. There was no grating or lattice on the tail race where it diverged from or re-entered the river; to construct the grating or lattice, it would be necessary to erect piers that would project into the banks, on the side of the tail race, the property of the adjoining owner. Deft. had started the necessary work of erecting the grating, but had abandoned it in consequence of the objection of the adjoining owner to any trespass on his lands. Deft. had the use of the tail race from the moment it left his own lands until it reached the river :—Held : deft. was under a statutory obligation by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 106, s. 76, to erect the grating even though it entailed an interference with the banks of the adjoining owner.—R. sw. Action against Crown servants—Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court.]—At Livingstone's Cove, Nova Scotia, is a breakwater owned by the resp., to provide a shelter for boats of shallow draught. In this cove suppliant had set a salmon trap net under licence from the Department of Marine & Fisheries. Dredging operations were being carried on in the vicinity of the breakwater by the Department of Public Works under the supervision & direction of one of its officers. The tug A., hired by resp., whilst moving a loaded scow to the dumping grounds came into contact with suppliant's net, seriously damaging the same. The action was to recover the value, or cost of repairing the net & the loss of the use thereof for about one month :—Held : the master & crew of the tug A., the crew of the scow, & the master & crew of the dredge were servants of the Crown employed upon a public work within sect. 19c of Exchequer Ct. Act, & the ct. had jurisdiction to hear & entertain the action. On the evidence, the net in question was not an interference to navigation within sect. 33 of Fisheries Act, 1927, & the master of the tug A., was negligent in moving the scow as & when he did; suppliant was entitled to damages for the injury caused to his net & damages for the loss of the use of his net.—MASON v. R., [1933] Ex. Stornoway was not the nearest port to the place where the direction was given, & the prosecutor made no attempt to prove that it was the most convenient port :—Held : the fact that a sea fishery officer directed accused to go to Stornoway raised a strong presumption that Stornoway was the most convenient port within Sea Fisheries Act, 1883, s. 12 (8); it was open to accused to rebut that presumption; &, as accused had not been allowed to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses on the question of convenience, it was impossible to hold that he ought to have been convicted.—MACKENZIE v. JINKS, [1934] S. r i. —— Grant of licence—Validity of regulations.]—Sect. 69A of the Fisheries Act provided, among other things: that, under licence from the Minister a vessel registered as a British ship in Canada & owned by "a Canadian or a Canadian co. with its principal place of business in Canada," is allowed to use an "otter" or other similar trawl. Moreover under this Statute, rules & regulations might be made by Order in Council, & the same were made providing that such licence could be granted only to "Canadian built" vessels, & that after Apr. 1932, none but such would be eligible for licence, & further providing that after Apr. 1, 1930, a licence fee of one cent a pound on the fish caught should be payable. This fee in the case of deft. would amount to between $130,000 to $150,000 a year :—Held : as the regulations ignore the statutory limitation to British ships registered in Canada or owned by a Canadian, etc., & fix as the condition upon which the licence would issue that such ships be Canadian built, & such condition being obviously beyond the scope of the Act, & the delegated powers, such regulations are ultra vires, unenforceable, null & void.—R. v. NATIONAL FISH CO., LTD., [1931] Ex. steam fishing boat, brought an action in the county ct. against deft., who was a member of the crew of the boat, claiming a sum as money lent by them to deft. Deft. alleged in defence that the sum claimed had been paid to him as wages; &, further, that the county ct. had no jurisdiction, the question between the parties being a dispute concerning wages within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 387, which could only be dealt with by a superintendent thereunder. At the trial it was found as a fact that the sum claimed had been lent to deft., & that there was no real dispute concerning wages: —Held: (1) the county ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action notwithstanding the section, inasmuch as that ct. had all along had jurisdiction to entertain an action for money lent & the section did not either expressly or by implication exclude that jurisdiction; (2) the jurisdiction of the superintendent under the sect. did not arise until a party to the dispute called him to decide it, & here no party had called upon him to do so.—STURLEY v. POWELL, [1930] 1 K. In each case the questions whether the master fairly & honestly on reasonable ground believed it necessary to take shelter, & whether he exercised reasonable skill, competence & courage in the circumstances, are questions of fact for the tribunal whose duty it is to find the facts.

(2) The Convention of Oct. 20, 1818, between Great Britain & the United States, respecting fisheries & boundary lines, did not apply to the Pacific waters so far as fisheries were concerned, & therefore could not be available as justification for the entry in question.—THE MAY v. R., [1931] S. h ii. —— ——.]—(1) To justify, as against incurrence of penalty under the Customs & Fisheries Protection Act, R. S. C., 1927, s. 10, a foreign fishing vessel entering Canadian territorial waters on the ground of "stress of weather," there must be such a condition of atmosphere & sea as would produce in the mind of a reasonably competent & skilful master, possessing courage & firmness, a well grounded bonâ fide apprehension that if he remains outside such waters he will put in jeopardy his vessel & cargo. A want of bona fides would abrogate any right or privilege to shelter given by the statute. Further, weaknesses in a vessel may be such, as instanced in certain respects in the present case, as, e.g., glass of inadequate thickness in pilot house windows a small height from the sea, constituting a special danger from waves, that any distress arising from them should be deemed a distress created by the owner or master himself.

(2) The Convention of Oct. 20, 1818, between Great Britain & the United States, respecting fisheries & boundary lines, has no application to Canadian territorial waters on the Pacific Coast, so far as fisheries are concerned. Applts. gave an order for drugs on an order form specifying that the goods were ordered on the condition that the suppliers warranted them to be of the nature, substance & quality described in the order. The suppliers placed their initials on the order form & in due course delivered the goods, retaining the order form in their own possession :—Held : the initialled order form was a written warranty within sect. 29 (1), notwithstanding that it did not come into the possession of applts. until after the prosecution had been instituted.—WOOLWORTH (F. 261a. —— Proceedings against previous seller—Previous analysis before proceedings against retailer.]—An inspector appointed under the Sale of Food & Drugs Acts bought a sample of ground ginger from a retail shop. He complied with the provisions of Food & Drugs (Adulteration) Act, 1928 (c. 31), s. 18, with regard to the division of the sample into three parts, delivering one part to the seller & having an analysis made. Upon analysis the ground ginger was found to contain an added preservative, contrary to the provisions of the Public Health (Preservatives, etc., in Food) Regulations, 1925. The retailer was convicted upon an information charging him with the sale of the ground ginger to the prejudice of the purchaser under Food & Drugs (Adulteration) Act, 1928 (c. 31), s. 2. Subsequently, proceedings were commenced against the previous seller of the ground ginger for wilfully neglecting to obey the Public Health (Preservatives, etc., in Food) Regulations, 1925, by selling the ground ginger to the retailer. No further sample was taken of the ground ginger & no further analysis made. No part of the sample that was taken in the first instance was sent to the previous seller of the ground ginger. The magistrate refused to convict on the ground that the provisions of sect. 18 of 1928 Act had not been complied with:—Held: the magistrate was wrong in holding that compliance with the formalities prescribed by sect. 18 of 1928 Act was a condition precedent to the institution of proceedings against the previous seller for a sale to which art. 7 of the Regulations of 1925 applied. When the formalities prescribed by sect. 18 of 1928 Act with regard to taking of sample, division & analysis had been complied with in proceedings as between the purchaser & the retailer, there was no necessity for those formalities to be repeated when proceedings were subsequently taken against the previous seller under art. 7 of the Regulations of 1925.—TWYNHAM v. BADCOCK, [1932] 2 K. 439a. Protection of employer under Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63)—When applicable.]—(1) Held: the language of Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 12 (2), has no relation & does not apply to a case where a defect of deft.'s machinery or a default of an employee under deft.'s control is the cause of the deficiency. This sub-sect. deals with the case where the deficiency is due to a bonâ fide mistake or accident or other causes beyond deft.'s control, that is to say, not with negligence or other conduct of deft.'s servants or other persons under his control. In such a case deft. may avail himself of the provisions of sect. 12 (5) if he satisfies the provisions of that sub-sect., by having any other person, including an employee, whom he charges as the actual offender, brought before the ct.

(2) On the question whether proceedings against defts. for contravening this sub-sect. were " proceedings under this Act in respect of an alleged deficiency of weight " within sect. 12 (2), whilst LORD HEWART, C.J., did not express a decided opinion, one way or the other, AVORY, J., expressed the view that proceedings under sect. 6 (2) of the Act were in respect of an alleged deficiency of weight, & TALBOT, J., expressed an opinion to the contrary.

(3) On proceedings against bakers under sect. 6 (2) of the Act defts. duly laid an information against one of their employees under sect. 12 (5); having him brought before the ct. as the actual offender & tendering evidence in order to prove that they had used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, & that their employee had committed the offence without their consent, connivance, or wilful default. At petty sessions, the information against the employee was dismissed, but defts. were convicted. Defts. appealed to Quarter Sessions:—Held: the Ct. of Quarter Sessions had no power to exempt defts. from any penalty under sect. 12 (5) on the ground (per LORD HEWART, C.J., & TALBOT, J.) that having regard to the fact that the employee had been acquitted at petty sessions, it was not open to defts. to contend at Quarter Sessions that the employee was wrongly acquitted, & on the ground (per AVORY, J.) that in any case on the facts the employee charged was not the actual offender within the sub-sect.—WALKLING, LTD. v. ROBINSON (1930), 99 L. 439b. —— —— Exercise of due diligence by employer—Question of fact.]—(1) Where an employer who is charged with an offence against the Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), brings another person before the ct. under sect. 12 (5), as being the actual offender, the question whether the employer has used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act is one of fact & not of law. (2) The result of compliance with sect. 12 (5) is that both the employer & the other person are convicted, but that the latter alone is liable to any penalty. (3) Qu.: whether in a case where the justices have convicted the employer & have refused to convict the actual offender, the employer may not appeal to quarter sessions. Walkling, Ltd. v. Robinson, No. 439a, is no authority to the contrary, since in that case the employee was found as a fact not to be the actual offender, & an appeal would have involved the allegation that he was wrongly acquitted.—HAMMETT (R. On appeal quarter sessions found that B.. the manager of the branch, had not exercised due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, but that in all other respects applts. had exercised due diligence. 439j. Comparison with other loaves—Reasonable number to be weighed.]—Two informations under Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 6 (2), were preferred against defts. (i.) for having in their possession for sale thirty-seven loaves of bread, the net weight of each loaf not being one pound or an integral number of pounds; (ii.) for selling a loaf of bread the net weight of which was not one pound or an integral number of pounds. Under the supervision of an inspector of weights & measures fifty-six loaves, purporting to be 2-lb. loaves, were taken from a considerably larger number in a cart from which defts.' vanman was delivering bread, & weighed. Nineteen proved to be either of correct weight or of a weight in excess of 2 lb., but thirty-seven were deficient in weight, & in the case of one loaf the deficiency amounted to 2 ozs. 4 drams. That loaf was purchased by the inspector. The justices dismissed both informations, on the ground that defts. were in each case protected by sect. 12 (1):—Held: on the first charge, with respect to each of the thirty-seven loaves, the justices were entitled to look at the average weight of a number of other loaves offered for the sale on the same occasion, but it was not possible for them to hold that thirty-six was not a reasonable number; but on the second charge, the variation from the proper weight in the case of the single article being clearly considerable, they ought not to have had regard to the average weight of other loaves sold, as that inquiry arose only where the variation was inconsiderable.—CAVE v. DUDLEY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY (1934), 103 L. It was contended that as the packages were correct in weight at the time of making up, four days earlier, they were "made up for sale" in the prescribed quantities, & that the offence of having in their possession for sale pre-packed articles of food not being made up in the quantities prescribed by the above sub-sect., had not been committed:—Held: "made up for sale" does not refer to the moment of making up only but to the moment of having in possession for sale, & resps. were guilty of the offence charged.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. ROYAL ARSENAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1936] 1 K. 476a. —— Necessity for registration in every district where business carried on.]—A person carrying on business as purveyor of milk must be registered under art. 6 of the Milk & Dairies Order, 1926, with the sanitary authority of each district in which he carries on business. It is not sufficient that he is registered with the sanitary authority of the district where his cowsheds & dairy are situated if he also carries on business in other districts where he has a regular milk round.—EASINGTON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. GILSON (1929), 142 L. m i. —— Relating to property in milk vessels.]—A dairyman, charged with contravening art. 12 of Milk & Dairies (Scotland) Order, 1925, maintained that the article was ultra vires of the Board, in respect that the Board was empowered to make Orders only for the purpose of ensuring the purity of milk, whereas the purpose of art. 12 was, not to ensure purity of milk, but to preserve the rights of property in milk vessels. It was stated for the complainer that the Board regarded the article as in the interests of public health, since it assisted the tracing of sources of infection:—Held: although art. 12 primâ facie appeared to be ultra vires as being directed solely to preserving rights of property in milk vessels, yet, since it was possible that further information might show that it did tend to ensure the purity of milk, the ct. could not decide, in these proceedings & on the information before it, that the article was ultra 476e. Sale of pasteurised milk at several shops in area—Necessity for licence for each shop.]—Milk (Special Designations) Order, 1923, made by the Minister of Health under Milk & Dairies (Amendment) Act, 1922 (c. 54), which provides for the grant of licences to sell milk under special designations, including pasteurised milk, in Sched. IV., sets out the following table of fees payable for licences : "Licence in respect of the establishment in which the process of pasteurising is carried on, & of any shop or other premises in the area of the same licensing authority from which the milk is sold—£1 1*s*." "Licence in respect of any other shop or other premises at or from which the milk is sold—5*s*." Pltfs., who carried on the sale of pasteurised milk at fourteen establishments in the area of the same licensing authority, claimed against the licensing authority a declaration that on the true construction of the above Order they were entitled to receive from the authority, on payment of the sum of 5*s*., a licence for the sale of pasteurised milk within the area :—Held : on the construction of the Order, a dealer's licence at a fee of 5*s*. must be obtained for each shop or premises at which the pasteurised milk is to be sold. The local authority is not authorised by the Order to grant a dealer in return for payment of one sum of 5*s*. a licence to sell at & from as many places as he may choose within the area.

Semble : if a preliminary objection had been taken in limine to the action on the grounds that a person aggrieved by the Order is confined, as regards his remedy, to an appeal to the Minister of Health under clause 9 (2) of the Order, & that the Minister of Health was not a party to the action, that objection would have succeeded, & the action would not have been maintainable.—UNITED DAIRIES (LONDON), LTD. v. HACKNEY BOROUGH COUNCIL (1934), 151 L. under the Milk Marketing Scheme (Approval) Order, 1933, empowers the Milk Marketing Board to impose fines on registered producers who sell milk under contracts not in the form prescribed in the Scheme. The Scheme further provides by para. 38 that the Board shall keep a register of producers, & by para. 40 (a) that producers who have in their possession not more than four milch cows, & who do not sell by retail shall be exempt from registration. By para. 41, the Board, on being satisfied that a person who is registered has ceased to be a producer or is exempt from registration, shall remove his name from the register, provided that the name of a person shall not, by reason only that he is exempt from registration, be removed from the register without his consent.

Deft., a farmer, was registered as a producer in 1933, at which time he possessed six milch cows. Later in that year he disposed of two of them, & thereafter never had in his possession more than four milch cows. In 1934 he entered into a contract for the sale of milk, not by retail, which contract was not in the prescribed form :—Held : the Board had power to impose a fine on deft., notwithstanding that at the date of the alleged offence he possessed not more than four milch cows, since he remained a registered producer until his name was removed from the register with his consent.—MILK MARKETING BOARD v. WILLIAMS (1935), 153 L. 476j. —— Right to recover costs of operating scheme—What amounts to.]—Applt. was liable as a registered producer & retailer of milk to contribute to the costs of operating the scheme contained in the Scottish Milk Marketing Scheme (Approval) Order, 1933, made under & in terms of Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), s. 1 (8), & administered by resps. Under the scheme, which came into operation on Dec. 1, 1933, resps. fixed a price for the sale of milk & realised the unmarketable surplus of milk by selling it in a cheaper market. In computing the costs of operating the scheme resps. included as a cost of operation the difference between the lower price received by them for the surplus milk & the price in the liquid market, upon which basis resps. sought to recover rateably from all registered members of the scheme, including applt., a charge or levy calculated at so much per gallon of milk disposed of by each member. Applt., when called upon to pay this charge or levy for each of the months of Dec. 1933, to July, 1934, inclusive, declined to do so, &, without disputing the arithmetical correctness of the sum claimed, contended that resps. had wrongly & illegally included in their computation of costs the amount of the alleged loss relating to the said sale of surplus milk, & that, as their method of computation & disposal of contributions provided a benefit to ordinary producers to the detriment of producers & retailers, they had acted ultra vires & contrary to the provisions of the scheme. Resps.' basis of computation was in accordance with a previous decision of the Second Division of the Ct. of Session in a recent special case to which applt. was not a party :—Held : the difference between the lower price received by resps. & the price in the liquid market was not a " cost " of operating the scheme ; & the contributions claimed from applt. being unauthorised by the scheme, resps. had acted ultra vires in respect that the disposal of the said contributions conferred a benefit upon the class of ordinary producers at the expense of the class of producers & retailers including applt. —FERRIER v. SCOTTISH MILK MARKETING BOARD, [1937] A. 476l. —— Explanatory leaflet—Whether warranty.] —The Milk Marketing Board was established under the Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), s. 6, & regulated by a scheme which was one of the Statutory Rules & Orders. The Board also issued an explanatory leaflet which contained (inter alia) the following : " In various parts of the country at the present time the producer-retailer is feeling the pinch of severe undercutting, & the stabilisation of the industry which will result from the operation of the scheme will end all his anxiety under this head since undercutting will be impossible." In an action to enforce certain levies under the scheme deft. set up that the above passage was a representation that undercutting would be stopped by the operation of the scheme & that the Board had failed to stop undercutting. He set this up as a defence upon the footing that the above statement was a warranty or agreement, & also as the basis of a counterclaim claiming damages for breach of duty :— Held : (1) if the passage amounted to a representation at all, it applied wholly to the future, & there was no representation as to any present fact that could be relied upon in law ; (2) there was no duty upon the Board to stop undercutting ; (3) upon the facts the Board had taken all reasonable steps to prevent undercutting.—MILK MARKETING BOARD v. WARMAN & SONS, [1937] 3 All E. 508 iii. —— —— —— ——.]—A dairyman was convicted of selling sweet milk which was not genuine, in respect that it contained less than 3 per cent. of milk fat. The alleged deficiency in fat was established, but it was also proved that the milk had not been tampered with in any way, the deficiency being due to the milk having stood for some time in the can, & to the sample having been drawn from a tap at the bottom after the cream had risen. No evidence was led as to the possibility or impossibility of redistributing the constituents of the milk in the can by stirring or otherwise : —Held : accused had failed to rebut the statutory presumption that the milk was not genuine, & the conviction was right.—M'CALLUM v. BROOKS, [1926] S. k i. —— Price of milk varying with quality supplied—Genuine milk to be supplied.]—Deft. was a shareholder in a certain co-operative dairy society, & she & the other suppliers of milk to the creamery of the said society delivered daily to the creamery quantities of milk. The quantity of milk delivered by each supplier was recorded by weight in pounds, dependent on the number of gallons, & the manager or other official of the creamery took a sample of each delivery, tested it, & ascertained its contents of butter-fats. In return for the said milk delivered by her, deft. received from the creamery : (a) at the end of every month a cash payment per pound of milk delivered, calculated on the average percentage of butter-fats contained in the milk delivered during the month—the greater the content of the butter-fats, the higher the price paid; & (b) each day a quantity of separated milk, which was determined in accordance with the rules of the society & was proportionate to the quantity of milk delivered by deft. to the creamery, or, instead, a cash payment. A sample of deft.'s milk taken by an Inspector of Food & Drugs when the milk was in the course of delivery to the creamery was found on analysis to be inferior to the standard prescribed by regs. 1 & 2 of Sale of Milk (Ir.) Regulations, 1901, & deft. was charged for selling to the creamery, to the prejudice of the purchaser, i.e. the said creamery, within Sale of Food & Drugs Act, 1875 (c. 63), as amended by Sale of Food & Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879 (c. 30), s. 3, an article of food, to wit, milk, which was not of the nature, substance, & quality demanded by the purchaser. No evidence was given by deft. to rebut the presumption of abstraction or adulteration which applied to the said sample by reason of the said regulations. The district justice dismissed the summons :—Held : the district justice was wrong in law in dismissing the summons, as although the price paid by the creamery varied with the quality of the milk supplied, the contract contemplated the supply of genuine milk, & the milk of which the sample was taken was not genuine milk as defined by Sale of Milk (Ir.) He remained in possession, but contributed to the support of his daughter, who resided with her maternal grandmother. At the time of the conveyance the father was considerably indebted, & his creditors, finding that they could not attach the property, settled with him upon easy terms. In 1915 the father promised his daughter & her maternal uncle that the property would be restored to her. In 1925 the daughter sued for possession. The father pleaded that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & that the suit was barred by limitation :—Held : upon the whole facts the father had failed to discharge the burden, which was heavily upon him of proving that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & not a genuine conveyance of his daughter's share, possibly liberally calculated; & consequently his possession was not adverse to his daughter, but on her behalf.—MA NGWE NAING v. MAUNG THA MAUNG (1928), I. 525a. —— —— Refusal of fair offer.]—After bill filed on behalf of creditors to set aside as fraudulent & void a voluntary settlement by A., their debtor, & a composition signed by the creditors in ignorance of such prior voluntary settlement, the debtor was adjudicated bankrupt, & an order was made by the Ct. of Bkpcy. setting aside the voluntary settlement. Pltfs., whose claim to prove under the bkpcy. had been admitted notwithstanding the opposition of the trustees of the settlement, wrote to them proposing to dismiss the bill without costs as against them, & that pltfs.' costs should come out of the estate. The trustees declined this proposal, but offered to consent to an order staying all proceedings in the suit without costs, or dismissing the bill without costs :—Held : the trustees of the settlement, who, by their refusal of pltfs.' offer, had compelled them to bring the suit to a hearing, must pay all pltfs.' costs incurred since the date of that offer.—TANQUERAY v. BOWLES (1872), L. p iv. —— & illiterate.]—Conveyances set aside on grounds of improvidence, & want of proper professional advice.—

presumption that the donee [illegible] gift unless the donee establishes was the spontaneous act of the donor acting in circumstances which enabled him to exercise an independent will, & which justified the ct. in holding that it was the result of a free exercise of the donor's will. If the evidence establishes the fact above stated it should not be disregarded merely because the donor did not receive independent legal advise. On the other hand, the receipt of independent legal advice may rebut the presumption although it is not acted upon. But to have that effect it must be given with a knowledge of all the relevant circumstances, & be such as a competent & honest adviser would give if acting solely in the interest of the donor.

A Malay woman, who was a great age & wholly illiterate, executed a deed of gift of landed property in Singapore in favour of her nephew, who had the management of all her affairs. Before executing the deed the donor had independent advice from a lawyer who acted in good faith. He was unaware, however, that the gift constituted practically the whole of the donor's property, & did not bring home to her mind that she could more prudently, & equally effectively, benefit the donee by bestowing the property upon him by will:—Held: the gift should be set aside, as the presumption which arose was not rebutted.—INCHE NORIAH v. SHAIK ALLIE BIN OMAR, [1929] A. 889a. —— Independent adviser unaware of extent of property.]—Applt., a medical practitioner & an intimate friend of resp., an elderly widow, attended her professionally during two illnesses in the years 1928 & 1930. He made no charge for his professional services or for the medicines supplied, & had stated that he did not regard her as a paying patient. After her recovery from the second illness, resp. in 1931 executed a deed by which she purported to convey to applt. certain freehold land, together with the building thereon, for the sum of £1,500, but it was not in dispute that no consideration money was paid. Subsequently resp. instituted proceedings to have the conveyance set aside & a reconveyance of the property made to her, alleging that the deed was executed by her under the influence of applt., her medical attendant, & without independent advice. The deed was explained to the patient by her solr., but he was unaware of the proportion the property conveyed bore to her whole estate. Both parties were alive at the date of the trial, & gave evidence:—Held: (1) the relationship of doctor & patient existed between the parties; (2) a person giving independent advice must be aware of the total amount of the donor's property & the proportion the part given bears to the whole; (3) the onus, which lay upon applt., to prove that the gift was the result of the free exercise of resp.'s independent will having been discharged to the trial judge's satisfaction, the ct. in the circumstances of this case could reverse such finding only if there was no evidence at all to support it.—WILLIAMS v. JOHNSON, [1937] 4 All E. (2) By sect. 5 of the same Act "Any . . . industrial assurance co. which issues policies of industrial assurance which are illegal . . . shall, without prejudice to any other penalty, be liable to pay to the owner of the policy a sum equal to the surrender value of the policy . . . or, if the policy was issued after the commencement of this Act, a sum equal to the amount of the premiums paid, unless it is proved that owing to any false representation on the part of the proposer, the . . . co. did not know that the policy was illegal . . .":—Held: the "false representation" here referred to includes any untrue statement, whether made innocently or fraudulently.—PEARL ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. BROMLEY (1933), 49 T. L. R. 446; 77 Sol. Jo. 404.

175a. Insurance of child for more than statutory amount.]—Resps., an industrial assurance co., issued three policies of insurance in respect of the life of a child, for sums which aggregated more than the statutory maximum, though each was for a sum less than that maximum. Each policy contained a provision that no payment would be made which either alone or in conjunction with other such payments exceeded the statutory maximum. On a charge of having committed an offence within Industrial Assurance Act, 1923 (c. 8), s. 39 (2):—Held: (1) the words in sect. 4 (1) "relating to payments on the death of children" were merely descriptive of the group of sects in the 1896 Act headed "Payments on death of children," & did not limit those sects. in their application to industrial assurance cos. to payment only, but included the provisions as to insurance; (2) the above provision in each policy had no legal effect at all, & it could not be contended that in fact the co. did not insure for more than the statutory amount; (3) the proceedings were in time because, for this purpose, the insurance co. did not insure from the time only when the policies were taken out, but (LORD HEWART, C.J.) either insured on every occasion when a premium was paid, or (AVORY, J.) continued to insure during the time that the assured was not in default & the policies were in force.—HARKER v. BRITANNIC ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1928] 1 K. The Table in the policy of 1920 was made out on the basis of a premium of one penny per week & insured sums payable policy & payment of premium.]—In an action wherein plts. sought to recover benefits from a fraternal society as the beneficiaries of a deceased who was alleged to have become a member thereof:—Held: applying sects. 81 (3) & 86 (1) of Insurance Act, 1925, deceased's application for membership & the acceptance thereof did not effect a contract binding on the society because no policy, or certificate of membership, was delivered & payment of the first premium or at least all of it had not been made, which, under said sects., were conditions precedent to a binding contract.—PEDERSON v. EMPIRE HOME BENEFIT ASSOCN., [1931] 2 W. PART XIII. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.

142 1. Necessity for insurable interest.]—A woman, C., on the suggestion of the agent of a friendly society, agreed to take out a policy of industrial assurance on the life of her stepmother, T., & she left it to the agent to take the necessary steps to effect the insurance. She signed no proposal for a policy in favour of T., nor was such a proposal signed by T., who was unaware of the transaction, & there was no evidence to show by whom the proposal, which bore to be signed by T., was in fact signed; but a policy in favour of T. was issued by the society & handed to C., who retained it, & paid premiums on it. C. had no insurable interest in the life of T., & she had no intention of benefiting T., C. having claimed repayment from the society of the premiums paid by her:—Held: C. was entitled to repayment, as, owing to the absence of consensus ad idem, no concluded contract was disclosed either between C. & the society, or between T. & the society.

Opinions, that, on the assumption that a policy on the life of T. for the benefit of C. had been entered into, it was an illegal policy within Life Assurance Act, 1774 (c. 48), & C. was, on that ground also, entitled to repayment of the premiums under Life Assurance Act, 1774 (c. 48), s. 5.—CAME v. CITY OF GLASGOW FRIENDLY SOCIETY, [1933] S. on the death of the life assured varying in amount according to age & the time the policy had been in force; it also contained the following statement: "Twopence per week will assure double the above sums provided that in any case where the amount secured by the larger premium would exceed the limits of assurance prescribed by Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), viz., £6 for children under five years of age, & £10 for children under ten years of age, the sum assured shall be limited to £6 or £10 as the case may require." In the policy of 1925 was a statement that the amount payable under it was subject to the limitations of Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11):—Held: in view of the statements in the two policies limiting the amount insured in each case to the statutory maximum, neither policy contravened the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts, 1896 & 1924, & was valid.

In 1925 C. signed a proposal for a whole life assurance on the life of her son, then aged one year next birthday, at a weekly premium of one penny for a sum to be assured increasing as per scale up to £15. On the same day she signed a proposal for an endowment assurance on the same life at a weekly premium of threepence for a "sum to be assured £7 14*s.* payable on attainment of age fifteen or in the event of previous death as per scale." Two policies were issued on the basis of these proposals. On the whole-life policy there was this memorandum: "This life is also assured under [the endowment] policy. Accordingly, the full sum assured printed in the schedule will not come into operation until the attainment of the age of ten. The combined amount payable in the event of earlier death shall not exceed £6 on death under age three, £10 under age six, & £15 under age ten":—Held: as the above quoted memorandum cut down the sums payable under the combined policies to the statutory limit, the policies did not contravene the Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11), & were valid.—Re HIRST & LIVERPOOL VICTORIA FRIENDLY SOCIETY, Re CLARK & LONDON & MANCHESTER ASSURANCE CO., [1930] 2 K. 175c. —— ——.]—Applt. insured her child, who was born on May 2, 1927, a month after its birth, the premium to be 2*d.* a week. Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11), s. 2 (1), stated that Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), s. 62, should have effect "as if for that section the following section were substituted," & provided that a society should not insure or pay on the death of a child under three years of age any sum of money which exceeded or which, when added to any amount payable on the death of that child by any other society or branch or by any trade union, exceeded £6. By Industrial Assurance Act, 1923 (c. 8), s. 21, it was required that any such policy of insurance should set out in distinctive type a statement of the effect of sect. 62. Applt. claimed from resp. co. the return of her premiums on the grounds that (a) under sect. 62 as amended by sect. 2 (1) of the Act of 1924 the sum insured exceeded the amount allowed, & (b) under sect. 21 of the Act of 1923 the policy did not set out a statement of the effect of sect. 62 as amended. Sect. 62 of the Act of 1896 was left unamended & unrepealed by the Act of 1924, but under the latter Act was to be read as provided by the Act of 1924. The policy was issued for a penny premium, & that was altered to twopence premium, & it was then stated that the amount payable on death was ascertainable from Sched. B., but that, the premium in this case being twopence, the amounts stated in Sched. B were increased in proportion. That would bring the amounts over what was allowed by sect. 62 as amended, but to the above statement was added "subject to the conditions of the Friendly Societies Act." In a second proviso on the face of the policy it was stated that the policy was issued "subject to the provisions of sect. 62 of Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), as amended by the Industrial Assurance Act, 1923 (c. 8)—the provisions of which would, it was argued, make it illegal." Then followed the effect of sect. 62 without the express language introduced by the Act of 1924:—Held: the child had not been insured for sums in excess of the amounts permitted by sect. 62 of the Act of 1896 as amended by sect. 2 (1) of the Act of 1924, having regard to the effect of the statements in the policy, & particularly the proviso, & to the fact that sect. 62 of the Act of 1896 still existed, not having been repealed, though the amendment of it in the Act of 1923 had been repealed, & though sect. 62 had now to be read as if it had the effect set out in sect. 2 (1) of the Act of 1924. The co. had not committed an offence against sect. 21 of the Act of 1923, as it used the very language in its policy which had been used by the Legislature from 1896 to 1924, & did introduce the effect of sect. 62, & it was immaterial that the Act of 1924 was not specifically mentioned.—Re SMITH & BRITANNIC ASSURANCE CO.'S ARBITRATION, [1933] 1 K. sa. Right to shoot game—Under Game Act Amendment Act, 1925.]—Game Act Amendment Act, 1925, does not give a farmer an absolute right to shoot game birds found doing damage to his crop, provided he does not shoot across a public highway ; it means merely that so far as the penalties imposed by said Act are concerned they shall not be enforceable against a farmer shooting under the circumstances therein described. The right of a municipality to protect its citizens by prohibiting the discharge of firearms within its limits is not interfered with.—R. ex rel. RANKIN v. PENDRAY, [1929] 1 W. W. R. 30 ; 51 Can. Part VIII.—Licences.

375a. —— Coursing—What amounts to.]—Resp. was charged with having killed a hare when he had no licence to kill game, as required by sect. 4 of Game Licences Act, 1860 (c. 90). Resp. owned three greyhounds, which he kept for coursing & sport. On the day of the alleged offence he was riding his horse in a field, with the permission of the owner, & had with him two of his greyhounds. There were no other persons or dogs present. The two greyhounds chased a hare, overtook & killed it. Thereupon resp. galloped across the field to where the greyhounds were, picked up the hare, put it in a bag, & placed the bag in the bottom of a hedge:—Held: these facts constituted the killing of a hare by coursing with greyhounds within the meaning of the third exception in Game Licences Act, 1860 (c. 90), s. 5, which excepted from the duties & provisions of that Act: "(3) the pursuing & killing of hares . . . by coursing with greyhounds, . . ."; therefore, the justices were right in acquitting resp. 393 1. Defences—Coursing hare.]—Deft. was prosecuted for pursuing a hare with a greyhound without having a game certificate, contrary to Game Certificates (Ireland) Act, 1842, ss. 2, 5. Deft. had coursed a hare with a single greyhound on certain lands, but produced a written permission from the owner of the lands to do so. The resident magistrate held that failure to take out a licence under Game Licences Act, 1860, formed the basis of the charge, & deft. was exempted on sect. 5, exception 3, of that Act, in respect of coursing a hare with his greyhound, & dismissed the summons. On a case stated:—Held: the resident magistrate was wrong in deciding that deft. came within Game Licences Act, 1860, s. 5, exception 3.—R. (NEVIN) v. CLARKE, [1930] N. I. 174.—IR.

In an action by E. on behalf of himself & the other members of the Club, the trustees of the Club & W. & Sons as stakeholders, to enforce payment by the deft. of the entrance fees or the part of them agreed to be forfeited :—Held : the contracts for the two races, which were between the Club & deft. & not between the various entrants inter se, were in neither case by way of gaming or wagering within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 18, & the Club were entitled to recover from deft. the amount of the fees agreed to be forfeited in the two races.

In an action to recover the £1,000 pltf. alleged that deft. had agreed to abide by the decision of the Committee :—Held : as the parties only referred to Tattersall's Committee the question whether the bet was at 100 to 1 or at 33 to 1, & as there was no further agreement by deft. for good consideration to pay such sum as the Committee might find to be payable, the action failed.—HYDE v. TYLER (1926), 42 T. a number of bookmakers. On settling day, being unable to pay, he consulted a solr., whose managing clerk, W., happened to be a member of the Committee of Tattersall's Club. After a general discussion of the position W. was sent to Tattersall's Club to inform some, or all, of the bookmakers concerned, including pltf., that deft. could not pay at that time, but would pay them when he could. It was alleged that W., as deft.'s agent, entered into an agreement with pltf. to the effect that if pltf. did not " post " deft. as a defaulter at Tattersall's Club, he would pay what he owed in full within a reasonable time, & that thereby a legal obligation to pay the debt was created :—Held : W. had no authority from deft. to enter into any such contract on his behalf.—O'MALLEY v. GORMAN, [1935] W. 252 i. —— Prizes provided out of admission money.]—A person hired a hall for one night, & another hall for two nights, & advertised that whist drives, open to the public on payment of one shilling for admission, would be held in the halls on those nights. A large number of people attended, & prizes were awarded to the successful players. The purchase of the prizes was defrayed out of the admission money, any balance over being retained by the promoter :—Held : (1) the playing of progressive whist was gaming, in view of the facts that the element of chance predominated in the game, & that the prizes were derived from the admission money, & it was immaterial whether the proceedings were or were not detrimental to the morals of the community ; (2) accused had managed, conducted, or carried on gaming in the premises, although his operations had been restricted to three isolated occasions.—BUNTON v. MILLER, [1926] S. 276 i. Whether dominant element of skill.]—Deft. kept for use by the public on his premises a number of machines, known by the name of " Diddler." Any one wishing to use one of these machines purchased from deft. discs at the price of seven for 6*d.* He inserted one disc in a slot & pulled a handle, which caused three rollers to revolve. On each roller was printed a number of devices, such as cherries, roses, etc. If certain combinations of these devices stopped opposite a pointer on the face of the machine, the player won a certain number of discs. With these he could purchase on the premises certain goods. The winning combinations & the odds for each were printed on the front of the machine in view of the player. If none of these combinations stopped opposite the pointer, the player lost his disc. The machine was fitted with a control, by which the player could stop the rollers, one at a time, & so endeavour to obtain a winning combination. There were 15 machines on the premises. Deft. was prosecuted under Gaming Houses Act, 1854, s. 4, that he, being the occupier of the premises, did use them for the purpose of unlawful gaming. The justice was satisfied on the evidence that the majority of the persons who used the machine would be players of less than average skill, &, therefore, held that the game was one in which the chances were not favourable alike to all players, including the owner of the machine, & accordingly convicted the deft. :—Held : the conviction was right.—

Order for destruction of machines—Proceedings under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38).]—Applt. was convicted before petty sessions of unlawfully gaming with automatic machines, & a number of machines in his possession were ordered by the justices to be destroyed:—Held: the proceedings being taken under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), the justices had no jurisdiction to order the destruction of the machines, such jurisdiction being conferred only by Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 8, & in cases brought before them by a warrant issued under that Act.—EYRE v. BRUMFIELD, [1936] 2 All E. 284a. House used for game where chances not alike favourable to all players.]—The committee of management of a members' club installed in the club certain machines for the use of members only & for the purpose of giving additional pleasure to the members. The machines were operated by means of pennies inserted in a slot. The player, having first inserted a penny, depressed a handle, causing three cylinders to revolve on which were depicted bells, bars & fruits. On the cylinders ceasing to revolve the player either lost his penny or received winnings up to twenty pennies, according to the combination of fruits &/or bells &/or bars opposite a pointer. The machine automatically filled a jack pot from its winnings, & the pennies in the jack pot were returned to the player who obtained the combination of three bars. The machines were similar in type to other machines for the user of which persons had been convicted under the Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), where the persons had used the machines in shops or places of public entertainment or in proprietary clubs. Four members of the committee of management of the club in question were charged under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4, for being persons having the care & management of certain premises, to wit, the club, which were then being used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein. The contention of the members of the committee of management was that the position of a members' club was analogous to that of a private house, & that gaming upon the machines in a members' club was therefore not unlawful gaming:—Held: in order that a house should be a common gaming house within s. 2 of the Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 2, it was not necessary that some person should be keeping the house for his gain, lucre or living; it was sufficient that it was a house kept or used for playing at any game where the chances of the game being played therein are not alike favourable to all the players; the chances of the game played on the machines in this club were not alike favour- club members' club did not prevent the club premises being kept or used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein, & therefore the members of the committee of management of the club could be convicted of the offence charged under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4.—DANIELS v. PINKS, [1931] 1 K. The fence along its western side ran at the foot of a railway embankment, which was admittedly not a public place within Street Betting Act, 1906, s. 1 (4). Between the northern end of this fence & the fence bounding the northern side of the ground was a gateway, 3 feet wide, giving access to the ground. The gateposts were in position, but the gate had been missing for some time. The portion of the field adjoining the gateway was not used for cricket, & the public had unrestricted access to that portion & gathered there in numbers every day. 358a. Totalisator—Greyhound racing track.]—The words " such owner, occupier, keeper, or person as aforesaid " in the latter part of Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 1, are not to be read as limited to the class of persons who come within the ambit of the earlier part of the sect.—namely, persons who themselves are parties to bets or to transactions of the nature of bets. A person, therefore, such as the proprietor of a totalisator on a greyhound racecourse, who merely provides facilities for other persons to bet, & is not himself a party to any bet, may be guilty of an offence under the latter part of the sect.

PART III. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

o i. —— Sale of totalisator vouchers.]—A co. occupying a greyhound racecourse on which a totalisator was erected, & the manager of the totalisator, were charged with contravening Betting Act, 1853, s. 1. It was proved that persons betting through the totalisator purchased vouchers costing 2*s*. each, which were marked with the name of the dog on which the purchaser desired to bet. These vouchers represented the stakes, & after the race the whole money staked was divided among the backers of the winning dog, under deduction of 10 per cent. to cover expenses:—Held: the purchasers of vouchers entered into the betting transactions with each other, & not with the co. or the manager; & the fact that a charge was made for the use of the totalisator & for the service of operating it did not involve the co. or the manager in a contravention of the sects. libelled.—STRATHERN v. SCOTTISH GREYHOUND RACING CO., [1930] S. C. (J.) 24.—SCOT.

o ii. —— ——.]—The tenant of certain premises in which a totalisator was installed, & his assistants, were charged with a contravention of sect. 407 of Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. It was proved that members of the public resorted to the premises in large numbers for the purpose of betting through the totalisator on the results of dog races. Those betting purchased vouchers costing 1*s*. each, which were marked with the number of the dog selected for backing. The money thus paid represented the stakes, &, after each race, the whole money staked was divided among the backers of the winning dog, under deduction of 10 per cent. which was retained by the tenant of the premises for himself & his assistants:—Held: sect. 407 of Burgh Police Act, applied only to the same class of premises as that to which Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 1, applied, namely, premises where the betting carried on took place between the management & persons resorting thereto, &, as the premises were not of this description, the conviction fell to be quashed.—GIBSON v. LAIRD, [1933] S. C. (J.) 6.—SCOT.

o iii. —— ——.]—A co. occupying a greyhound racecourse on which a totalisator was erected were charged with a contravention of Betting Act, 1853, s. 1. It was admitted that members of the public betting through the totalisator purchased vouchers costing 1*s*. each, which were marked with the number of the dog on which the purchaser desired to bet. The money paid for these vouchers represented the stakes, & after the race the whole money staked was divided among the backers of the winning dog, under deduction of 10 per cent., which was retained by the co.

Persons concerned in the management of premises in which totalisators were erected were charged with a contravention of sect. 15 of Glasgow Police (Further Powers) Act, 1892, which imposes a penalty on the owner or manager of a gaming or betting house. It was proved that the public were admitted to the premises which were designated as a club, on payment of a nominal membership fee. Betting on the result of horse races & dog races run elsewhere was carried on through the totalisators in the same way as in the case of the co. referred to above:—Held: the accused in each case were guilty of a contravention of the sections.—STRATHERN v. ALBION GREYHOUNDS (GLASGOW), LTD.; STRATHERN v. RUSSELL, [1933] S. C. (J.) 91.—SCOT.

o iv. —— Keeping means of betting.]Appeal from a conviction for keeping a common betting house at a certain hotel. Accused, who was a roomer at the hotel, was found in the rotunda looking at a copy of "The Morning Digest," a turf publication, which was spread out on a desk, & writing on a small pad of paper. One or two men were with him, also looking at the publication. A copy of another turf publication was also on the desk, but behind a glass case. Certain letters & figures on the pad were written by the accused in the sight of a constable, unnoticed by the accused. The sheet contained 15 other entries of the same class & in the same handwriting. Figures in pencil were written after the name of each of the horses listed in the publications, & a witness, who was a bookmaker, testified that the figures were such as would be put there by one intending to take bets. He also gave the opinion that the entries on the pad, except the last two items, showed bets on horses. The last item was that which the constable saw the accused write. With respect to those two items the witness said that they might be entries of a bet but that if he had been making the entries he would have made them in another way:—Held: the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the conviction.—R. v. MCCANN, [1936] 3 W. 363 i. What persons liable to penalties —Persons "keeping"—Servant in sole charge.]—Any person, whether servant or agent, or on his own account, who has for the time being the exclusive charge of premises, & who uses those premises for the purpose of betting, is guilty of keeping or using the premises as a common gaming house under Gaming Act, 1908, s. 4, even though he is not the owner, & the owner is ignorant of the use to which the premises were put, & though the premises so used are only part of the premises of the owner.—DAVIS v. NUTTALL, [1924] N. mitted a social club to occupy the premises for carrying out its objects as such. That club made an arrangement with a bookmaker to act for its members & open an account with them. Telephones were installed connecting the club premises with the bookmaker's office, & the members of the club thereby communicated their proposed bets to the bookmaker for his acceptance. The bookmaker supplied to the club premises information as to races which was published there. A commission was paid by the bookmaker to the club on all bets made with its members through him. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for breach of the contract of letting in permitting the premises to be used for a purpose which was illegal under Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), & claiming a declaration to that effect, an injunction, & damages :—Held : defts. were permitting the premises to be " used " for the purpose of a person (the bookmaker) " procured " by the occupier (the club) betting with persons resorting thereto within & contrary to sect. 1 of the Act, & pltf. was entitled to the relief which he claimed.—SAMUEL v. ADELAIDE CLUB, LTD., [1934] 2 K. 408a. Receipt of whole stake—Whether " deposit."]—The charge against applt. was that being the occupier of a place used for a betting game he unlawfully did receive money as a deposit on certain bets, contrary to the Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 4. The date in the information was " between May 30, 1936, & June 1, 1936." Persons taking part in the game paid 1*d.* It was found as a fact that on May 30, 1936, pennies were laid on the table by the players & taken by applt. or his assistants before the game was decided. On May 31 & June 1, 1936, the pennies paid by the players were paid after the game was decided. Applt. contended (i) that the information was bad for duplicity, & (ii) that what was paid by the players could not properly be called a deposit on any bet :—Held : (1) the information charged only one offence, & the fact that three days were comprised in the period named in the information did not make it bad ; (2) although the players paid the whole stake payable in respect of the game this was none the less a " deposit " within Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 4.—JOEL v. BARCLAY, [1937] 1 All E. 415a. —— ——.]—Applts. were the responsible proprietors of a four-page weekly newspaper, which was sold at 6*d.* a copy, & which had in winter a weekly circulation of over 32,000 copies. The newspaper contained what was called a " Free Football Competition " with a coupon giving particulars of future football matches & a column for the competitors to fill in their forecast of the results, a prize of £150 being offered for a correct forecast of all the results & a prize of £100 for a correct forecast of nine results, but no money was to be sent with the coupons. Applts. were summoned for unlawfully publishing a coupon of a ready-money football betting business contrary to sect. 1 of the above Act. The justices found that the majority of the persons who bought the newspaper did so for the sake of the coupon, & that applts. had circulated coupons of a ready-money football betting business, & they convicted applts. :—Held : the case was typical of the mischief aimed at by the Act, & the justices' decision must be affirmed.—SUTTLE v. CRESSWELL, [1926] 1 K. sd. Receipt from agent.]—No bets were made at accused's office, but he engaged & paid bookmakers to make bets on the streets & elsewhere. He supplied these bookmakers with betting slips & football coupons, from which, when returned to his office, he made up an account of the gains & losses of each bookmaker. He received at his office daily from each bookmaker any balance of gains on the bets made on the preceding day, & he transmitted to the bookmakers any sum required to make good a deficiency on the day's transactions :—Held : accused had contravened the section libelled, in respect that he used the office for the receipt of money accruing from ready-money bets, although the money was paid over elsewhere by the persons betting.—REID v. HILL, [1931] S. 415 i. " Printing or knowingly circulating coupons "—Construction of Football Betting Act, 1920 (c. 52), ss. 1, 2.]— Commission agents issued a printed publication containing coupons for use in predicting results of football matches & offering money prizes. Apart from the coupons & matters connected therewith the paper contained very little reading matter, & the majority of purchasers bought it for the sake of the coupons. The commission agents were convicted of knowingly printing & circulating circulars or coupons of a ready-money football betting business :—Held : the paper was a circular or coupon of the business of applts., & conviction sustained.—JAMESON v. SINCLAIR, [1925] S. sn. " Ready-money football betting business "—Newsagents settling with publishers monthly.]— Commission agents issued a printed publication containing coupons for use in predicting results of football matches & offering money prizes. It was issued to wholesale newsagents, & distributed by them to retail newsagents, who sold it to the public. The wholesale & retail newsagents settled their accounts weekly ; the wholesale newsagent ran monthly accounts with the commission agents, who paid the prizewinners. The prize money was paid, although the monthly accounts had not been settled :—Held : there was evidence on which the magistrates might hold that applts.' business was a ready-money football betting business.—SINCLAIR, [1925] S. C. (J.)

although the evidence only showed that some, & not the majority, of the purchasers of the newspaper bought it, wholly or partly, for the sake of the coupon, & although no competitor was allowed to send in more than one coupon from one & the same issue of the newspaper.—SIR W. 415d. —— ——.]—Resp. employed about 10,000 collectors in different parts of the United Kingdom for the purpose of conducting & carrying on football pool betting businesses. He issued printed instructions to every collector not to accept or collect money invested by clients until after the matches had been played, as it was illegal to accept it at the time the investment was made. One collector sometimes accepted money at the time of investment without resp.'s knowledge, but did not send the money to resp. until after the results of the matches were known. The words "credit only" were printed on every coupon in bold type. In consequence of the said collector's conduct, resp. was charged with publishing coupons of two ready money football betting businesses, contrary to the Ready Money Football Betting Act, 1920 (c. 52), s. 1:—Held: as resp. published coupons of a credit business & gave most careful instructions to his collectors not to take money at the time of investment, he was innocent of the offences with which he was charged.—WILSON v. MURPHY, [1937] 1 All E. 415e. —— Prizes of indeterminate amount.]—Applts. were the promoters of a scheme by which working men were invited to forecast the results of football matches & pay an entrance fee of one penny with each forecast. Prizes of an amount at the discretion of the promoters were awarded to the senders of the most correct forecasts:—Held: the fact that the amount of the prizes was indeterminate was immaterial, & applts. were rightly convicted of circulating coupons of a ready money football betting business, contrary to the Ready Money Football Betting Act, 1920 (c. 52).—BAKER v. SILLITOE (1931), 145 L. Applt. was convicted, & appealed to quarter sessions, who allowed the appeal, on the ground that the conviction was bad on the face of it because it did not specify what contravention of Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), was alleged:—Held: applt. was entitled to the precise information to which he would have been entitled if he had been prosecuted under Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), & the decision of quarter sessions was right.—POINTON v. COX (1926), 136 L. 421 i. Power of arrest.]—Police, having obtained a warrant to enter a stable (number 4), watched the stable for a period of twenty minutes, during which it was visited by about twenty men, six of whom carried what appeared to be betting slips in their hands. On the police approaching the stable, accused, who had been in the stable all the time, ran into a neighbouring stable (number 3), one of them carrying a bundle of betting lines. The police took them back into stable number 4, where they were searched & taken into custody, & the money found on them was seized. 433a. —— Provision for commission without control over sales.]—A co., having bought a quantity of note cases at a price of less than 1*s.* 6*d.* each, devised a scheme for selling them at a profit, & issued to the public a leaflet in accordance with the terms of which the scheme was conducted. The leaflet informed a person desirous of participating in the scheme that on filling up & sending in an attached order form together with £1 there would be sent to him a note case & a supply of the leaflets, the order forms of which would be marked with a number allotted to him; that he should get other persons to give orders for note cases, using these forms; that he would be entitled to no benefit from the first three of these orders, but would be paid a commission of 10*s.* on every other order received on his forms & on sales made as a result of these orders; that whenever an order was received on one of his forms, after the first three, a supply of forms also marked with his number would be sent to the buyer, & that the participant would be paid a commission of 10*s.* on each of the first three sales made by every one to whom one of the forms so numbered was sent; & that there was no time limit to the scheme, but that the maximum commission payable to a participant was £20,000:—Held: inasmuch as, with the exception of commissions resulting from orders directly obtained by the participant himself, all the commissions which he received would result from orders given by persons over whom he had no control & would depend so far as he was concerned not upon his skill or work but upon pure chance, the scheme was a "lottery" within Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41.—PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR v. PHILLIPS, [1935] 1 K. n i. —— Bonds in series—Payment not dependent on knowledge or skill.]—In a prosecution for a contravention of Lotteries Act, 1823, it was established that the promoters had formed & put into execution a scheme for the sale of bonds, each of which entitled the holder on certain conditions to £150. To qualify for this sum a participant had first to obtain a bond at the cost of 1*s.* either from the promoters or from a friend. This was the parent of a family of bonds which was brought into existence by a process of sub-sales. The holder of the parent bond had to buy from the promoters four bonds for 3*s.* & to sell them to four friends for 1*s.* each. These four bonds were the first generation, & each of the four holders of them had to repeat the same process, thus bringing the second generation of sixteen bonds into existence. The process had to be repeated until the sixth generation of 4096 bonds had come into existence, making, for the complete series, 5461 bonds. On the occurrence of this event the holder of the parent bond became entitled to £150. Not only was each individual bond a member of a family of bonds, but it could itself become the parent of a new family, & the holder of it was entitled to £150 as soon as its sixth generation was completed:—Held: the scheme was a lottery, in respect that the occurrence of the event upon which payment fell to be made could neither be approximately predicted nor materially influenced by the exercise of any knowledge, experience, art, or skill on the part of the holder of the parent bond.—BARNES v. STRATHERN, [1929] S. 433d. —— Betting scheme.]—A limited co. employed agents to distribute tickets bearing the names of races, horses & jockeys, & also the name of the co., & an offer to exchange the tickets for goods on demand. A member of the public receiving a ticket was entitled to bet on the combinations named on the ticket, in which case if he won he received the amount of his bet ; if he lost he was entitled to exchange the ticket for goods worth sixpence, through the firm's agents. The co. & its directors were convicted at petty sessions under Betting Lotteries Act, 1934 (c. 58), & appealed :—Held : (1) the scheme was a lottery ; (2) the appearance of the name of the co. on the tickets, together with evidence that the same agent had distributed similar tickets which had been exchanged by the co. for goods, was evidence connecting the agent with the co.—GORDON, MACKAY & CO., LTD. v. WATSON, [1936] 2 All E. b (p. 454) ix. —— Picture competition.]—A. was the manager of a certain co. which conducted & advertised the holding of certain competitions known as the " Bran Tub Competition." The scheme of the competition was to take a sentence from an Australian newspaper & reproduce it in puzzle form. The competitors were invited to interpret in words the pictorial rendering of the sentence. The prize was awarded to the person who reproduced the precise words of the sentence chosen or who got nearest to that particular collection of words :—Held : the competition was a matter of chance &, therefore, a lottery within sect. 3 (6) of Lotteries & Art Unions Act, 1901-1929.—Re CHRISTENSEN, Ex p. ATMORE (1936), 53 N. b (p. 454) x. ———.]—A. published an advertisement in a newspaper setting out the terms of a " competition " of which he was the promoter & controller. The nature of the competition was as follows :—A " frame " was set out in the advertisement consisting of a number of vertical rows of squares, each row containing a different number of squares. In each row one of the squares contained a letter of the alphabet. To each row was allotted a " clue " & to each letter a number. The competitor was asked to fill in the blank squares with letters so as to make each row contain a word of as many letters as there were squares in the row, the word filled in being " suitable to the clue " allotted to the particular row. Each letter in the word was then given its numerical value & the competitor who supplied words the total numerical value of which was the highest won the competition. The advertisement stated that the " missing words " were " ordinary everyday words " & that they must be " recognised words suitable to the clues " & must be found in Chambers's dictionary. In the conduct of the competition unusual & obsolete words used were accepted :—Held : the magistrate was entitled to find that the conduct of the competition was such as to preclude the fair consideration of the answers & the competition was a lottery within Lotteries & Art Unions Act, 1901-1929.—Re CHRISTENSEN, Ex p. ATMORE (1936), 53 N. 464b. —— —— Distribution of circulars advertising lottery.]—Resp. employed canvassers to call from house to house, inviting persons to undertake to buy tea from her regularly. Each week the canvassers carried with them handbills which declared that: "To advertise our famous tea we will distribute among our customers cash gifts of £3 and £6," as the purchaser bought one or two packets of tea per week. The circular continued: "Each customer's name is entered in rotation in our ledger and cash gifts are paid out accordingly." The names & addresses of new customers were entered in the ledger in the exact order in which they had been obtained, the list of one canvasser's customers on his return to the office being completely entered before that of the next was begun. Resp. awarded her bonus each week to the next customer whose name was on the list after that of the customer last to receive a bonus, provided that the customer was still regularly buying the tea. The names of customers who ceased to buy the tea weekly were struck out of the list, thus advancing the names of customers below them. It was stated in one of the circulars that during the twenty-four weeks ending in June, 1928, resp. had paid out £1,920 by way of bonus gifts. Applt., a superintendent of police, preferred an information against resp., charging her with publishing a proposal or scheme for the sale of chances in a lottery not authorised by Act of Parliament, contrary to above Act. In the years 1929 to 1933 inclusive the Board had entered into a series of agreements with two cos., in order to procure the collection of bets from persons not on the racecourse on race days, & the placing of such bets on the totalisator on the course. The Board agreed to pay commission at certain rates dependent on the amount of money placed by means of such bets, & also the expenses of its agents in collecting & telephoning the bets to the course, such commission & expenses being paid by the Board out of the totalisator fund. The Board also agreed with one of the cos. to provide at its own expense all reasonable facilities required by the co. for the purpose of its business on the authorised racecourses & to make contributions towards the initial expenses of that co. In an action brought at the relation of the secretary of a bookmakers' organisation, asking for a declaration that such agreements & payments were invalid & ultra vires the Board:—Held: (1) the action of the Board in agreeing to pay the commission & the expenses of providing facilities on the authorised racecourses was reasonably incidental to the power conferred on the Board by Racecourse Betting Act, 1928 (c. 41), & was therefore not ultra vires. In so doing the Board was only taking steps to increase the bets placed on the totalisators on the courses; (2) in contributing towards the preliminary expenses of one of the cos. the Board was acting ultra vires, as it was thereby assisting in the general business of the co. which as between itself & its customers was carrying on "off-the-course" betting.—A.-G. v. RACECOURSE BETTING CONTROL BOARD, [1935] Ch. 34; 104 L. 501a. Readers were thereby invited to fill in coupons relating to any one or more of a series of football matches to be played on the following Saturday, with their respective forecasts of the results, including the score, & to stake a named sum thereon. Under the rules of the pool entrants were required on the day before the matches were played to remit the coupons they had filled up to the co. with a promise in writing, duly signed, to pay the amount they were staking in case they lost, on the Tuesday following. The total amount received from entrants, less 10 per cent., was distributed by the co. among those whose forecasts turned out to be correct, or most nearly correct. On a motion by pltf., a director of deft. co., for an injunction to restrain them from so conducting the pool :—Held : the pool was not a " competition in which prizes are offered for forecasts of the result . . . of a future event " within the prohibition contained in Betting & Lotteries Act, 1934 (c. 58), s. 26, but a pari-mutuel or pool betting operation conducted by a bookmaker, & therefore lawful within sect. 3 & the proviso to sect. 26 of the Act.—ELDERTON v. UNITED KINGDOM TOTALISATOR CO., LTD., [1935] Ch. 373 ; 104 L. d i. —— —— Receipt of money with coupons—Whether offence under Street Betting Act.]—In a complaint under Street Betting Act, 1906, it was proved that accused received in the street from various persons a large number of slips accompanied by sums of money. The slips were odd pieces of paper, upon each of which were written the names of at least one group of eight football teams, to which was added a name, number or other symbol, for identifying the sender of the slip. Accused did not submit lists of football teams for the purpose of selection, the names of such teams being selected by the senders of the slips from lists of teams advertised or reported in the public press to play on the Saturday following the date on which the slips were received by accused. The teams selected were those which the senders of the slips predicted would be winning teams on that Saturday. Along with each slip was sent 1*s.*, the understanding being that, after the results of the matches were published, accused would examine the forecasts made, & thereafter would deduct from the money received a sum in name of commission, & hand over the balance to the person sending in the correct forecast if only one forecast was correct, or, if more than one forecast was correct, an equal share of such balance to each of the senders of correct forecasts. If no correct selection was sent in there was no distribution, & the whole contributions were carried forward to the next week ; which procedure was repeated until a correct forecast was made, or until the end of the football season arrived, when if there had been no correct selection received, the money in hand, less a commission to the accused, was distributed among those who had sent it :—Held : accused was engaged in betting transactions & was guilty of an offence under Street Betting Act, 1906.—YEUDALL v. [illegible], [1928] S. 504a. —— Determination of order of popularity of specified articles.]—The proprietors of a number of commodities organised, for advertisement purposes, a competition in which customers were asked to place thirteen named articles in the order of their popularity as shown by the actual voting of the entrants themselves. A number of money & other prizes were offered to those whose lists most nearly agreed with that shown by the voting as a whole. No entrance fee was charged, but each entrance form had to be accompanied by part of a bag or wrapper from one of the named articles :—Held : since the competitors were not asked to judge the real merits of the articles but to guess how other people would guess at their popularity, there was material on which a magistrate was justified in finding that the result depended entirely on chance & in convicting the advertising manager of the promoters of an offence under Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41, —HOBBS v. WARD (1929), 93 J. 504b. —— Determination of order of popularity of theatrical rôles.]—Resps. sent to members of the theatrical profession & to persons whose names appeared in " Who's Who " books of 10*s.* tickets in a " Grand National Mutual Subscription Fund in aid of the Ellen Terry Memorial Museum " with a request to sell the tickets among their friends & return the counterfoils & money by a certain date. An accompanying circular explained that 25 per cent. of the money subscribed would be devoted to the museum & that the remaining 75 per cent. would be distributed " in such manner as the organisers in their absolute discretion shall think fit," but that £20,000 would be distributed in prizes. It was apparently originally contemplated that the money should be used for a sweepstake on the Grand National horse race, but owing to a communication from the police there was substituted a scheme whereby subscribers were invited to place in order of popularity, as shown by the general votes of the competitors, ten rôles played by the late Dame Ellen Terry :—Held : the scheme was a lottery. The fact that the original books of tickets were sent only to members of the theatrical profession & persons in " Who's Who " did not so limit the class of competitors as to render it possible by any element of skill to arrive at a reasonable forecast of how they would vote ; especially as they might be expected to sell many tickets to persons outside those two categories, so that the competition was in effect open to the public.—CHALLIS v. WARRENDER (1930), 144 L. 506a. —— Picture puzzle competition.]—A competition was advertised in a newspaper in which a money prize was offered to the reader sending in the best solution of a picture puzzle illustrated in the same issue. The puzzle consisted of a set of nine small sketches each intended to depict the name, as spelt or pronounced, of some place in the United Kingdom. A list of names providing clues was given. Competitors were required to fill in blank forms with their solutions & send them in to the editor with entrance fees. The artist who drew the sketches was instructed to make some of them capable of representing one or other of two or three different places. In an action brought to test the legality of the competition :—Held : (1) success in the competition depended on the exercise of a substantial degree of skill, there being no predetermined solution of the puzzle, & therefore it did not come within the prohibition contained in Betting & Lotteries Act, 1934 (c. 58), s. 26 (1) (b) ; (2) the competition was not a " game " within the prohibition of Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 1.—WITTY v. WORLD SERVICE, LTD., [1936] Ch. 303 ; 105 L. 51a. Duration of agreement to supply—Power to terminate.]—In 1906 a co. was incorporated by statute to supply gas in a certain area in the place of a limited co., & by sect. 7 the statutory co. took the benefit of all contracts & engagements of the limited co. which had been supplying gas to the defts., an urban council, for public lighting. In 1909 the co. entered into an agreement under seal with the council in which it was recited that before the passing of the Act "it was agreed by & between the predecessors of the gas co. & the council that the agreement then in force for public lighting should continue to remain in force & be binding on both parties until the council should determine the same," & that "it has been deemed desirable by the said parties hereto that the terms of the said agreement for the public lighting shall be set out as hereinafter mentioned." By the operative part of the agreement the co. agreed to light all the public lamps within the district "from & after the first day in Sept. in every year up to the following first day of May inclusive" on certain terms ; & provisions were made for increasing the number of lamps. There was no provision as to the period for which the agreement was to run or giving either party a right to determine it. By a supplemental agreement dated June 30, 1921, the times of lighting & the charges were varied, & clause 1 (c) provided that new lanterns supplied by the co. should become the property of the council without payment after fifteen years if the agreements continued for so long, "& if the said agreements be determined before the expiration of such period" the council were to pay for them. On Apr. 30, 1927, the council gave notice to determine the agreement on Aug. 31, 1927 :—Held : having regard to the recitals in the original agreement & clause 1 (c) of the supplementary agreement & to the nature of the contracts they were determinable by notice.—CREDITON GAS CO. v. CREDITON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 447 ; 97 L. 80a. Excavation by local authority—Failure of gas company to inspect operations.]—A hotel belonging to & insured by resps. respectively was destroyed by fire caused by the escape & ignition of natural gas which percolated through the soil & penetrated into the hotel basement from a fractured welded joint in a 12-in. intermediate pressure main, 3 ft. 6 ins. below the street level, belonging to applts., a public utility co. who supplied natural gas to consumers in the City of Edmonton, Alberta. The cause of the break in the welded joint through which the gas leaked was found to be the operations of the City of Edmonton in constructing a storm sewer, involving underground work immediately beneath applts.' main. On a claim for damages by resps. against applts. :—Held : that the words "locate & construct" in Alberta Water, Gas, Electric & Telephone Cos. Act, 1922, s. 13, refer only to the initial location or construction of the works, & do not include "maintain," & applts. were not subject to the rule of strict or absolute liability, but were entitled to the protection accorded to persons acting under statutory authority; but as applts. were carrying gas at high pressure which was very dangerous, if it should escape, they owed a duty to the owners of the hotel, to exercise reasonable care & skill that the owners should not be damaged. The degree of care which that duty involved must be proportioned to the degree of risk involved. The City might at any time be conducting operations in connection with their sewers in the vicinity of applts.' mains, & it was the duty of applts. to watch such operations. The operations in question were, from their public nature & conspicuous character & from the time during which they went on, such that a failure by applts. to know of them was plainly not consistent with due care on their part in the interests of members of the public likely to be

In an action by which the corpn. sought to recover from the co. the cost of such reinstatement, the co. by counterclaim sought to recover from the corpn. the cost of repairing the gas main :—Held : the liability of the corpn. for the damage to the gas main depended upon negligence in the exercise of its statutory powers causing unnecessary damage to the co., & the onus of proving such negligence had not been discharged by the co.—METROPOLITAN GAS CO. v. MELBOURNE CORPN., [1925] V. In the present case :—Held : deft. city had not met the obligation of this provision with respect to a service pipe connecting a natural gas main with pltf.'s premises; the gradual development & enlargement of a leak in the stopcock in said service pipe was not a "breaking" of the pipe or attachments within a section of the charter giving the city immunity for damages caused by "breaking."—REID v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1933] 1 W. Pltf. lived with her mother, who was the householder & who apparently, had contracted for the supply of gas. No contractual relation between pltf. & deft. was established, & no negligence was proven against deft. The pipes had been properly laid & were in sound condition when the break occurred. The cause of the break was the action of an occupant of the front part of the lot in so altering his premises that additional weight was thrown laterally against the sunken pipe until it broke at a joint, permitting gas to escape & pass under ground to the basement, whence it reached pltf.'s bedroom. Deft.'s charter required it "so to construct & locate their works & all apparatus & appurtenances thereto appertaining or therewith connected & wheresoever situated as in no wise to endanger the public health, convenience, or safety." Deft. proceeded to the locality where the seals were & found that pltf. had taken some of them on board his vessel, had counted others of the patch, & was in the act of taking on board his vessel the remainder, his crew being then in charge. sx. ——.]—Before it can be said that influence which a donee is found to have had with his donor was such as to justify the ct. in setting aside the gift, under the doctrine of presumed undue influence, it must appear that the relations between the donor & donee were such that the latter was under some duty to advise or manage for, or look after the interest of, the donor.—BRADLEY, LANG & SCRAGG v. CRITTENDEN, [1932] S. q i. —— ——.]—The question whether a purchase of property by a parent in the name of his wife or child was a gift by way of advancement must be determined by what took place at the time the property was purchased. A gift to a parent from a child under age & under the parental dominion stands on the same footing as any other gift once the presumption of parental influence is rebutted.—ROYAL TRUST CO. v. JONES, [1935] 1 W. PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

89 i. Whether presumption arises.]—The facts that a daughter (her mother standing in loco parentis to her) was not informed of the deposit by her mother of a sum of money in her name, & that the mother died before the daughter assented to or accepted such intended gift, do not prevent the gift, if intended, being complete subject to the donee's right to disclaim, the acceptance of a gift by a donee being presumed until his dissent is signified, even though the donee is not aware of the gift:—Held: on the evidence, the presumption of a gift to the daughter had not been rebutted.—IRVIN v. BROOKES, [1937] N. 113 i. Contrary intention of donor—Investments as trustee for daughters.]—Held: the circumstances did not rebut the presumption that the money was intended as an advancement to the children.—JONES v. KINNEAR (1882), N. S. R. (4 R. & G.) 1.—CAN.

sv. —— .]—A father purchased land, the transfer of which was taken in the name of his daughter. The price paid was £700, of which the daughter contributed £286 10*s.*, the father providing the balance. The title, when issued, was held by the father. Rents & outgoings were shared equally by the father & daughter during the father's life. At the request of the father the daughter signed an acknowledgment that the father owned "one equal half part of 'the house' in her name," being the property purchased. The father died leaving his widow a life interest in his residuary estate & until her death she received one-half of the nett rents of the property. There were statements by the father contemporaneous with the gift showing that he might give his daughter the whole of the property, but he had never done so:—Held: on these facts, any presumption of advancement of the whole property to the deft. was rebutted.—MILLARD v. LUCAS, [1936] S. A. S. R. 166.—AUS.

sw. —— .]—In 1920 deft. S. had an account with a savings bank the amount of which exceeded the amount permitted to bear interest. Acting on a suggestion made either by his own banker or an employee of the savings bank, & desiring to keep his money at call & earning interest, S. opened at various times three trust accounts, signing on each occasion the declaration of trust required by the bank whereby he constituted himself trustee for each of his three infant daughters of all moneys standing at any time to his credit in each of the three accounts. By these declarations he declared that the moneys should be the exclusive property of the respective daughters & that he would not own or be interested (otherwise than as trustee) in any of the moneys. It was clear on the evidence of deft. that he always regarded & treated the moneys as his own, & thought of the declarations as formalities designed to overcome a technical obstacle, & that he never had any intention of disposing of the beneficial interest in any of the moneys deposited:—Held: deft. had not constituted himself a trustee of any of the moneys, & was entitled thereto as beneficial owner.—STARR v. STARR, [1935] S. A. S. R. 263.—AUS.

PART III. SECT. 4.

124 viii. —— ——.]—A., having large sums on deposit, gave the manager of his bank a number of deposit receipts in the joint names of A. & P., payable to them or either of them. He frequently took out sums & redeposited in the same terms. In an action by P. against A.'s exors. claiming that the sums in the joint names of A. & P. did not form part of A.'s estate:—Held: pltf. had failed to rebut the implication of a resulting trust which arose in favour of A. & his representatives, pltf. having failed to prove any intention on the part of A. to part with his property in the deposited money during his life, & a disposition to take effect only upon his death, if he should not previously have disposed of the money, could only be effected by a declaration of trust, which was admitted not to have been made by him.—OWENS v. GREEN, [1932] I. R. 225.—IR.

124 ix. —— ——.]—Where money was put on deposit receipt in the joint names of the owner of the money & that of a stranger, & where the latter, at the request of the original owner, refused to sign the joint deposit receipt, & upon the death of the owner refused to sign the receipt to enable his personal representative to receive the money:—Held: in the absence of proof of intention on the part of the original owner to benefit the stranger or proof of a relationship from which a presumption of advancement might be drawn, the proceeds must go to the personal representative of the deceased original owner of the money.—DOYLE v. BYRNE (1922), 56 I. L. T. 125.—IR.

124 x. —— ——.]—Money was deposited in a bank by X. in the joint names of X. & an infant X. kept possession of the bank-book:—Held: on X.'s death the remainder of the account did not pass to the infant, since the gift was testamentary & void.—MCKNIGHT v. TITUS (1933), 6 M. P. R. 282.—CAN.

124 xi. —— ——.]—An elderly lady & her nephew opened a joint account in the Commonwealth Savings Bank by the transfer of a large sum from an account in the lady's name. The nephew, who assisted his aunt in all her matters of business, did not contribute to the account, which was kept in funds by payments from the aunt's investments. The account was used solely for the purpose of supplying the aunt's needs. Moneys for this purpose were withdrawn by the nephew as required, the withdrawal slips being signed by both the aunt & the nephew. When the account was opened the aunt told the nephew & others that any balance remaining in the account at her death would belong to the nephew. Upon his aunt's death the nephew claimed the balance of the account:—Held: (1) the presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the aunt & her estate was rebutted by the evidence of her intention to benefit the nephew; consequently, his legal right to the balance by survivorship prevailed; (2) the gift thus conferred upon the nephew was not a testamentary disposition.—RUSSELL v. SCOTT (1936), 55 C. L. R. 440; 36 S. R. N. S. W. 454; 53 N. S. W. W. N. 178; 42 Argus L. R. 375; 10 A. L. J. 211.—AUS.

127a. —— ——.]—J. M., being in failing health & expecting death in a short time, deposited a sum of £10,000 with the B. Bank & received from the Bank a deposit receipt in this form: "£10,000 . . . Received from J. M. & J. D. M. (a minor)," the son of J. M., . . . "the sum of ten thousand pounds sterling for credit in deposit account. Not transferable. . . . Payable to either or the survivor. . . . This receipt must be produced when payment of either principal or interest is desired." By his will, after giving certain legacies, J. M. directed his exors. to hold the rest of his property in trust for J. D. M. until he should attain the age of twenty-five years, &, on his attaining that age, for him absolutely. Until J. D. M. attained that age the business of testator was to be carried on by the exors. There were other dispositions in case J. D. M. died under that age, an event which did not happen. On the death of J. M. the exors. withdrew & redeposited the sum of £10,000 & obtained a new deposit receipt for that sum in their own names. The business of testator was carried on at a loss. The business account kept by the exors. with the B. Bank was continually overdrawn. The exors. repeatedly paid the overdrafts out of the £10,000 & in so doing finally exhausted the whole sum. Both before & after he came of age J. D. M. took part in the management of the business. Soon after attaining the age of twenty-five J. D. M. claimed that he was entitled to the £10,000 deposited by J. M., & brought an action against the B. Bank to recover that sum as having been wrongfully & without his authority paid by the Bank to the exors.:—Held: by LORD WARRINGTON & LORD MACMILLAN, the exors. were entitled to receive the money & to apply it in due course of administration as directed by the will of J. M.; LORD THANKERTON agreeing on the ground that on the evidence as a whole J. M. did not purport to act as agent for J. D. M. in making the contract with the Bank, so as to make J. D. M. a contracting party, but that he alone contracted with the Bank, though for the benefit of J. D. M. as a third party; by LORD ATKIN, the contract was made by J. M. on behalf of himself & J. D. M., & if J. D. M. had ratified the act done on his behalf he would have made himself a party to the contract; but by his conduct he had represented to the Bank that he did not intend to ratify the act done on his behalf, having so acted he could not afterwards ratify it, & consequently he had never become a party to the contract.—MCEVOY v. BELFAST BANKING CO., LTD., [1935] A. c ii. ——.]—W., a member of a stockbroking partnership, credited his son's account in the client's ledger with £5,000 & debited his own account in the partners' ledger with the same sum. This was balanced on the other side of the account with shares to the face value of £13,000, which stood in the name of a certain bank as collateral for the loan account of W. The investments were sold from time to time & others substituted, & at the time of the death of W. were represented by securities to the face value of £9,000 which were in the name & custody of the bank. W. never informed the bank that he had made the shares over to his son, but requested them to accept release orders signed by his son & all dividends on the original & substituted securities were credited to the account of the son in the books of the firm. By a letter handed to his son W. informed the exors. of his will that the shares were the property of his son & did not form part of his assets & so informed one of the exors. verbally. W. did nothing further to perfect the gift of the securities but appointed his son as one of the exors. of the will :—Held : the securities did not form part of the estate of W. but were the property of his son, subject to the limitation that the excess, if any, of the value of the securities, when realised, over the sum of £5,000 belonged to the exors. as assets of the testator.—Re WILSON, GROVE-WHITE v. WILSON, [1933] I. 356a. Gift made in contemplation of death from incurable disease—Death from different illness—Gift valid.]—A donatio mortis causâ is not generally conditioned upon the donor dying from the same disorder as that from which he is suffering, & contemplates the probability of death, at the time it is made.

By a mtge. made in 1922 the widow of J., who was tenant for life under his will, mortgaged a farm to W., a brother of J., to secure £1,000 & interest at 5 per cent. The widow died in 1923, having appointed her two daughters, E. & X., exors. of her will. The mtge. contained no personal covenant for payment of the principal, & the mtgee. accepted interest at 3½ per cent., reduced in 1924 to 3 per cent. In 1924 W., who was on very friendly terms with his brother's family, gave the deeds relating to the farm, other than the mtge. deed, to E. & X., to retain in their custody. On Dec. 11, 1927, W., who had since 1922 been suffering from an incurable disease & knew that he could not possibly live long, called upon his nieces, who were aware of his state of health, & gave them an envelope indorsed in his own handwriting: "Deeds relating to X. farm to be given up at death. W.," saying: "I have brought this down for you; put it away." After he had left the house the envelope was opened, & was found to contain the mtge., which the nieces placed in their safe. On Jan. 23, 1928, W. died of pneumonia following a chill. In an action by his exors. for a declaration that the mtge. was a subsisting security & to enforce it:—Held: there was a valid donatio mortis causâ by W., & a release of the mtge. to the two daughters of J. for the benefit of his estate.—WILKES v. ALLINGTON, [1931] 2 Ch. 104; 100 L. The receipt was then handed to the sister, who kept it at her home, but periodically the deposit was uplifted by the depositor & redeposited with interest & further savings added to it. The depositor had a niece & nephew, her sister's children, &, on the sister's death in 1921, the name of the niece was substituted as the second name in the receipt, the receipt being thereupon handed by her to him. The depositor regarded her sister's family as her only relatives & their home as her own, &, on several occasions, she had stated to third persons that the sum on deposit was to go to the survivor of the persons named in the receipt. The depositor having died in 1930, survived by the nephew:—Held: the terms of the deposit-receipt, taken in conjunction with the depositor's expressions of intention, were sufficient to instruct a donation mortis causâ of the sum on deposit in favour of the nephew.—MACPHERSON'S EXECUTRIX v. MACKAY, [1932] S. as her agent under the power of attorney, instructed the bank to transfer the shares & money into his name. Testatrix died a few days later. The question arose as to whether there had been a good donatio mortis causâ of the shares & money or whether they formed part of the estate of testatrix. By her will testatrix gave her trustees a power of advancement in favour of the son, inter alia, for " the purchase of a business or a share in a business " :—Held: (1) the mere giving of the power of attorney was not in itself a sufficient parting by testatrix with her dominion over the shares & money to make it a donatio mortis causâ, but when testatrix instructed her son to transfer the shares & money into his own name, she parted with her dominion over the property, & there was a good donatio mortis causâ; (2) the question was one which arose in the administration of the estate, &, as the estate was being administered in England according to English law, it was a question which ought to be determined according to the law of England, subject to the condition that, the property being situated abroad, that which was said to constitute the parting with dominion ought to be something which would be an effective parting with dominion in the place abroad where the property was situated; (3) the power of advancement did not extend to an advance of a sum to be applied & invested with the trustees of Lloyd's as a fund which would be available to meet the son's liabilities, so as to enable him to become an underwriter at Lloyd's; (4) as such an advance would not be expedient for the trust as a whole, the ct. could not sanction it under Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 57 (1).—Re CRAVEN'S ESTATE, LLOYDS BANK, LTD. v. COCKBURN (No. 1), [1937] Ch. 423; [1937] 3 All E. The box was not delivered until after the death of deceased, &, on being opened, it was found to contain a post office savings bank-book, which showed a certain sum standing to the credit of deceased. It was not disputed that there was an intention to make a donatio mortis causâ:—Held: the intended donatio mortis causâ failed, as there was no delivery, actual or constructive, to A. D., since the mere instructions by deceased to her servant, & the obedience to these instructions, were not sufficient to make the servant an agent of the intended donee.—Re THOMPSON'S ESTATE, [1928] I. 559a. Guarantee of payments to contractor—Subject to due execution of work.]—A limited co. employed a building contractor to execute certain repairs & decorations to a building by an agreement under seal made between the co., one T. therein called the guarantor, & a bank, & the contractor. The agreement provided that the contractor should do the work for the sum of £1,500, to be paid in four equal instalments on named dates "subject to the said works being duly executed in accordance with this agreement." By clause 11 of the agreement the guarantor agreed with the contractor & with the bank, & undertook, that the co. should, subject to the said works being duly executed in accordance with the agreement duly & punctually make to the contractor the payments mentioned above, & that upon any default for three days on the part of the co. (written notice of which should be given by the contractor to the bank within six days of the default) in making any payment on the prescribed date, the guarantor would himself immediately make the payment so in default to the contractor. By clause 12 the bank agreed with the contractor & undertook, that upon any default for three days or more (written notice of which should be given to the bank by the contractor within three days of the default) on the part of the guarantor in making any payment under clause 11 the bank would immediately make the payment so in default to the contractor. The co. did not pay the first instalment. The contractor gave no notice either to the guarantor or to the bank. The contractor then issued a specially indorsed writ against the bank claiming the first instalment. The case was heard by an Official Referee, who found that at the date of the writ it was necessary to spend £80 in order to complete the work in accordance with the agreement. He deducted this sum from the amount claimed, & gave judgment for pltf. for the balance :—Held : the defts. were not liable.

By SCRUTTON & SLESSER, L.JJ., because it was a condition precedent to their liability that the works should be duly executed in accordance with the agreement, & the works were not so executed. By GREER & SLESSER, L.JJ., because the liability of defts. depended upon that of T., & he was never liable, because it was a condition precedent to his liability that pltf. should have given him notice of the co.'s default, & this notice had never been given.—ESHELBY v. FEDERATED EUROPEAN BANK, LTD., [1932] 1 K. f i. —— ——.]—By an agreement in writing pltf. let a house & shop to a tenant to hold the same as a monthly tenant at a certain monthly rent, the said rent to be paid regularly on the first of each month. There was a proviso that either party should have the right at any time to determine the tenancy by giving to the other one month's notice in writing of his intention so to do, the said notice to determine on any gale day. The following guarantee for the payment of the rent was endorsed on the agreement & signed by deft. : "I hereby guarantee the full & punctual payment of the rent reserved by the within agreement." Eight months' rent being in arrear pltf. sued deft. on his guarantee to recover the amount. Deft. admitted liability for the first month's rent but denied liability in respect of the seven other months, contending that he offered to guarantee payment of the rent on the implied condition that he should receive notice of any default by the tenant in making full & punctual payment, & that no notice was given to him, & accordingly he was unable to exercise his right to revoke his offer :—Held : deft.'s contention was unsustainable & pltf. was entitled to judgment for the amount claimed.—O'CONNOR v. SORAHAN, [1933] I. 561a. Guarantee of secured loan—Whether security for loan condition precedent.]—By a deed of guarantee for the repayment of a loan of £250,000 & interest, which recited that the lenders had at the request of the guarantors advanced to the borrowers £250,000 upon security of a charge on certain shares, the guarantors covenanted, in the event of the borrowers failing to make the repayments provided for, forthwith to repay to the lenders the said sum of £250,000 with interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. The deed further provided that whatever the position between the lenders & the borrowers, the guarantors should be liable for all moneys due as principal debtors & they were not to be released from liability by reason of time being given by the lenders or by their taking no steps to protect their securities. The shares above mentioned were at no time secured & had not in fact been issued. Upon default in repayment of part of the loan the liquidator of the guarantors rejected the proof by the liquidators of the lenders, contending that the security of the charge on the shares was a condition precedent to the guarantee :—Held : (1) upon a proper construction of the deed of guarantee, the contention of the liquidator of the guarantors was correct, & the guarantors were not bound by the guarantee. The existence of the shares was the basis of the contract of guarantee & this was not affected by the clause making the guarantors liable as principal debtors ; (2) the guarantors were not bound by the recital in the deed & were not estopped from setting up the facts relating to the shares.—Re PARENT TRUST & FINANCE CO., LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 608a. —— Claim for repayment of income tax—Whether maintainable.]—Where the payment of a sum advanced by a bank to a customer together with interest due or to become due thereon is guaranteed, & subsequently the whole sum due is paid by the guarantor, that is not a payment of interest by the guarantor but is a payment by him of a debt under the guarantee, not of a debt in respect of an advance made to him. He cannot, therefore, claim repayment of tax on " interest " on an advance from a bank under the provision of Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 36 (1). The question whether, where the interest on such an advance is added to capital each half-year in accordance with the custom of bankers & that is acquiesced in by the customer, the payment of the whole sum by the guarantor was only a payment of capital, was not necessary to be decided.—HOLDER v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1932] A. Defts. agreed to do so up to a specified amount if pltfs. would sign a guarantee protecting defts. against loss through M.L. failing to meet their liabilities. In the events which happened M.L. received advances from the New York branch of defts. which they were unable to repay. Defts. had in their custody cash & securities belonging to pltfs. & refused to deliver them to pltfs. on demand, on the ground that the indebtedness of M.L. exceeded the value of the cash & securities. Pltfs. brought this action to recover possession of the cash & securities, together with interest, & defts. counterclaimed for, inter alia, a declaration that they were entitled to retain the cash & realise the securities & retain the proceeds in part satisfaction of the indebtedness of M.L. :—Held : the indebtedness of M.L. to the New York branch of defts. was covered by the guarantee given to defts. by M.T., & the total amount of that indebtedness exceeded the value of the cash & securities of pltfs. which were in the possession of defts. ; & defts, were therefore entitled to retain the cash & securities in part satisfaction of their claim under the guarantee.—MANN, TAYLOR & Co., LTD. v. ROYAL BANK OF CANADA (1935), 40 Com. The husband was adjudicated bkpt. & his property was sold by the trustee in bkpcy., with the bank's consent, the purchase price of the property charged to the bank being duly paid over to the bank. The bank also realised the stocks deposited by deft. Deft. claimed that the agreement between herself & her husband that the husband was to be primarily liable on the guarantee had the effect of creating an equitable charge in her favour on the husband's property & she alleged that the trustee in bkpcy. wrongfully sold the property charged to the bank by her husband for less than he could have obtained for it, & she claimed from the trustee in bkpcy. the difference between the purchase price obtained & the price which she alleged ought to have been obtained :—Held : the agreement between deft. & her husband did not have the effect of creating an equitable charge upon the husband's property, & deft. had no cause of action against the trustee in bkpcy.—PRATT'S TRUSTEE v. PRATT, [1936] 3 All E. E. covenanted with the co. that the moneys of the estate should be deposited in a certain bank & should be drawn upon only by cheques countersigned by the same solr. as its agent ; & he also covenanted to indemnify the co. against all loss which it might incur under its bond. Moneys of the estate were stolen by the solr. through the use of blank cheques which E. had left with him after E. had signed them. In an action by a beneficiary of the estate judgment was given against E. as administrator & against the co. as surety. By third party notice the co. claimed to be entitled to be indemnified by E. This claim was dismissed & the co. appealed :—Held : the co. by requiring the estate moneys to be so deposited & by requiring the cheques to be countersigned by the solr. as its agent did not clothe him with such authority to intermeddle in the administration of the estate that it must now be said that in stealing the moneys the solr. was acting as agent for the co. ; the extent of his authority as agent for the co. was to countersign cheques, & the loss to the estate was not caused by the countersigning but by the use of the cheques, over which the administrator had full control, after they had been so signed ; & in handling the cheques so signed & the proceeds thereof the solr. was acting as solr. for the administrator & not as agent for the co. Co. under a hire-purchase agreement dated July 6, 1927, whereby the co., "the owners," agreed to let to one T., "the principal," a motor car on the terms that he should be at liberty to purchase the car at a fixed price, paying as a first payment £22 0*s.* 8*d.*, & thereafter monthly payments of £14 3*s.* 4*d.*, until the whole was paid. The payments by the principal under this agreement were guaranteed by deft. as surety under a document signed by her on July 6, 1927. The principal afterwards fell in arrears in payment of the monthly instalments, & on Feb. 3, 1928, he wrote to the owners offering a cheque for £20 drawn by a friend in part payment. On Feb. 4 the owners wrote accepting this cheque & stipulating that the rest of the arrears should be paid within one month. The cheque was sent to the owners, but the arrears, which amounted to £79, were not paid within one month, & the owners then took back the car, acting upon their powers under the hire-purchase agreement. On Sept. 18, 1928, the owners assigned their rights under that agreement to pltfs., who claimed £122 in all from deft. as surety:—Held: (1) there was a binding contract by the owners to give time to the principal debtor; (2) the liability for payments under the hire-purchase agreement was one & indivisible, & deft. was entirely discharged from her suretyship.—MIDLAND MOTOR SHOWROOMS v. NEWMAN, [1929] 2 K. from S. & Co. Applt., at the request of C., one of the twelve persons, allowed her to take the deeds deposited by her away for the purpose of raising a loan. S. & Co. having gone into liquidation, the bank called upon applt. to make good his guarantee. Thereupon resps. brought an action claiming that they were entitled to have all the deeds deposited by them under the terms of the charge discharged from the debt to which they were made liable to contribute under the charge, on the ground that, by applt. allowing C. to withdraw the deeds deposited by her, their risk had been increased :—Held : (1) there had been an alteration made in the position of those whose properties remained deposited as securities under the charge by reason of applt. allowing the withdrawal by C. of the deeds deposited by her, & they not having consented to the alteration, their properties, the deeds of which they had deposited, were discharged from all claims under the charge ; their right of marshalling had been affected by the withdrawal of the deeds of one of the parties, & the materiality of the alteration was a question to be decided by them ; (2) the same reasoning was applicable, whether what was contributed were securities or personal liability.—SMITH v. WOOD [1929], 1 Ch. 14 ; 98 L. 1224a. Guarantee of call on shares—Forfeiture of shares—Discharge of surety.]—On Dec. 29, 1920, D. & P., who afterwards became bkpt., joined with others in entering into an agreement with a co., whereby they guaranteed to them the payment of all the instalments then owing upon the shares in the co. specified in the schedule to the agreement, the amount of D. & P.'s liability being limited to the sum therein mentioned. The shareholders having been served with notice calling upon them to pay the instalments due on their respective shares on pain of forfeiture, & D. & P. also having been required to pay the same on or before Feb. 17, 1925, in case of non-compliance by the shareholders with the notice, & default in payment having been made by both the shareholders & by D. & P., the co. forfeited the bulk of the shares in pursuance of the power conferred upon them by their arts. of assocn. Art. 31 was as follows : "Any member whose shares have been forfeited shall, notwithstanding such forfeiture, be liable to pay to the co. all calls or other moneys, interest & expenses, whether presently payable or not, owing in respect of such shares at the time of forfeiture, together with interest thereon from the time of forfeiture until payment at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum or such less rate as may be fixed by the Board." On Sept. 9, 1925, a receiving order in bkpcy. was made against D. & P., & on Apr. 10 the co. lodged their proof for the amount claimed to be due on the guarantee. Upon a motion by the co. for the reversal of the decision of the trustee in rejecting their proof :—Held : (1) the right created by art. 31 was a new right which arose upon the forfeiture of the shares & one which placed a more onerous obligation upon the shareholders than if the shares had not been forfeited. The forfeiture, therefore, was an interference with the rights of the sureties as against the principal debtor ; (2) the co. had by exercising their option to forfeit the shares deprived the sureties of their lien on the shares which they would have been entitled to, had the co., in lieu of forfeiture, compelled them to pay the calls ; with the result that, upon the principles stated in Polak v. Everett, No. 1222, ante, D. & P. were discharged from their liability as sureties under the guarantee & the decision of the trustee in their bkpcy. in rejecting the proof of the co. was right.—Re DARWEN & PEARCE, [1927] 1 Ch. 176 ; 95 L. 1574a. —— Creditor member of trade association.]—The Liverpool Corn Trade Assocn., Ltd., is an organisation for promoting & protecting the interests of those engaged in the corn trade. Membership is confined to individuals, but cos., either public or private, engaged in the trade can have the advantages of membership by nominating, in the case of a private co., one representative, on condition that a guarantee by the directors is given to the assocn. that the co. will duly discharge its liabilities to members, & for the conduct of its representative. Deft. in 1931 had joined with S. & two other directors of S. & Co., Ltd., a private co., in a joint & several guarantee to the assocn., given in accordance with this provision. This action was brought by pltfs. claiming a declaration that they were entitled as trustees for ten firms & cos. who were creditors of S. & Co., Ltd., to enforce the guarantee in question. S. & Co., Ltd., got into financial difficulties & in 1935 S. executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors under which he was released from all " debts, claims, & demands whatsoever " which the other parties to the deed might have against him with the usual reservation of rights against sureties. Pltfs. & the ten firms & cos. whose debts made up the sum claimed were parties amongst others, to the deed of assignment :—Held : (1) the release in the deed of assignment operated to release all the joint guarantors & the position was in no way affected by the reservation of rights against sureties ; (2) " members of the assocn." meant members of the assocn. or any incorporated co. whose nominee or nominees is or are members of the assocn. ; (3) the assocn. was entitled to sue for the benefit of the members entitled & as trustee for them ; (4) " liabilities " in the guarantee meant all liabilities to individual members or to cos. whose nominees were members.—LIVERPOOL CORN TRADE ASSOCN., LTD. v. HURST, [1936] 2 All E. Part X.—Avoidance of the Guarantee.

1656a. —— Power to contract out of duty to disclose.]—A Harbour & Dock Board, having resolved to enlarge their dock, invited tenders for the work from numerous contractors, informing them where the contract for the work might be inspected & instructing them that they must make local & independent inquiries as to the nature of the surface, strata, soil & sub-soil or ground to be excavated, & the nature & height of the tides, & generally must obtain their own information on all matters affecting the construction, completion & maintenance of the works, & as to all matters which might influence them in making their tender & fixing the rates & prices therein, & that the Board would not be responsible for any information the contractors might obtain except such as was given in reply to a written inquiry addressed to the clerk or manager of the Board. Of several tenders received that of a co., K. & R., Ltd., was by far the lowest. The Board informed K. & R., Ltd., that they were not prepared to accept that tender unless K. & R., Ltd., procured a guarantee to the amount of £50,000 for the due performance of the contract. In compliance with this demand K. & R., Ltd., procured a joint & several bond from an insurance co. whereby that co. & K. & R., Ltd., jointly & severally bound themselves to the Board for the due performance of the contract by K. & R., Ltd. The Board accepted this guarantee, & K. & R., Ltd., entered upon the work in pursuance of the contract, which made the final certificate of the Board's engineers final & binding between the parties. In the course of the work the contractors encountered an unexpected quantity of water in the soil, & the expense of pumping was such that they could not continue the work without further funds. Thereupon the Board advanced them two sums of £20,000 & £25,000 to be repaid upon certain terms; but, notwithstanding these loans, the contractors failed to complete the contract & went into liquidation, & the Board's engineers made a final certificate showing over £78,000 due from the contractors to the Board. This sum included so much of the £45,000 lent to the contractors as remained unpaid at the date of their default. The Board sued the insurance co. on the joint bond :—Held : (1) the bond was a contract of guarantee & not a contract of insurance; (2) there was no such misrepresentation or non-disclosure of material facts by the Board as to invalidate the bond; (3) the loans of £20,000 & £25,000 being outside & independent of the contract, the amount due thereon ought not to have been included in the engineers' final certificate; inasmuch as the amount due & unpaid on the loans was unascertained, the amount due on the bond being equally undefined, the Board could not recover upon it.—TRADE INDEMNITY CO., LTD. v. WORKINGTON HARBOUR & DOCK BOARD, [1937] A. PART X. SECT. 2.

d i. ——.]—There is no universal obligation on a creditor entering into a contract of suretyship to make disclosure to the surety of all the facts relative to the dealings between the creditor & the principal. There must, however, be no undue concealment, which consists not merely in the omission to disclose such facts as need be mentioned in answer to the surety's questions, but also in the non-disclosure of those facts which the creditor must spontaneously disclose to him. The omission by the creditor to reveal to the surety every fact which under the circumstances the surety would expect not to exist amounts to an implied representation that it does not exist: & it depends upon the nature of the transaction in each case whether the fact not disclosed is so impliedly represented. Where a guarantee was given for the payment of "all moneys which are now or at any time hereafter may be due or owing to the co. from . . . on the general balance of his account with the co." there could not be at the time of its making any implied representation by the co. arising from the co.'s non-communication to the surety of the state of the account that there was no indebtedness to which the guarantee could apply.—NATIONAL MORTGAGE & AGENCY CO. They also claimed damages:—Held: (1) deft. co. did not disclose the report to any person other than its own solrs. & that this did not constitute a breach of contract with pltfs. within the meaning of the agreements; (2) deft. The action against deft. co. therefore failed; (4) the agreement entered into by M. not to disclose the confidential information furnished to him & to indemnify pltfs. for any loss or damage which they might suffer from a breach by a subscriber of the conditions upon which reports were furnished, was not void as being against public policy; (5) the disclosure by deft. M., although a breach of this contract, did not create the liability of pltfs. to be sued for libel; this liability did not arise directly or indirectly out of any act of the deft. Limited to claims by third parties.]—Pltfs. took a lease of premises from deft. railway co., &, by an agreement supplemental to the lease, defts. gave pltfs. permission to use a portable gangway, which could be moved over certain of defts.' railway lines. One of the terms was that pltfs. "agree & undertake to indemnify the co. against all claims & demands or liability whatsoever, whether in respect of damage to person or property, arising out of or in connection with the existence or user of the gangway." When pltfs. were using the gangway some trucks were shunted down the line, & the gangway was destroyed. Applt. carried on a business of obtaining & giving information as to credit, character, etc., & including the checking of cars in dealers' hands & reporting thereon. Resp. signed an "indemnity agreement," agreeing to treat in confidence the information furnished, to hold applt. harmless on account of any damages arising from publication or dissemination of information or careless handling of reports, & agreeing, "in consideration of receiving this service, & as a condition of its rendition," that neither applt. nor its employees should be responsible "for any loss that may occur to resp. through the use of the information furnished." Through careless car-checking reports, made without personally checking over the cars, in respect of a dealer, made by a local inspection agent of applt. & passed on to resp., resp. was misled, to its loss, & sued applt. for damages. Applt. claimed that it had not bound itself for more than reasonable care in the selection of its inspection agents, &, further, that, in any case, it was relieved from liability by the concluding clause of the indemnity agreement:—Held: resp. should recover. On Dec. 20, 1929, a train was dispatched by resps.' servants from London, & as it approached the bridge one of the carriage doors, which had swung open, struck two of applts.' workmen, killing one & seriously injuring the other. Resps. were adjudged to pay the representatives of deceased workman & the injured workman £3,614 1*s*. Resps. claimed indemnity in respect of that liability from applts. The trial judge found that the railway carriage door swung open by reason of its having been insecurely fastened at Fenchurch Street Station, owing to the negligence of resps.' servants, but held that under clause 34 (a) applts. were liable to indemnify resps. 1908a. —— —— Indemnity against loss on debentures—Sale of debentures by party indemnified.]—Deft. was the chairman of the S. Co., which at the end of 1921 was seeking to issue £15,000 First Lien Debentures to rank pari passu with a previous issue of first lien debentures of the same amount ; & deft., having interested pltf. in the matter, sent him a letter of indemnity, dated Feb. 17, 1922, in these terms : "Regarding the issue of £15,000 First Lien Debentures of the S. Co. at the price of £80 per £100 . . . I understand you are subscribing for £3,000 of the same at a cost to you of £2,400. In consideration of your giving me one-fourth of any profit you may receive on such investment, I hereby indemnify you against any loss thereon. The expression 'any profit' only refers to the redemption price of £100 per £80, which, when received, will show a profit of £20 per bond & the bonus out of the proceeds of any royalties on oil sales from the co.'s properties during the currency of the debentures. . . . The interest you will be entitled to receive from the co. is excluded from the consideration of profits." The debentures were redeemable on July 1, 1925, but they were secured by two debenture trust deeds which gave power to extend the due date, & in Apr. 1925, steps were taken which resulted in its extension to July 1, 1930. In May & June, 1925, a correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. in which pltf. announced his intention of selling the debentures, & deft. protested against this, claiming that they must be kept till their due date. On July 16, 1925, pltf. put the debentures up for sale, & in the absence of other bidders sold them to his son for £25. He then commenced proceedings to recover the amount of his loss, but the House of Lords decided that nothing was payable under the indemnity until the due date arrived. On July 18, 1928, the co. went into liquidation & pltf., having repurchased the debentures from his son, brought these proceedings to recover his loss :—Held : in selling the debentures pltf. had committed a breach of an implied term of the contract, & having failed to maintain the position essential to enable deft. to receive the consideration for the indemnity, he had committed a breach of a term going to the root of the contract. Deft. had elected by his pleadings in the previous action to treat the contract as at an end & pltf. could not therefore maintain the present action.—GUY-PELL v. FOSTER, [1930] 2 Ch. 169 ; 99 L. J. 9a. —— Land flooded at spring tides.]—In 1928 pltf. purchased a large strip of foreshore & let part of it for caravans & bungalows. She erected a fence round the land side, with gates at three places at which persons other than local inhabitants were charged 1*d.* toll. Deft., the proprietor of a tea shop at the Western end of pltf.'s land, claimed that the fence obstructed five public or customary rights of way. Four of the alleged public ways were over land flooded at spring tides. For the purpose of asserting these rights, deft. pulled down some of pltf.'s fence, & did not absolve himself from association with a mob which also pulled down another part of the fence. Deft., without joining the A.-G., counterclaimed for a declaration that the five ways were public, alleging that his tea shop gave him an interest in their remaining open which was not possessed by the general public & that therefore the fiat of the A.-G. was not necessary :—Held : (1) there was a public right of way over three of the ways claimed ; (2) the damage done by deft. was excessive ; (3) the fiat of the A.-G. was necessary.—SEATON v. SLAMA (1932), 77 Sol. 52a. Road leading to the sea.]—Pltf. claimed damages against several defts. for trespassing over his land, & asked for an injunction. Defts. alleged that they were lawfully exercising public rights of way. Evidence was given of public user by five different classes of persons, extending over the whole period of living memory, of two defined ways over pltf.'s land from a public high road to the sea at high-water mark. It was also proved that pltf.'s land was in strict settlement from 1856 to 1908, & that during that period there was never an owner capable of dedication. The county ct. judge held that there being no owner capable of dedication during the period of proved public user, he was not entitled to infer dedication from such user. He held also that the ways claimed by defts. had no sufficient terminus ad quem. On appeal :—Held : (1) although the public have only limited rights over the foreshore, the sea may be a sufficient terminus ad quem for a public way, which may now be proved, even though it does not lead to a public place ; (2) where there is evidence of public user of a way throughout the period of living memory, but there has been no owner of the land capable of dedication during that period, the tribunal of fact which has to decide the issue of dedication or no dedication may infer a dedication at some date anterior to the earliest proved user by an owner capable of dedication ; (3) there is no præsumptio juris to compel the tribunal to draw such an inference even from unrebutted evidence of long-continued & uninterrupted user.—WILLIAMS-ELLIS v. COBB, [1935] 1 K. 164a. Whether public highway—Claim of dedication.]—Pltfs. claimed a declaration that a way over deft.'s land was a public highway for vehicular traffic up to a certain point & for foot traffic from that point to Cockington Church on the ground that dedication should be presumed from evidence of uninterrupted use by the public throughout living memory & from evidence of reputation. The church was surrounded by deft.'s grounds, &, apart from a private path from his grounds, there was no access to the church except by the way in question. Deft. admitted that there was a church way for parishioners along the way, but he denied that there was any public right of way. Since 1774 the title to the property had been such that the owners could, if so minded, have dedicated the way to the public. The freehold of the church was in the incumbent & it had fulfilled all the functions of a parish church, but no person had a right to enter it without the permission of the vicar & churchwardens when it was not open for Divine service. The ct. found that apart from parishioners comparatively few persons had visited the church until about 1890, but since the War large numbers of persons had done so by the way in question & no one had ever been turned back. Owing to the increased use of the way notices were put up that visitors must keep to the path & not pick the flowers & that there would be no admission through the gate after 6 p.m. There was also a notice "No thoroughfare except to the church." In 1923 annoyance from visitors began & the gate was ordered to be locked after dusk, but no complaint was ever made, though some persons were actually prevented from going along the way to the church :—Held : on the evidence, the use of the way could properly be explained as having taken place by permission, & there was no reason why the ct. should presume from that use dedication to the public, & therefore the action failed.—A.-G. v. MALLOCK (1931), 146 L. 278a. —— "Actual enjoyment."]—The public had for forty years used a roadway at C. &, though there was some evidence of people being stopped or turned away, it was clear that in the majority of cases it had been used as a public highway without challenge. The owner had acquiesced in its inclusion in a town planning scheme as a public highway. No notice had been placed upon the way or served upon the local authority. No fence or gate had been erected to prevent its use before the end of 1934, & it was the removal of a fence or gateway then erected that was complained of in this case as an act of trespass :—Held : (1) upon the evidence, the roadway had been dedicated & used as a public highway ; (2) "actually enjoyed by the public as of right" in Rights of Way Act, 1932 (c. 45), s. 1 (1), means actually enjoyed by the public as of right, & the exercise of such right has been actually suffered by the owner for the period of 20 years ; (3) "as of right" in the same sub-sect. means in the exercise of a right vested in the public & not by permission of the owner from time to time given ; (4) "without interruption" in the same sub-sect. means without actual & physical stopping of the enjoyment of the right ; (5) defts. were entitled under Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1 (b), to costs to be taxed between solr. & client.—MERSTHAM MANOR, LTD. v. COULSDON & PURLEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1937] 2 K. sf. Track leading to foreshore.]—A proprietor, who owned the foreshore ex adverso of his lands, brought an action of declarator that there existed no right of way over a track about a quarter of a mile in length leading from a public road to the foreshore. The track was held to have been part of a road extending to the foreshore which became a public road in 1819, but which ceased to be maintained at public expense in 1836. It was proved that from 1865 to 1934, when the proprietor first attempted to close the track, it had been used by the public as an access to the foreshore for the bathing & recreation. The been at one time a public road, the foreshore at its terminus had acquired the character of a public place which it had never lost ; & further that, even if it was not established that the track had ever been part of a public road, the resort by the public to the foreshore for recreation had made the foreshore a public place prior to 1894, when the prescriptive period began ; (2) the extent of the public use of the track throughout the prescriptive period was consistent, not with tolerance by the proprietor, but with the assertion of a right by the public.

Opinion, per Lord MONCRIEFF, that a public road could not lose its character as such merely by failure on the part of the road authority to maintain it & without resort by them to the statutory procedure for closing ....—BUTE (MARQUIS) v. M'KIRDY & M'MILLAN, [1937] S. C. 93.—SCOT.

298a. —— —— —— Paths joining existing highways.]—Evidence of long public user, as of right, of a pathway or roadway for the purpose of passing from one public place to another, is not the less ground for inferring dedication because recreation may have been the sole motive of such user.

H. & W. were neighbouring freeholders, & the sites of their properties originally formed part of the D. estate. The property of H. was originally let on a long lease in 1878 to one G., together with a right of way over a rough road, of the nature of a timber road, leading up from the London Road towards the property & past the property to Box Hill. In 1916 H. acquired the freehold of the property, & took a conveyance of the roadway in 1924. W., without the consent of H., opened a small gate for pedestrians in the boundary fence. In the action H. claimed a declaration that he was the freeholder of the said roadway & an injunction to restrain W. from trespassing thereon. Evidence was given of public user between Box Hill & the London Road for purposes of pleasure:—Held: the evidence of public user led to a presumption that the land had been dedicated, & that the motive of such user was irrelevant.—HUE v. WHITELEY, [1929] 1 Ch. 440; 98 L. J. Ch. 227; 140 L. T. 531.

310a. ——.]—A local authority acquired, in 1875, an area of land under its Act, in accordance with which it laid out streets & made improvements in the area. But a plot of land included in the area was practically neglected for sixteen years, & was then handed over to the local authority's Parks Committee for use as an open space & was drained & gravelled. Later, a fountain & certain structures were erected on the plot, & the public used the plot freely & continuously. In or about 1928 the local authority wished to build a tuberculosis dispensary & offices on the plot, & the Minister of Health approved its appropriation for that purpose. In an action by the Attorney-General on relation for an injunction to restrain the local authority from building so as to interfere with the right of user & enjoyment of the plot by the public:—Held: the public had not acquired by user a public right of way over the plot; the public rights over the plot were general & to some extent precarious, & could be destroyed under Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 95.—A.-G. v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1931] 1 Ch. 254; 100 L. 311a. Footpath along sea cliff.]—Where there was evidence of the user by the public of a footpath along a sea cliff for some distance when its direction continued on a line slanting inland, & during the course of some twenty years, owing to erosion by the sea, the footpath so used had receded about twenty or thirty feet inland, though the ct. was always slow to infer the dedication of a public right of way along a sea cliff, such a dedication could be here inferred, having regard to the fact that part of the footpath did not run along the sea cliff, & no objection to its user had been made by the owner of the land over which the footpath continued after leaving the sea cliff. Pltfs. having claimed that there was no public right of way over a strip of land under a portion of a fence removed by defts.:—Held: the public had wandered from the original right of way over the land of pltfs. when it was in the hands of their predecessor in title & was derelict, but the user of the new way by the public had never been acquiesced in, & there had never been a dedication of it to the public use, & pltfs. were entitled to a declaration that there was no such public right of way.—BOULTWOOD v. PAIGNTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. 322a. —— User by sufferance.]—Deft. council claimed that there was a public footpath over pltf.'s park. On a plan attached to an inclosure award of 1816 no such public footpath was set out, & since that time down to 1901 the park had been in settlement with no one capable of dedicating a right of way to the public. The alleged footpath led from the public road over part of the carriage drive to the hall, & then turned off through the park, leading to only three farms & three or four cottages, & by its use a distance of about sixty-four yards was saved. There was no evidence of dedication, & the evidence of user was by the occupants of the farms & cottages & their friends:—Held: the proof of uninterrupted user was no more than evidence from which the ct. could infer that at some time the owner of the soil had dedicated the path to the public of which there was no evidence, & the evidence of user was user by sufferance only since 1816, before which no such public footpath was shown to exist.—FENWICK v. HUNTINGDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. 616a. —— Trees.]—As owner of a house at C., which was bounded on the west & north by public highways known as Mill Lane & St. Andrew's Road respectively, pltf. claimed the property in certain polled lime trees, proved to be about 110 years old, standing along the edge of the footpaths on the eastern & southern sides of those two highways. Pltf. having refused to comply with defts.' notice to remove the trees on the ground that they were dangerous & obstructions to traffic & defts. having, in consequence of her refusal, themselves removed three of the trees in St. Andrew's Road, pltf. brought this action, by which she claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from removing the remaining trees & for certain other relief. She claimed that the trees had been planted before the dedication of the roads as public highways, & that there had been excepted from such dedication the portions of the roads in which the trees were planted. There was no evidence of such restricted dedication as pltf. asserted, but, on the contrary, evidence that the trees in both roads were planted in areas over which, as ancient highways, the public had rights of passage. It was proved that some of the trees were, through disease & decay, so unstable as to be an immediate danger to the public & a nuisance to the highway, that others threatened to become a similar danger at short notice, & that the rest, including the three trees which defts. had removed, were a danger to traffic & a nuisance. On Aug. 16, 1920, the boundary of the borough of New Windsor was altered so as to include the parish of C. (Without), & it was admitted that the two roads were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large :—Held : (1) the roads were ancient highways upon which, after dedication to the public use, the trees were planted ; (2) even assuming pltf. had property in the trees, defts. as to those trees which had been proved to be a nuisance to the highway, had not merely a right but a duty to remove them, & as to the remaining trees, they were entitled to remove them as being obstructions to the rights of the public over the entire width of the roads, which were not limited to the use of the carriageways ; (3) the trees, as being parts of the " streets " or as produce of the soil thereof, vested under Public Health Act, 1875, in & came under the control of defts. as the highway authority, with the result that pltf. was not in a position to complain, & her action failed.—STILLWELL v. NEW WINDSOR CORPN., [1932] 2 Ch. 155 ; 101 L. In a case where a public carriage road was built upon a raised viaduct resting upon open arches & descending to the ground level upon embankments :—Held : (1) vesting of the road included (a) the whole masonry & structure of the viaduct, together with such soil as it actually occupied, (b) the soil of the embankments ; but not (c) the soil lying beneath & between the arches of the viaduct. The local authority, however, was entitled to a right of access to the latter at all times for the purpose of inspection & maintenance ; (2) such right of access was not forfeited by laches or acquiescence on the part of the local authority where it was necessary to enable such authority to perform its statutory duties.—HERTFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. LEA SAND, LTD. The footpath ran along the wall, & the carriage-way ran along the footpath. Applts., being minded to open a passage for vehicles from their land across the footpath & so into the carriageway, submitted to resps. a plan of the proposed works in accordance with the above enactment, & applied to them to sanction the works. Resps. found no fault with the proposed works as works, but they refused to sanction them, having regard to the safety of the public & the convenience of pedestrians & vehicular traffic which might use the highway:—Held: resps. were not authorised by the above sect. to take these matters into consideration in deciding whether to give their sanction to the proposed works; for the owner of land adjoining a highway has at common law a right of access to any part of the highway unless some statute has deprived him of the right, which sect. 62 of the Blackpool Improvement Act, 1879, did not purport to do.—MARSHALL v. BLACKPOOL CORPN., [1935] A. Another bridge was built by a local authority within one mile of the co.'s bridge, & a co. owning motor omnibuses made use of the new bridge for the purpose of conveying passengers & goods across the river in motor omnibuses:—Held: the motor omnibus co. had not substituted as a means of taking persons & articles across the river some means of conveyance other than the co.'s bridge & had not, therefore, contravened the provisions of the statute, & accordingly the proprietors of the old bridge were not entitled to an injunction restraining the motor omnibus co. from conveying passengers & goods across the new bridge.—LOFTSOME BRIDGE CO. The road was completed in 1878 as a waterbound macadamised road in accordance with the statutory requirements & was fully maintained by them for many years, but ultimately it deteriorated owing to the increase of traffic of a kind unknown in 1878, & unless resort was had to tar-spraying, or to some similar modern expedient, the existing traffic would rapidly destroy the road:—Held: (1) pltfs. were liable to maintain the road in the condition in which it was completed in 1878, & that liability still continued, notwithstanding the change of circumstances brought about by the increase of traffic; (2) the obligation to maintain the road rested on pltfs. alone.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. AUDENSHAW URBAN COUNCIL & DENTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 763; 97 L. 951a. —— ——.]—Relators were trustees of two wills, & as such owned lands abutting upon a certain road in the Metropolitan Borough of W. By notices dated Feb. 14, 1928, the trustees were required to pay to defts. two sums amounting to £1,473 11*s.* 2*d.*, being the estimated expenses of making up as a new street certain portions of the road upon which their lands respectively abutted. The A.-G. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, & relators as co-pltfs. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were not "new streets" within Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 & 1862. Defts. contended that the road in question had not been dedicated to the public before Mar. 20, 1836, & was therefore not repairable by them. Further, they said that each of the portions of the road was in fact & in law a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts, & that neither they nor their predecessors had at any time taken into charge or assumed the maintenance of the paving or roadway of the street of which the said portions of the road formed part:—Held: (1) on the evidence there was nothing to show that the road in question was anything else than a public highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The fact that repairs had been done by private owners for their own benefit was no evidence of any liability on their part to repair ratione tenuræ; (2) neither of the portions of road in respect of which the claim arose constituted a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts.—A.-G. & PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. WOOLWICH METROPOLITAN BOROUGH COUNCIL (1929), 93 J. 1146a. Removal of footway.]—A municipal corpn., in exercise of its powers as highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, widened a narrow street in the town by entirely removing a raised & kerbed footway on one side, & throwing its site into the carriage-way without any notice to or consent of the owner of the adjoining house & premises, who was also owner of one-half of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore the footway to a width of 1 ft. less than before:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly directed himself in law, & there was evidence upon which he was entitled to find that the action of defts. in removing the footway was unreasonable & arbitrary, & it was not sufficient for the action to be bonâ fide; & the order was properly made.—HOWARD-FLANDERS v. MALDON CORPN. 1191a. —— Obstruction during construction of new road.]—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road & erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, & was not watched, drove through it & fell with his car into the ravine, sustaining serious personal injury & damage to the car:—Held: the corpn. being in occupation of the land under construction as a new road, pltf. was not a trespasser upon private property, but an invitee, to whom they owed a duty to warn of any hidden danger; the unlighted fence was in the circumstances a concealed trap, &, pltf. not being guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were liable to him in damages for negligence.—OLDHAM v. SHEFFIELD CORPN. 1191b. —— Trench dug in unfinished road.]—Defts. in execution of a housing scheme were laying out a new road running eastwards from a certain highway & closed at its eastern end by a quickset hedge. Footpaths had already been laid out & edged with kerbstones; houses were being built on the northern side & heaps of earth & building materials made the footpath on this side impassable; the footpath on the south side was still unfinished, but was traversable; it was bounded by a fence of wooden posts & bars; the middle of the road was levelled but not metalled; across it, for laying an electric cable, defts. had cut a trench which they left unfenced & by night unlighted. They did not prevent persons, whether intending occupiers of houses or others, from walking down the new road. Pltf. on a Sept. evening, while there was still daylight, walked with a companion down the highway & into the new road along the southern footpath. Through a gap in the fence they went across other land occupied by defts. to a golf course. They returned somewhat hurriedly when it was growing dark, & pltf fell into the trench & was injured:—Held: the trench being apparent to all, there was nothing in the nature of a concealed danger or trap, & defts were not liable to pltf., who was a mere licensee.—COLESHILL v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1928] 1 K. PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 7.

o i. —— ——.]—A public road crossed a stream by a bridge. There was a fence between the road & the land adjoining it, erected by the proprietors of the latter. At a point immediately adjoining the bridge there was a gap, 15 feet wide, in the fence. A pedestrian, on a dark night, mistaking this gap for the road, walked through it & fell into the stream & was drowned. o ii. —— ——.]—Defts. constructed a bridge across a navigable stream, having in it a draw or swing to enable vessels to ply on the river. There was not any gate or other protection to guard the approaches to the bridge when swung. A horse belonging to pltf. broke away from the person in charge of him, escaped out upon the public road, & ran a distance of about two miles to the bridge, reaching it while the draw was open to allow a vessel to pass, & rushing into the gap was drowned:—Held: deft. municipality could not be made answerable for the loss of the horse.—STEINHOFF v. KENT CORPN. The place of crossing was in a dangerous condition, by reason of the tracks not being ballasted but simply resting upon exposed sleepers. The car was imprisoned there & run into by a street car, & pltfs. were injured & the car damaged:—Held: the city corpn. were liable since, although no obligation to repair existed, there was a trap or concealed danger.—JAMES v. TORONTO (1925), 57 O. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance, &, in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be assoilzied.—KEOGH v. EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES, [1926] S. PART VIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

sa. Right to rebate—Basis of calculation.]—Resp. village, an urban municipality within applt. county, was subject by statute to an annual general levy by the council of the county for county road purposes. Under a provision of an Ontario statute of 1926, repealed & re-enacted as sect. 28 (5) of Highway Improvement Act, R. S. Ont., 1927, the village first became entitled to a rebate in each year of 75 per cent. of the general annual rate raised in the village in the previous year. The annual general rate imposed in the years 1926, 1927 & 1928 included sums required by the council of the county to meet the interest & sinking fund charges upon debentures issued by it before 1926 in order to raise money for constructing & improving roads forming part of the county road system :—Held : in fixing the sum upon which resp. village was entitled to the 75 per cent. rebate the applt. county was bound to include the amount raised by it in the village towards the interest & sinking fund charges upon the debentures.—LINCOLN COUNTY CORPN. v. PORT DALHOUSIE VILLAGE CORPN., [1931] A. 1260 xxv. —— ——.]—A break in a water main of deft. city having occurred about Jan. 22, the city made a cut in the granolithic sidewalk at that point & excavated the earth to the water pipe. The excavated earth & some gravel were thrown back into the hole, &, beginning about the following Apr. 10, the excavated surface was kept under observation for subsidence, but it was not until about the following July 5 that the city's department in charge of resurfacing sidewalks was requested to act, & from Apr. 10 to July 9 there was a subsidence of about 24 inches & on nine occasions refilling was found necessary. On the intervening June 5 pltf. wife tripped, in a hole in the excavation area where a subsidence of four or five inches had taken place, & was injured. She had passed over the place in question many times, the latest, earlier on the evening of the accident. The trial judge found that the delay in repairing the sidewalk was intentional & due to the awaiting of such a rainfall or rainfalls as would in the opinion of some official cause a final settlement. The expert testimony was that now the curing & placing of cement may be done in winter months at a cost but little greater than at other seasons :—Held : said testimony had not been reasonably met & could not be ignored as merely theoretical; &, aside from it, the city should be held negligent in delaying the repair work beyond Apr. or May.—BRENNAN v. WINNIPEG CITY, [1936] 2 W. g (p. 403) i. —— —— ——.]—The law does not impose an unvarying obligation on a traveller using a city or country road of remembering all the pitfalls & dangers therein which he may have seen on previous journeys. The most that can be expected of a traveller who has knowledge of dangerous conditions is that the degree of care which he exercises should be reasonably commensurate with his knowledge. Where a municipality digs, for its own purposes, a pit extending into the road allowance it is bound to make the adjoining road safe for travellers.

1266a. —— Non-repair of traffic stud.]—Pltf. whilst cycling along a road in defts.' area reached a line of traffic studs at the same time as a motor-car. As the car passed her one of the studs which had become loose shot out & struck her bicycle with such force as to overturn it, & pltf. was thrown to the ground & injured. The studs were inserted in the road by defts. as the highway authority under the powers conferred on them by Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 48, for the purpose of regulating the traffic, & there was evidence that the particular stud had been defective for some time. In an action brought by pltf. for damages for personal injury defts. contended that the stud formed part of the highway, & that pltf. had not proved misfeasance, for which alone a highway authority could be held liable :—Held : assuming, but without deciding, that the stud was physically part of the highway, the placing therein of the stud in such a manner that it became defective amounted to the placing of a nuisance on the highway, & defts. could not take advantage of the cases which dealt with maintenance of the highway, because the stud was not brought on to the highway as part of the maintenance of the highway under the Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), but for the purposes of traffic direction under the powers conferred on defts. by Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43).—SKILTON v. EPSOM & EWELL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1937] 1 K. owned by the driver was injured by the car running into a ditch dug by the deft. village across a street at an intersection. Over the ditch was a culvert 24 feet long, which was covered in by road material, except for a space of about two feet at each end. Deft. was under a statutory duty to keep its roads, culverts, etc., " in a reasonable state of repair, having regard to the character of the road, culvert . . . & the locality in which the same is situated," & the statute made it liable for damages sustained by reason of default in carrying out that duty. Pltf. alleged that his injuries were caused by deft.'s negligence in allowing the ditch to become filled with growing weeds & grasses which obscured it, & in not erecting signals or barriers around the ditch :—Held : the village was not negligent in constructing the ditch & maintaining it in the condition in which it was at the time of the accident.—BARTOK v. TANTALLON VILLAGE, [1937] 2 W. These signs were at some distance from the excavation. The road-superintendent put up a barricade with a red lantern & a detour sign at a place where the roads fork. This consisted of a board extending about half-way across the travelled portion of the highway, supported at one end by a telegraph pole & at the other by an iron rod set into the road :—Held : not a " substantial barricade " within Highway Improvement Act.—RUTTAN v. R., [1931] 1 D. The judge held that the platform was a " trap," because of the fact that it differed very little in colour, if at all, from the rest of the highway ; & he awarded pltf. damages. Deft. appealed :—Held : the appeal should be allowed, since the platform was properly placed, & there was no evidence that deft.'s failure to furnish more light at or near the platform than it did supply or to paint the platform amounted to misfeasance which left the highway in disrepair.—KNIGHT v. WINNIPEG, [1930] 1 W. q (p. 408) i. —— ——.]—Deft. municipality when in pursuance of its statutory powers it was constructing a sewer along the side of a highway erected a barricade of planks against which the earth taken from the excavation was piled up. The barricade & the pile of earth occupied so much of the sidewalk that a path only 18 inches wide was left behind the barricade for the use of pedestrians. Owing to ordinary rainfall & the moist character of the earth so piled up, there was a seepage of water carrying slimy particles of clay through the spaces between the planks resulting in the surface of the pathway becoming dangerously muddy & slippery. sn. Areas forming part of sidewalk—Left uncovered.]—On a dark night one of pltfs., wife of her co-pltf., stepped into an area, one of several, in the sidewalk of a street in a town & was injured. The areas were constructed as part of a building adjacent to the sidewalk & were for the benefit of the owners or tenants of the building. No authorisation by the town corpn. for the construction of the areas was shown, but it appeared that, since the year 1900, the corpn had looked after the coverings of the areas, treating them as part of the sidewalk. Before the accident, the area into which pltf. stepped had been 1372a. —— —— Liability of water company.]—A water co., at the request & expense of the owner of a house, laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop-cock was protected by a cover or guard-box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge :—Held : the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard-box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—CHAPMAN v. FYLDE WATERWORKS CO., *[1894] 2 Q. Under the governing legislation, the dedication of said land as a public street was effective forthwith on registration of the plan. The street was never graded or used as a street, & there were golf tees, greens, etc., thereon. After the street had been so used for a number of years, pltf. bought a tract of land bounded by the street & erected a small house thereon in which he lived. Pltf. complained that many golf balls were driven on to his property & that players trespassed thereon in search of the balls & that he was obstructed by said use by the club of said land in his right to use it as a public street. 1435a. Street traders—Licence—Application to renew—Duties of borough council.]—(1) The remedy by appeal to petty sessions given by London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1927 (c. xxii.), s. 35 (2), to a street trader who is aggrieved by the refusal of the renewal of his licence as a street trader is equally beneficial, convenient & effectual as mandamus would be. Mandamus will therefore not lie to a Metropolitan borough council to compel them to hear & determine a street trader's application for renewal of a licence.

(2) In deciding such applications, the council is an administrative body, not a judicial one; it may therefore properly take into account a report of a committee, & its decision will not be invalidated merely by the fact that some members taking part in it were not present at an earlier meeting when the applicant was heard.

(3) Semble: the Act does not contemplate the calling of evidence before the council on such applications; but the justices at petty sessions who hear an appeal can conveniently hear such evidence as may be necessary.—R. v. LEWISHAM CORPN., Ex p. JACKSON (1929), 93 J. He was summoned for selling goods from a barrow without a licence contrary to L.C.C. (General Powers) Act, 1927, s. 39. The magistrate dismissed the summons on the ground that the borough council having granted a licence, they could dispute its validity; & also upon the ground that the prosecution was instituted to test the system of one-day licences & was not bona fide:—Held: licences could only be granted in accordance with the provisions of the Act, & any licence issued otherwise was invalid. Obstruction unreasonable.]—Where a highway is obstructed for building operations, & the obstructor has obtained the appropriate licence from the local authority, a person suffering inconvenience or loss from the inconvenience can only recover damages in a case where the obstruction is unreasonable, either as to quantum or duration.

Per LAWRENCE, L.J. : When the owner of a house abutting on a public street desires to undertake building operations, & has obtained the appropriate licence from the local authority under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), or similar statutes relating to other places, it cannot be contended that the necessary scaffolding & hoardings are illegal & a public nuisance unless they were erected in a manner or place not authorised by the licence, or maintained for a longer period than by the licence authorised.—HARPER v. HADEN (G. R. 279 ; 2 D. L. R. 582.—CAN.

q iii. —— Municipality liable only for gross negligence.]—The effect of the term " gross negligence " in a statute which imposes on a municipality the duty of keeping its streets in repair, but provides that it shall not be liable for injuries resulting from snow or ice upon a sidewalk " except in cases of gross negligence," is that its duty in cases within the proviso is substantially lower than its duty to keep its streets free from other defects & dangers not so specified.—JOHNSON v. ST. q vi. —— ——.]—In an action against a rural municipality for injuries sustained by falling on a sidewalk in a village therein of a few hundred people, the sidewalk having been made slippery by snow :—Held : although the municipality did not have any system of inspecting such streets during the winter & did not remove the snow therefrom or sprinkle cinders or sand thereon, it was not guilty of " gross negligence " within sect. 626 of Municipal Act, R.S.M., 1913. It cannot be " gross negligence " not to do what it is the custom not to do.—CHRISTIANSON v. CLANWILLIAM RURAL MUNICIPALITY, [1933] 3 W. W. R. 415.—CAN.

q vii. —— ——.]—On appeal from the dismissal of an action against a city for damages for personal injuries caused by falling on an icy sidewalk :—Held : there was no evidence of gross negligence on the part of deft. ; &, therefore, since its charter provided that the city should not be such accidents unless in cases negligence, the action failed.—WALLER v. ST. Part X.—Interference with Highways under Statutory Powers.

1761a. Duty of local authority—On request to exercise statutory powers.] — A local authority, requested to carry out in a "street laid out but not dedicated" constructive works under its statutory powers, need not necessarily inquire into the title of those making the request. But it must, in considering whether compliance with the request will be a lawful exercise of the powers, have regard primarily to the physical conditions obtaining in the area of the proposed operations; & those physical conditions will be one of the principal factors in determining whether relevant statutory definitions are complied with. This applies to powers conferred by either public general or private local statutes.—DAVIES v. RIPON CORPN., [1928] Ch. 884; 97 L. J. Ch. 479; 139 L. T. 636; 92 J. P. 153; 26 L. G. R. 530.

1775a. ——.]—Defts., who owned & used traction engines for the purposes of their business, drove two of these engines on a very hot day in July over a highway belonging to pltfs., who were the highway authority for the district. The highway, which had been constructed as a first class main road for the purpose of bearing traffic of all sorts, had a mexphalte surface. In passing along the most exposed part of the highway, the driving wheels of these engines sank into the road at a point where the surface was very soft, with the result that the road was damaged. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover extraordinary expenses, pursuant to Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12. They also claimed damages for wrongful abuse of the highway by defts. & for nuisance & negligence:—Held: as agricultural traffic, including heavy traction engines, was admittedly part of the ordinary traffic, & the weights in the present case were normal, no claim for excessive weight or for extraordinary traffic could arise under the Act of 1878; there was no excess whatever by defts. of the lawful use of the highway & no wrongful abuse of their rights of passing & repassing: the injury to the highway was due to a peculiar & unique conjunction of heat & of atmospheric & other conditions; defts.' vehicles did not constitute a nuisance, & there was no negligence on the part of defts.—EASTBOURNE COUNTY BOROUGH v. FULLER & SONS (1928), 93 J. The co. stopped up & enclosed part of such street & formed a cul-de-sac. They constructed a warehouse abutting upon the pavement in such cul-de-sac. The warehouse had flaps which opened across the pavement, & for forty years the co. loaded & unloaded goods from such flaps across the pavement into & from vans standing in the cul-de-sac from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily. All the usual steps were taken under Highways Act, 1835 (c. 50), in respect of the diversion, except that at no time did the justices view the new highway in accordance with sect. 91 of the Act. From 1911 the old highway had been built over and the new highway continuously used. Two frontagers claimed a declaration that the new highway was repairable by the inhabitants at large :—Held : (1) the proper proceedings to test this question were proceedings in a ct. of summary jurisdiction under the Private Streets Works Act, 1892 (c. 57) ; (2) this was not a proper case for the ct. in the exercise of its discretion to make a declaration ; (3) the Attorney-General was not a necessary party to the action ; (4) the substituted highway would not be repairable by the inhabitants at large until Highways Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 91, had been complied with ; (5) it could not be assumed in a recent case that all formalities had been complied 2178a. Proceedings for removal—Whether restrained by injunction.]—Pltf., having purchased certain premises in the metropolis, erected buttresses for the purpose of improving the wall abutting on the highway. The local authority took out a summons before a magistrate against pltf. under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 119, to compel pltf. to remove the buttresses, on the ground that they were an encroachment on the highway. Pltf., alleging that the site of the buttresses was not part of the highway, then brought an action against the local authority & moved for an injunction to restrain them from interfering with the buttresses & from going on with the proceedings before the magistrate to determine any questions to be determined in the action:—Held: though the ct. had jurisdiction to restrain proceedings before a magistrate if it was satisfied that he had no jurisdiction or that owing to the special circumstances the proceedings before the magistrate ought not to be allowed, yet in the present case, as the magistrate had jurisdiction, & as there were no special circumstances, the motion must be dismissed.—WILLIAMS v. DEPTFORD URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1924), 41 T. Therefore a charge, framed under sect. 75 of the Act of 1817, of setting up dead shores in a public street without a licence, failed, the same offence, with different penalties & procedure, being dealt with in sects. 122 & 123 of the later Act.

The amount not having been paid, the council on Jan. 1, 1926, applied to a magistrate under sect. 116 (1) of the above Act of 1894 to fix the amount of the expenses & to make an order that no part of the structure should be let for occupation until after payment thereof. The magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that more than the period of six months limited by sect. 11 of the above Act of 1848 had elapsed between the time when the matter of the complaint arose & the date when the complaint was made :—Held : the six months' limitation of time applied to proceedings under sect. 116 (1) of the Act of 1894, & the time ran from the date of the demand, & the magistrate's decision must be affirmed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. OWNER OF 14, LEE-STREET STEPNEY (1926), 135 L. In 1904 her husband became the tenant of a field to the south of & adjoining the house & land. The field fronted on E. road. In 1907 deft. purchased the field, but entered into a tenancy agreement letting it to her husband, & from that time the field & the house & land had been separately assessed by the local authority though in fact the tenancy agreement between deft. & her husband ceased to exist about 1918. In 1920 E. road was made up, the usual course being followed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 150 & 257, with the result that pltfs. claimed a charge, for the admitted proportion due from deft. of the expenses incurred in making up E. road, on the whole of deft.'s property, including her house & grounds as well as the field, as fronting, adjoining or abutting on E. road :—Held : the house & grounds & the field must be considered as being one close, & as such the whole was liable to a charge for making up E. road as fronting, adjoining or abutting thereon. — ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. O'BRIEN (1927), 91 J. 2279a. —— Asphalt in place of flags.]—The predecessors of resp. corpn. by notice adopted H. Road under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 152. In accordance with the provisions of Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), resps. prepared a list of roads repairable by the inhabitants at large. H. Road was therein stated to be repairable by the local authority as to the carriageway, but not as to the footway. There was some evidence that the road had never been made up. Resps. were empowered by a local Act to serve notice upon the frontagers to make, curb, flag, & complete the footway, & if through the frontagers' default, they executed the work themselves, to apportion the whole cost on the frontagers in the case of a road not repairable by the inhabitants at large, & half the cost in the case of a road repairable by the inhabitants at large. Such notice was served in respect of H. Road &, resps. having done the work, apportioned the whole cost on the frontagers. The notices required the frontagers to make, flag & complete, but in fact the resps. did not flag the road, but asphalted it :—Held : (1) H. Road was a road repairable by the inhabitants at large &, in any event, resps. could only recover half the cost ; (2) the work specified in the notice must be carried out & the use of asphalt in place of flags was not a proper compliance with the notice, & resps. could not recover the cost of the work done.—FINNEY v. BIRKENHEAD CORPN., [1936] 2 All E. 2322a. —— Under local Act.]—By the C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, it is provided that whenever the corpn. put in force the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, "they may before themselves executing any works as therein provided recover in a summary manner the amount of the estimated cost thereof from the owners in default." On June 27, 1935, the local authority served a notice, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, upon resp., the owner of premises fronting on a certain road, requiring him to do certain street works. On June 28, 1935, resp. conveyed the premises to a third person. On Oct. 4, 1935, the local authority served a notice upon resp., under C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, demanding payment of certain sums in respect of the estimated cost of the works, which works had not then been executed. Resp. refused to pay any part of the amount claimed & the local authority thereupon on Dec. 20, 1935, lodged a complaint claiming payment. The magistrates were of opinion that there could be no default until the expiration of the time given in the notice to repair, & that as at the expiration of that time resp. was no longer the owner of the premises, resp. was not the "owner in default" within C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, & they held that he was not liable to pay the amount claimed. The local authority appealed :—Held : "owner" in the C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, referred to the owner at the time of the service of the notice to execute the street works, & if such owner failed to execute the works, he became & remained for the purposes of that sect. the "owner in default," notwithstanding a conveyance of the property to a third person. Resp. was therefore liable to pay the amount claimed by the local authority.—CROYDON CORPN. v. OLDAKER, [1937] 1 K. B. 337 ; [1936] 3 All E. R. 360 ; 106 L. J. K. B. 190 ; 155 L. T. 557 ; 100 J. 2401a. —— Used for deposit of ashes.]—By Carlisle Corpn. Act, 1887, s. 192, it was provided that "No ry. co. shall be deemed to be an owner or occupier in respect of any land of such co. upon which any street shall wholly or partially front or abut & which shall be used by such co. solely as part of their line of railway or sidings & shall have communication with such street & the expenses incurred by the corpn. under the powers of the Public Health Acts . . . shall be paid by the other owners having frontages abutting on such street . . .":—Held: land used by a ry. co. for the purpose of depositing ashes thereon did not fall within the exemption contained in that sect.

I am of opinion Mr. Macmorran's argument cannot prevail. Indeed, had it been addressed to me upon sect. 22 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, I should have doubted much whether this land had been used by the ry. co. solely for the purposes of their line of railway, sidings, station or works (PHILLIMORE, J.).—Re CARLISLE CORPN. & SAUL'S EXORS. 2405a. Burial ground "attached" to place of worship.]—The exemption from liability for the expenses of private street works given by Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 16, to a burial ground "attached" to a "place appropriated to public religious worship, which is for the time being by law exempt from rates for the relief of the poor," extends only to a burial ground in physical attachment or contiguity to the building, & does not include a burial ground at a distance, "attached" to the place of worship in the functional sense that it is owned & maintained by the congregation of the place of worship for their members.—HOLY LAW SOUTH BROUGHTON BURIAL BOARD v. FAILSWORTH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1928] 1 K. 2405b. Vacant land adjoining chapel.]—An objection was made by the trustees of a chapel to the inclusion in a provisional apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), of certain vacant land adjoining the chapel, on the ground that the land was exempt from expenses under sect. 16 of that Act & Poor Rate Exemption Act, 1833 (c. 30), s. 1. The trustees were owners of the land, & at the time of the provisional apportionment it was their intention to erect a Sunday school thereon communicating by a corridor with the chapel:—Held: the land was not exempt from expenses as a "place" or "premises" exclusively appropriated to religious worship within the above Acts, as the words "place" & "premises" refer to buildings only, & cannot include a piece of vacant land; & there was no evidence on which it could be held that the land was within the curtilage of or formed part of the site of the chapel.—ILFORD CORPN. v. MALLINSON (1932), 147 L. 2439a. —— Sale by owner—Necessity for demand on purchaser—Limitation of action.]—Defts. being a local authority having duly made a final apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 12, of the expenses of certain private street works, demanded in 1910 the amount thus apportioned from an owner of land abutting on the street thus made up. In 1927 the latter sold the land in question to pltf. without having satisfied defts.' demand, & pltf. then proceeded to erect houses on the land in respect of which he became entitled to a subsidy. Defts. thereupon claimed to set off against the subsidy the amount of their claim against the owners for the time being of the land in respect of the apportioned expenses, together with interest thereon :—Held : (1) although defts. might have lost their right to sue the original owner for the expenses they were not prevented from suing pltf. as a subsequent owner for the time being. A demand on such owner was necessary to complete the cause of action for such expenses & Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until such demand had been made; (2) on the footing that Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, was applicable, that sect. did not apply to defeat a claim against pltf., the owner for the time being, because defts. had no present right to receive the sum set off from pltf. until he became owner & twelve years from that date had not elapsed.—DENNERLEY v. PRESTWICH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] 1 K. 2447a. —— ——.]—An urban sanitary authority, acting under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), resolved to execute certain private street works in a street in their district, & to contribute a certain portion of the expenses thereof, & that in settling the apportionment of the balance of the expenses thereof, regard should be had to the greater or less degree of benefit to be derived from the works, by the premises of the frontagers, & they approved provisional apportionments on the frontagers which were duly served & deposited in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Two of the frontagers objected to the provisional apportionments on their premises, before justices, who expressed the opinion that the proposed works were not unnecessary; that the estimated expenses were not excessive; that the premises of the objectors should not be excluded from the apportionment; but they stated that they considered the proposed works were unreasonable in that it was not reasonable that the objectors should bear the whole of the amounts shown in their provisional apportionments. Accordingly they approved the plans, sections, specifications, & estimates of the urban sanitary authority, but quashed in part the apportionments on the objectors' premises, by reducing each of these two apportionments by £100. They confirmed the apportionments on the other frontagers: —Held : the justices had sought to compel the urban sanitary authority to increase their contribution at the risk alternatively of sacrificing the scheme as a whole. It was not within the province of the justices, directly or indirectly, to compel the urban sanitary authority to make a larger contribution than that which they had already agreed to grant.

Upon the further consideration of the case, the justices must adopt one of three courses: increase the apportionments on the other frontagers to satisfy the balance of £200; quash the whole of the apportionment; or adjourn the matter, giving the urban sanitary authority the opportunity of considering whether they would pass a new resolution increasing their contribution by the £200 (per CUR.).—CHATHAM CORPN. v. WRIGHT (1929), 142 L. 2449a. Time fixed by order—Reasonable time—What must be considered.]—Under sects. 33, 34 of Cardiff Corpn. Act, 1884, the corpn. made an order that a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, should be paved, kerbed, etc., within two months. The estimate & plan deposited in accordance with sect. 33 of the Act showed that under part of the street a sewer was to be laid by the corpn. while the work was being done, & the order showed that some of the frontagers were required to connect the works which they were required to do with the new sewer. Certain frontagers did not comply with the order, & the work was done by the corpn., &, after service of notice of apportionment of the expense of the demand for payment, the corpn. applied to the ct. by originating summons, for a declaration that the proper proportion of the costs of the work, with interest to date of payment, was a charge upon the premises of those frontagers, in accordance with sect. 54 of the Act:—Held: the time fixed by the order was not, in the circumstances, unreasonable; nor was there any evidence to establish that if the frontagers had done the work themselves the corpn. would have hampered them by laying the sewer simultaneously with their work. The frontagers were entitled to comply with the order & to restrain any interference with them in doing so, but not having so complied, they were liable for the expense of the work being done for them & the corpn. were entitled to the relief claimed.—CARDIFF CORPN. v. CARDIFF PURE ICE & COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. 2466a. —— Powers of magistrate.]—B. Corpn. proposed to execute certain private street works under Birmingham Corpn. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 46-50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corpn. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment:—Held: inasmuch as the corpn. had not resolved that the apportionment should be on any basis other than frontage, the stipendiary magistrate could not direct an apportionment on any other basis. Subject to that limitation, he must consider & determine, upon evidence, whether the proposed works were in any, & what, respect unnecessary, & must have regard to any alternative proposals, if resps. made any & supported them by evidence, & to the cost thereof.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. MOTHER-GENERAL OF CONVENT OF SISTERS OF CHARITY OF ST. 2471a. —— Insufficient particulars.]—By the Birkenhead Improvement Act, 1884, Sched. II, it is provided that, when certain works for the improvement of private streets are undertaken by the corpn., the estimated expenses of executing the works shall be provisionally apportioned among the premises fronting or adjoining or abutting on such street, & that the provisional apportionment "shall also state whether the apportionment is made according to the frontage of the respective premises, or not, & the measurements of the frontages & the other considerations (if any) on which the apportionment is based." The corpn. proposed to carry out certain works, & made a general provisional apportionment which purported to be "principally according to the frontage of the respective premises & having regard to all the circumstances of the case & the amount & value of the work already executed by or on behalf of certain frontagers," but which did not specify the particular "circumstances of the case" or particulars of the "value of the work already executed," with the result that it was not possible for the correctness of the amount of the apportionment to be checked by each individual frontager, including applt., who took the preliminary objection that the requirements of the statute

Street, in a township thereby annexed to the City, but later statutes postponed until May, 1925, the date for completing the work. In 1910 the City had no power to charge the cost of paving streets against the frontagers, but statutes of 1911 & 1914 gave the City that power in the case of permanent paving. In July, 1925, the City passed a resolution that S. Street, which had not been macadamised, should be permanently paved & that the frontagers thereon should be taxed in respect of the cost. Accordingly, S. Street was permanently paved with asphalt. In 1928 resps., as frontagers, were assessed to tax under a statute of that year, which provided that the cost of all pavings laid since Jan. 1, 1919, should be charged to the frontagers at a specified rate. All the statutes above mentioned were enacted as amendments of the City's statutory charter of 1899:—Held: having regard to the specific terms of the statute of 1928 it applied to S. 2580a. —— Conversion of two shops into Defts., who had purchased two houses with the shops on the ground floors projecting towards the street on which the premises fronted a few feet beyond the exterior walls of the two upper floors, submitted to the local authority plans of some proposed alterations. These consisted in the main in the conversion of the two shops into one continuous shop with a single entrance from the street in a new position. The local authority took the view that the proposed alterations amounted to taking down the front of the premises for the purpose of rebuilding, so as to entitle them to prescribe a new building line under the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155. They therefore refused to approve the plans & called on defts. to set the ground floor front back to the existing exterior walls of the floors above. Defts. having refused to comply, this action was brought on the relation of the local authority & pltf. moved for a declaration that defts. were not entitled to build beyond the prescribed line & for an order on them to remove so much of the new front of the shop as projected beyond that line:—Held: the local authority had no power to prescribe a new building line under sect. 155, because (1) on the true construction of the sect. "the front" included the exterior walls of the two upper floors as well as the exterior wall of the ground floor, & (2) in any case the alterations made to the premises did not amount to taking down the front of the ground floor.—A.-G. v. PRICES' TAILORS (1928), LTD., [1930] 2 Ch. 316; 99 L. In order not to increase the burden of compensation which the exercise of that power involves, Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), s. 33 (5), enacts that no new erection can be placed on the street side of the improvement line. 2630a. Covenant to erect & maintain.]—A strip of land running the length of the vendor's property was conveyed to purchasers for use in connection with a reservoir, with the result that the vendor's property was severed from the highway by a conduit. The purchasers accordingly convenanted in the conveyance that they would at their own expense erect & maintain across the conduit a bridge of not less than 30 ft. in width to connect the severed portion of the vendor's land with the highway. There was no means of access to the vendor's land except by means of this bridge. The vendor's successor in title, desiring to develop the land as a building estate, claimed to be entitled to use the bridge for the laying of pipes & cables for the supply of water, gas & electricity & other services:—Held: upon the true construction of the conveyance the vendor's successor in title was not entitled to place & maintain upon the bridge anything of a permanent nature which must necessarily be maintained, & he was not entitled to lay pipes or cables on the bridge for any purpose.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. WATKINS, [1937] 1 All E. d l. —— ——.]—Upon an application to a county ct. judge for an order declaring a bridge about to be built across a stream to replace a bridge that had been carried away by a storm, to be a county bridge, the sole question was whether the bridge was or would be " of a greater length than 300 feet " within sect. 458 of the Municipal Act. Before the approaches on the west side of the bridge were constructed, the waters sometimes crossed the highway considerably west of a point 300 feet west of the eastern bank, & an embankment that far west was rendered necessary on account of the waters overflowing the highway & being then constructed, became part of the highway:—Held: the embankment was rendered necessary within the meaning of the Act & the bridge was therefore of greater length than 300 feet.—Re PICKERING & ONTARIO, [1930] 1 D. obligations, carried the road over the canal by means of a bridge. The canal subsequently became vested in a railway co., who were required under sect. 17 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), to keep the canal open & navigable. At a later date the railway co. entered into an agreement with the county council having jurisdiction in the locality under which the council agreed to remove the bridge & to construct a new bridge in substitution therefor; & the council covenanted that they would "from time to time & at all times thereafter well & sufficiently maintain & repair the new bridge & the roadway & footpaths upon the same & the approaches thereto." The agreement provided for a headway of six feet between the arch of the new bridge & the towing-path passing under it. The bridge & the neighbouring part of the canal for considerable distances on both sides of the bridge were in a mining area which had been subsiding for a long time prior to the agreement; & within sixteen years thereafter, owing to further subsidences, there was a general sinking of the bridge & the towing path. As, however, the water level remained the same, the railway co. found it necessary, in order to avoid flooding, to raise the towing path, the resulting effect being that the headway between the bridge & the towing path was reduced to four feet six inches, which was insufficient for the convenient working of the canal:—Held: the covenant on the part of defts. to "maintain" the bridge did not impose upon them an obligation to raise the bridge so as to obtain the six feet of clearance for the use of the water way, even although pltfs. had found it necessary to raise the towing path.—GREAT WESTERN RY. v. MONMOUTHSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1929), 94 J. 2708a. Dock swing bridge—Liability for maintenance.]—Pltf. was injured by tripping over a nail projecting from the footway of a swing bridge which defts., the Port of London Authority, were under a statutory duty to maintain in repair, & which the public had a right to use only when it was not required to be swung open for dock traffic. The cause of the accident was the failure of defts. to maintain the footway in good condition. In an action for damages:—Held: the swing bridge was not a highway & were not in the position of a surveyor of highways, & therefore defts. could not avoid liability on the ground of nonfeasance or on the ground that a surveyor of highways is not liable to pay damages to persons injured by his neglect of duty, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—GUILFOYLE v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1932] 1 K. Liability of borough council—Bridge built since 1835—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4.]—In 1882 seven streets were, in the course of the development of an estate, carried across a river on iron girder bridges. These streets subsequently became highways repairable by the inhabitants at large. An action was commenced by the A.-G. against the local authority for a declaration that they were liable to repair & keep in repair these seven bridges:—Held: having regard to the fact that the word "street," as defined by the above sect., includes, if this is not inconsistent with the context, any bridge, not being a county bridge, pltf. was entitled to the declaration.—A.-G. v. HORNSEY BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 331; 96 L. sr. Effect of Jewish betrothal.]—Among Jews the betrothal ceremony "Kaseph Kiddushim," if it is a valid ceremony, is something more than a betrothal between Christians. It is not a mere contract which the parties can set aside at will, but confers some of the rights & obligations of the married state. If the betrothal is upon certain conditions & the conditions are not fulfilled, the betrothal becomes void. m i. —— Agreement to marry after obtaining divorce.]—L. alleged that in Apr. 1928, she & D. verbally agreed to marry one another as soon as she could obtain a divorce & that D. also agreed to pay the costs of obtaining it. She was then a married woman who had been deserted by her husband for upwards of twenty years. She obtained her decree absolute, but D. then refused to marry her or to pay the costs of the divorce. She brought an action against him for damages for alleged breach of promise, & for special damages to the amount of the costs of the divorce proceedings. The following questions of law were argued before trial : (a) whether the alleged promise to marry as soon as pltf. could obtain a divorce was actionable in view of the fact that pltf. was a married woman at the time of the alleged promise ; & (b) whether the alleged promise to pay the costs of obtaining the divorce was a valid promise in view of the above facts. It was contended for pltf. that, as in New Zealand the law recognises as a ground for divorce a mere agreement for separation subsisting for three years, the fact that pltf. had been deserted by her husband for upwards of twenty years at the time of the alleged promise was sufficient to relax the rigidity of the rule of public policy :—Held : (1) it would be contrary to public policy to allow an action to be maintained on a promise such as was alleged by pltf., as, in principle, there is no distinction between a promise to marry after the wife's death & one to marry after a divorce is obtained, & it is immaterial that no harm resulted or that the possibility of harm is remote ; (2) although in New Zealand the law recognises an agreement for separation subsisting for three years as a ground for divorce, the argument that there should on that ground be a relaxation of the rule of public policy disregards the principle that it is the tendency, not the actual result, of the recognition of contracts such as sued on in this case that affords the ground for the rigidity of the rule ; & on that test pltf. must fail ; (3) the agreement as to the costs of the divorce is covered by the principle applicable to the promise to marry.—LAMBERT v. DILLON, [1933] N. sb. Failure to comply with requirements—Effect of.]—Although a marriage licence, the publication of banns, or the consent of parents is made by statute a prerequisite to the solemnisation of marriage, the non-fulfilment of said requirement does not render a marriage void or voidable, unless the statute expressly or by clear necessary intendment so provides; & even the fact that the statute prohibits under a penalty other than nullity solemnisation without observance of the requirement does not imply nullity. The fact that a marriage was solemnised without the licence or publication of banns required by sect. 3 of Marriage Act, 1924, does not make the marriage void or voidable.—WYLIE (OTHERWISE PATTON) v. PATTON, [1930] 1 W. PART II. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 2.

t i. —— ——.]—In Dec. 1928, a woman brought an action of declaratory of marriage against the representatives of a man who had died in Sept. of that year, averring that a marriage had been entered into between them by declaration de praesenti in Dec. 1922. It was proved that the parties had for many years prior to that date been on terms of intimate friendship, & that deceased had more than once proposed marriage to the pursuer. On Dec. 28, 1922, at an hotel at which the parties were staying, they stated in the presence of three witnesses that they accepted one another as husband & wife. A document attesting the marriage was signed by the parties & by the witnesses. The pursuer & the three witnesses to the document deponed that the interchange of consent was serious, & was intended to constitute marriage, & that no other person was present at the ceremony. On the other hand, a witness B. deponed that she was present during part of the ceremony, & that the proceedings were of the nature of a joke. At the date of this ceremony the deceased was seventy-six & the pursuer was about forty. The pursuer & one witness deponed that the parties occupied the same bedroom after the ceremony. The witness B. gave evidence to the contrary effect.

The parties did not take up residence together. The pursuer continued to carry on her profession as a teacher under her maiden name. Several witnesses deponed that deceased had subsequently introduced the pursuer to them as his wife. Other witnesses gave evidence that deceased had denied that he was married to the pursuer. Deceased died on Sept. 2, 1928, leaving about £20,000. In his will, made two days before his death, he left the pursuer a legacy of £200 under her maiden name :—Held : the exchange of serious matrimonial consent had been clearly established by the document & the evidence of the pursuer & the three witnesses thereto, & the subsequent conduct of the parties did not displace this conclusion.—DUNN v. DUNN'S TRUSTEES, [1930] S. The first marriage was therefore valid, & the prisoner could properly be convicted of bigamy.—R. v. LAMB (1934), 150 L. T. 519; 50 T. L. R. 310; 78 Sol. Jo. 279; 24 Cr. App. Rep. 145; 30 Cox, C. 453a. —— ——.]—The detail & strictness of proof of a marriage required in a criminal prosecution for bigamy is of a totally different standard from that required before a magistrate who is dealing with the question of the maintenance of a wife alleged to have been deserted. In civil cases, where there is evidence of the fact of a ceremony of marriage, followed by cohabitation of the parties, everything necessary for the validity of the marriage will be presumed in the absence of decisive evidence to the contrary, even though it may be necessary to presume the grant of a special licence. The burden of impeaching the factum of a marriage & the presumption of law semper præsumitur pro matrimonio, lies upon the impeaching party.

on remarriage except as to the one-fifth, to the income of which she would still be entitled & without prejudice to any appointment she might previously have made otherwise than by precluding her from exercising on remarriage any power of revocation reserved to her so far as regarded that part of the two-thirds in which her interest then ceased. If she survived & remarried, the power to appoint new trustees conferred on her by the deed was to cease. There were four children of the marriage, all born before the execution of the deed. In 1919 the marriage was dissolved, & by a deed poll in 1922 the wife appointed the two-thirds to the four children of the marriage, reserving a power of revocation & new appointment. Shortly after she remarried. On a summons taken out by the trustees asking whether as from the remarriage they should pay her the income of the two-thirds or of one-fifth thereof, whether she was entitled to exercise the power of revocation & new appointment reserved by the deed poll, & whether she still retained the power to appoint new trustees: —Held: except in so far as the wife's power of appointment in future was concerned, her position under the deed was wholly unaffected by the remarriage she had contracted. —Re PILKINGTON'S SETTLEMENT, PILKINGTON v. WRIGHT (1923), 129 L. 755b. —— Trust for wife after husband's death "until she shall marry again"—Not applicable to remarriage during first husband's lifetime.]—By a marriage settlement property therein called "the husband's fund" was assigned to the trustees on trusts which provided that from & after the husband's death the trustees should pay the income of the husband's fund to the wife, if she should survive the husband, "during her life or until she shall marry again. . . ." The settlement provided also that from & after the husband's death & the wife's death or re-marriage the trustees should stand possessed of the husband's fund & the income of it in trust for the issue of the marriage as the husband & wife should by deed jointly appoint, or in default of & subject to any such appointment as the survivor of them should by deed or will appoint, & in default of & subject to any such appointment by the survivor in trust for the child or children of the marriage as therein mentioned. The marriage was dissolved in 1916 upon the wife's petition. The wife married again in 1930. In 1932 the husband died:—Held: the words "until she shall marry again" must be construed to mean a marriage entered into by the wife after the husband's death, & the wife was therefore entitled to the income of the husband's fund (until she should marry again) & could still exercise the power of appointment over the husband's fund given to her as survivor of the husband & herself.—Re MONRO'S SETTLEMENT, MONRO v. HILL, [1933] Ch. 82; 102 L. 807a. Accrued arrears of annuity—Payment of dividend in bankruptcy.]—A marriage having been dissolved by a decree absolute in 1925, the wife remarried shortly afterwards. Immediately before the remarriage the former husband executed a settlement on his former wife in consideration of her release of any claim to alimony or maintenance from him. By the settlement the husband covenanted with his former wife & as a separate covenant with the trustees to pay her, during their joint lives, an annuity of such an amount as after deduction of income tax would yield the clear sum of £3,000 a year for her separate use without power of anticipation whilst under coverture. In 1929 the former husband was adjudicated bkpt. Pltfs., as trustees of the settlement, & deft., the former wife, jointly proved in the bkpcy. for a large sum made up of several items, of which £41,723 represented the capital value of the annuity of £3,000. The proof was admitted, & in Dec. 1931, a dividend of 6*d.* in the pound was paid to pltfs. This amounted to £2,322, of which £1,043 1*s.* 6*d.* was the proportion attributable to the annuity. On a summons taken out by pltfs. to determine the question whether they ought to pay to deft. the dividend so far as it was attributable to the annuity, notwithstanding the restraint upon anticipation, or whether they ought to invest the same, as being capital, in purchasing an annuity for the life of deft.:—Held: the trustees could properly pay the whole dividend to deft.—Re HORNE'S SETTLEMENT, COUTTS & CO. v. DUSMET DE SMOURS (DUCHESSA), [1932] 2 Ch. 180; 101 L. In 1918 the wife died, & in 1929 the husband died without having married again. In 1891 the husband was adjudicated bkpt. & obtained his discharge as from Apr. 14, 1899 :—Held : upon the true construction of the policy & Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 10, the interest in the policy moneys vested in the husband & upon his adjudication in the trustee in his bankruptcy subject to the trust in favour of his wife which enured for her benefit only if she survived her husband with the result that as she died before her husband & before the fund fell into possession, the policy moneys belonged & were payable to the trustee in bkpcy.

1226a. —— —— If living at his death—Cash value of policy sought to be taken by insured during life.]—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £288 thus became payable. The co. were unwilling to pay over this sum except on the joint receipt of the husband & wife, & ultimatelypaid it into ct. : —Held : (1) the policy came within sect. 11 of the above Act, & created a trust in favour of the wife in certain events ; (2) insured must be taken to have exercised the option for the benefit of the trust ; (3) unless the husband & wife came to an agreement, the fund must be accumulated in ct. until it could be ascertained by the death of either party who was entitled to it.—Re FLEETWOOD'S POLICY, [1926] Ch. 48 ; 95 L. 1226c. —— —— Lien of husband for premiums paid.]—A husband took out a policy of life assurance for £1,000 payable after ten years or upon his earlier death & expressed to be for the benefit of his wife, therein named, under Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75). Two years later, & before the policy possessed any surrender value, the wife died. The husband kept the policy on foot, paying the premiums, until it matured, when the insurance co. paid the policy moneys into a deposit account in the joint names of the husband & another as personal representatives of the deceased wife. The husband having died, his widow, as his administratrix, claimed a lien on the policy moneys for the amount of the premiums paid after his first wife's death :—Held : while the policy moneys belonged to the first wife's estate, in accordance with the decision in Cousins v. Sun Life Assurance Society, [1933] Ch. 126, the estate of the husband was entitled to a lien thereon for the amount of the premiums paid by him since his first wife's death, as being money expended by him as a trustee to preserve property of a cestui que trust.—Re SMITH'S ESTATE, BILHAM v. SMITH, [1937] Ch. 636; [1937] 3 All E. The daughter was an adopted child, & there had been no legal adoption under Adoption of Children Act, 1926 (c. 29) :—Held : (1) there was no effective trust for the adopted child by virtue of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 11, & the infant was outside the scope of that sect.; (2) the adopted child had no legal right to claim the policy moneys from the insurance co. The assured died as the result of an accident within the policy, his wife surviving him :—Held : (1) the policy was one effected by the assured on his own life within Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75); (2) it was expressed to be for the benefit of his wife within the same sect.; (3) accordingly, his wife was solely & beneficially entitled to the moneys payable thereunder.—Re GLADITZ, GUARANTY EXECUTOR & TRUSTEE CO., LTD. v. GLADITZ, [1937] Ch. 588; [1937] 3 All E. In Aug. 1931, the " E." car, by arrangements to which applt. was a party, was traded in for a " N." car, applt. paying a deposit & also the balance of the price, after allowing for the value of the " E." The prescribed documents showing that the " N." car had been disposed of to & acquired by the wife, were signed by the vendor & the wife. The car was kept in a garage at the matrimonial home, to which both husband & wife had keys, but the wife, although able to drive, did not drive the " N." car. There was evidence to show that applt. put the car into the wife's name to avoid financial liabilities in case of accident, & as a safeguard against creditors. It is an offence under Motor Vehicles Act to make a false statement in an application & by that Act a certificate relating to the ownership of a car is primâ facie evidence of the truth of its contents. In proceedings by applt. to establish his ownership & right to possession :—Held : the evidence disclosed a purchase by applt. in the name of resp. ; the presumption was that of a gift by applt. to resp. ; &, therefore, the covinous arrangement alleged by applt. could not be permitted to rebut the presumption of ownership, which arose from the acts of the parties as well as under the Statute.—MUSMAN v. MUSMAN, [1933] S. On the trial the husband stated that when he made the conveyance to his wife he did so on her undertaking that the members of her family would vacate the house, & this was never carried out :—Held : plff. could not succeed, as the only claim he could set up would be that he had made a conveyance for a consideration that had failed, & his action would be either for specific performance or damages.—BODY v. BODY (1924), 34 B. 1489a. —— Settlement of insurance policies on life of husband.]—By a post-nuptial settlement made in pursuance of ante-nuptial articles, certain policies of insurance on the life of the husband were assigned to trustees upon trust to receive the money & pay the income to the wife during her life for her separate use, independently of any future husband whom she might marry. There was no restraint on anticipation. During the life of her first husband the wife made promissory notes in favour of pltf., & pltf., the first husband being still alive, brought an action claiming a charge on the policies :—Held : the trust for separate use did not arise till after the death of the husband, & as the contracts of a married woman can only be enforced against property which formed part of her separate estate at the date of the contract, the action could not be maintained. —KING v. LUCAS (1883), 23 Ch. 1800a. —— —— —— Proceedings instituted against wife.]—A husband took divorce proceedings against his wife on the ground of her adultery. She consulted a solr., who upon her instructions put in a defence denying the charge & briefed counsel to appear for her. At the hearing the wife failed to appear, & a decree was made against her dissolving the marriage on the grounds alleged in the petition. The wife's counsel applied for costs, but as no security for her costs had been obtained, no costs were granted. The wife's solr. brought an action in the K. B. Div. to recover the costs from the husband, on the ground of his wife's agency of necessity at common law. The judge found as a fact that the solr. had acted without negligence, honestly believing that the wife was innocent & that she would be successful in her defence : —Held : in those circumstances the wife had no authority to bind her husband, so as to make him liable for the costs of her defence to his petition for divorce.—ARNOLD & WEAVER v. AMARI, [1928] 1 K. 1852b. Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors' Act, 1935 (c. 30), s. 3—Whether retrospective.]—By a writ dated Aug. 16, 1935 (after the coming into operation on Aug. 2, 1935, of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30)), pltf., a married woman, sued defts., husband & wife, claiming damages in respect of slanders alleged to have been uttered by the female deft. on divers dates in 1931 & in the early months of 1935, the claim as against the male deft. being that he authorised or caused the female deft. to utter the words complained of. Defts. denied the publication, & the male deft. denied that he authorised or caused the female deft. to utter the alleged defamatory words. At the trial the judge left the case against both defts. to the jury without directing them that if they found for pltf. they should return a separate verdict with separate damages in respect of each publication. No objection was taken to this direction at the time. The jury found a single verdict against both defts. & judgment was entered against them accordingly. On appeal :—Held : (1) there was evidence entitling the jury to find that the female deft. uttered the slanders complained of & therefore that the verdict & judgment against her must stand; (2) there was no evidence that the male deft. authorised or caused the female deft. to utter the words complained of; (3) Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), has a retrospective operation, & by virtue of its provisions the male deft. was not liable for his wife's tort; (4) as no objection was taken at the trial to the jury being asked to consider the different publications as a whole instead of separately, or not being asked to assess separate damages in respect of each publication, the female deft. could not be heard to say that the verdict was a nullity.

Per SCOTT, L.J. There is nothing in the Judicature Acts or in the Rules of the Supreme Ct. that separate verdicts & judgments are invariably necessary in respect of separate causes of action contained in the same writ. The question whether one or more causes of action can be included in one verdict or judgment depends upon the exercise of the trial judge's judicial discretion upon all the circumstances of the case.

Per SCOTT, L.J. The canon against giving a retrospective interpretation to a statute, in the absence of specific provision, expresses no rigid or absolute rule. It does not apply to a statute dealing with procedure, nor, semble, does it apply to a statute abolishing old legal fictions.—BARBER v. PIGDEN, [1937] 1 K. B. 664; [1937] 1 All E. R. 115; 106 L. 2039a. —— —— ——.]—By a deed of separation reciting that differences had arisen between a husband & a wife, it was agreed that the wife should during the life of the husband live separate & apart from him & free from his marital control & authority as if she were unmarried, & that the wife should retain as her separate property certain articles which, if she should die in the lifetime of the husband without having disposed of them, should devolve as if she had died possessed thereof intestate & a widow. The husband covenanted that he would during the life of the wife pay to her an annual sum of £600. The wife was also to be entitled to certain furniture & effects for the use of herself during her life. Throughout the deed the parties were referred to as "the husband" & "the wife" respectively. It was provided that if the husband & the wife should be reconciled to each other & return to cohabitation the deed should become void. The husband subsequently committed adultery & the wife obtained a decree dissolving the marriage. He then made default in paying the full annual sum provided for by the deed, & she brought an action to recover the arrears:—Held: the deed was not subject to any implied term that it should only operate so long as the marriage relation continued to exist between the parties, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—MAY v. MAY, [1929] 2 K. 2291a. Claim by husband against wife—Interpleader proceedings.]—A wife deposited certain furniture & other goods with warehousemen for safe storage. Her husband claimed that the furniture & other goods were his property, & issued a writ in detinue against the warehousemen claiming the delivery up of the goods. The wife also claimed the goods as being her property. The warehousemen disclaimed any interest in the goods except for storage charges, & took out an interpleader summons in the action, making the wife the claimant. An order was made by a master directing the trial of an issue in the King's Bench Division to determine whether the goods were the property of the husband or the wife, & directing that in that issue the husband was to be pltf. & the wife was to be deft. The judge in chambers affirmed the order. Upon an appeal by the wife on the ground that such an order could not be made as between a husband & a wife :—Held : the interpleader issue which was directed was not an action by the husband against the wife but a proceeding in the action by the husband against the warehousemen, & the order for interpleader was necessary in order to give relief to the warehousemen, who had two claimants making claims against them in respect of the property, & there was jurisdiction under R. S. C., Ord. LVII, r. 7, to make the order directing an interpleader issue to be tried, & the husband was properly directed to be in the position of pltf. in the issue, & the wife in the position of deft., because the deposit of the property with the warehousemen had been made by the wife, & the husband had to make out his case.—DE LA RUE v. HERNU, PERON & STOCKWELL, LTD., [1936] 2 K. S. B. C., 1924, a prior conveyance made by him to his daughter :

2293a. —— ——.]—(1) Pltf. married deft. in 1893. In 1899 the parties separated under a deed of separation & thenceforward lived apart. By the deed of separation deft. covenanted to pay an annuity to pltf., & the deed also contained a covenant for further assurance. After the separation pltf. set up in business as a garage proprietor, & she subsequently converted this business into a private limited co. in which she held the majority of the shares & also was the chairman & managing director. In 1929 she saw in a churchyard near her husband's residence a tombstone on which was the following inscription: "In loving memory of Jennie the dearly beloved wife of W. R. Crawshay Ralston of the Bungalow, Valley. Died 20th May, 1916." Deft. was the W. R. Crawshay Ralston mentioned in the inscription & he had caused the inscription to be made. Pltf. brought an action against her husband for libel & also for a declaration that she was the lawful wife of deft.:—Held: though the inscription was capable of a defamatory meaning, pltf., by reason of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, could not sue her husband on it, the action being for a tort & not for the protection & security of her separate property.

(2) If there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, in my opinion, an action at law in the K. B. Div. of the High Ct. is not the proper proceeding in which to have that matter determined. I think it would be necessary, if there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, to take proceedings under the Legitimacy Declaration Act, 1858 (c. 93) (MACNAUGHTEN, J.).—RALSTON v. RALSTON, [1930] 2 K. 2294a. —— For negligence—Injury sustained before marriage.]—Although by Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, a married woman has the same civil remedies for the protection & security of her own separate property as if it belonged to her as a feme sole, & by sect. 24 "property" includes a thing in action, nevertheless a right of action for a pure tort which accrued before the marriage of the parties is not a thing in action within sect. 24, & consequently such right is not part of the wife's separate property.

An unmarried woman sustained injuries through a man's negligent driving, & issued a writ against him claiming damages in respect thereof. Before the trial of the action she married him:—Held: her right of action was not such a thing in action as would become her separate property within the meaning of the Act, but was barred by the general disability of husband & wife to sue each other for a tort.—GOTTLIFFE v. EDELSTON, [1930] 2 K. For petitioner it was submitted that the memorandum of agreement relied upon was not a deed of separation, but merely an agreement for maintenance for a limited period. Even if it were a deed of separation, the wife was entitled to change her mind, & she had in fact shown a sincere desire to live together again with her husband, though her motive might have been the welfare of the children: —Held: the memorandum of agreement was a valid & binding & subsisting agreement to live separate & apart. Petitioner has to establish not merely that resp. is a person of unsound mind & is unlikely to recover, but also that resp. has been confined as such in an institution for the required period—i.e., confined as a person afflicted with unsoundness of mind to a degree that warrants the making of a committal order. Consequently, it is not permissible under the above-quoted para. (f) to count any period of detention as a voluntary boarder in a mental institution which resulted in relief & temporary cure & discharge merely because the person ultimately became a person of so unsound a mind as to warrant & result in committal, or to treat a voluntary boarder as having been actually confined as a person of unsound mind merely because it is established by evidence that such resp. could have been lawfully confined as a person of unsound mind.—G. v. G., [1936] N. 2518a. ——.]—A husband & wife intermarried in Feb. 1922, & continued to cohabit until July, 1927, when the wife left the husband. On Nov. 2, 1927, the wife petitioned for a divorce founded upon an act of sodomy alleged to have been committed on her by the husband in Mar. 1922, & alleged acts of cruelty consisting of (a) acts of shameless uncleanness & invitations to repeat them, & (b) ordinary acts of cruelty, such as acts of ill-temper & abuse.

At the trial the judge in summing up to the jury did not warn the jury against finding that the sodomy alleged had been committed on the uncorroborated evidence of the wife, who was an accomplice; nor did he clearly point out that before it could be held that there was cruelty as regards the sexual malpractices it must be shown that they caused danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental, or a reasonable expectation of it. The jury's verdict was that sodomy had been committed as alleged; that the husband had been guilty of cruelty of the class (a), & that he had not been guilty of cruelty of class (b). The judge then made a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage. On appeal:—Held: (1) the judge ought to have warned the jury that cogent evidence was required to overcome the presumption of innocence of sodomy, & that they should not convict on the wife's uncorroborated evidence; (2) the ct. must take notice of the fact that there had been condonation of the offence, even though the husband did not plead it; (3) the judge had misdirected the jury by saying that the sexual malpractices were cruelty in themselves, as there could not be legal cruelty without danger to life, limb, or health, physical or mental, or reasonable apprehension of it; & (4) instead of directing a new trial the ct. should dismiss the wife's petition.

(5) The wife having on the evidence been a consenting party to the act of sodomy alleged to have been committed it would be impossible for her to obtain a decree of divorce based solely on that act.

(6) The rules with regard to condonation & connivance as a bar to a decree for divorce were well established in the practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. before the Act of 1857. In July the employers obtained a certificate from their doctor that the workman had practically recovered from the accident in 1929, & served upon the workman a notice of their intention to terminate the compensation under 1925 Act, s. 12. The workman did not follow the procedure prescribed by that sect., but applied under r. 82 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, for leave to issue execution under the recorded agreement. The county ct. judge refused the application:—Held: (1) under the recorded agreement a workman was in the position of a judgment creditor, & was entitled under r. 82 to apply for leave to issue execution, notwithstanding the fact that the employers had already commenced proceedings under sect. 12 to terminate or reduce the weekly payments under the recorded agreement; (2) the employers could always apply under r. 82, sub-r. In Aug. 1930, an agreement was recorded under which the payments of 30*s.* a week were to be continued by the employers. In Jan. 1931, the employers, following the procedure prescribed by sect. 12, served upon the workman a notice, in accordance with a certificate of a medical practitioner which stated that the workman had partially recovered, that they would from & after the expiration of ten days therefrom reduce the weekly payment of 30*s.* under the recorded agreement to 11*s.* 1*d.* The workman did not follow the procedure open to him under the proviso to sect. 12 (3), but applied to the registrar under r. 82 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, for leave to issue execution under the recorded agreement. The matter was referred by the registrar to the judge, who held that the workman was entitled to leave to issue execution unless the employers applied for a review. On appeal by the employers:—Held: leave to issue execution ought to be granted, as the certificate of the employers' doctor, on which they relied as a ground for ending the compensation, was not final & conclusive, & did not establish partial incapacity, & therefore they were in default in making weekly payments under the recorded agreement within the meaning of r. 82, sub-r. On the same day, Dec. 8, 1930, the employers had granted a trust deed for creditors. In an action brought against the employers' trustee in bkpcy. by the workman's widow qua executrix, for a declarator that she was entitled to a ranking for a lump sum payment in the sequestration in priority to all other creditors, in which it was admitted that the granting of the trust deed fell to be regarded as a receiving order in the sense of the 1925 Act:—Held: (1) under sect. 7 (3) of 1925 Act, liability for compensation had "accrued" at the date of the trust deed, notwithstanding that the precise amount of that liability might not be ascertainable until a later date; (2) "before" the date of the receiving order in sect. 7 (3) fell to be read as equivalent to "not after" that date; (3) under sects. 7 & 13 of 1925 Act, the fact that the weekly payments had not been continued for a period of six months prior to bkpcy. was not sufficient to deprive pursuer of a preferential ranking to a lump sum payment.—THORNTON'S EXECUTRIX v. ANGUS & SONS' TRUSTEE, [1934] S. The employers appealed :—Held : the procedure laid down in sect. 12 (3) applies only to weekly payments made where there is no award or recorded memorandum of agreement. When a memorandum of agreement to make weekly payments has been recorded, & an employer purports to end or diminish the weekly payment under sect. 12 (3), the proper course for the workman to adopt is to apply for leave to issue execution under rule 82 of the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926.—FRANCIS v. LONDON PUBLIC OMNIBUS CO., LTD. 26 B. 3668m. —— For arrears of weekly wages—Execution refused—Common law action.]—A memorandum of agreement to pay a lump sum of £475 to a workman in settlement of his claim, & also to provide light work at minimum weekly wage of 17*s.* 6*d.*, was recorded under sect. 23 by the county ct. judge, who attached great importance to the condition of providing employment when approving the adequacy of the lump sum. It was subsequently alleged that the employers had broken their agreement to provide employment & were indebted to the workman to the extent of over £22 in wages. The workman applied under rule 82 for leave to issue execution for this sum. The county ct. judge refused the application on the ground that rule 82 only allowed execution to issue for compensation or costs, & arrears of weekly wages were neither of these. The workman therefore brought an action at common law for damages for breach of the agreement & the county ct. judge gave judgment for pltf. for the amount claimed. The employers appealed & contended that such an action was not maintainable as an agreement registered under Workmen's Compensation Act could only be enforced under that Act. At the same time they alleged that as rule 82 did not provide for execution in regard to arrears of wages, the particular term of the memorandum with regard to the provision of light work at a minimum weekly wage was not so enforceable :—Held : the two contentions were mutually destructive, & these being the only grounds of appeal, the appeal must be dismissed.—STUBBS v. & QUEEN LAUNDRIES, LTD., 149 L. 3698a. —— Notice of intention to end payments—Validity.]—A workman was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Resps.' doctor gave his certificate that the man had partially recovered, & resps. served notice on the workman in pursuance of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, that they would cease payment of compensation within ten days. No counter-certificate by the workman's doctor was served in pursuance of the sect., but the workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge awarded 8*s.* a week on the basis of partial incapacity from the date of the hearing in the county ct., & not from the date of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground that the workman had not complied with sect. 14 & was not entitled to compensation from that date:—Held: the notice was bad, in that it purported to end compensation when the workman was certified to be partially recovered only, & the compensation of 8*s.* a week for partial incapacity was payable from the date the employers ceased payment of compensation.—HOWARTH v. SINGLETON (J. The workman filed a request for arbn. claiming (inter alia) a declaration of liability, alleging that he was still incapacitated. Resps. offered to accept an award of a declaration of liability, & before the hearing offered the sum by which the weekly payments fell short of the proper amount that was due in respect of the two days. The county ct. judge was satisfied the workman had recovered & was able to do his work, & held, payment for the two days having been offered, there was no further liability on resps., & made the declaration of liability offered:—Held: the notice was good, & was not invalidated because the payments were not made for the full period of ten days from the date thereof.—COOPER v. COLLINS ELECTRICAL, LTD. Power to terminate payments—Incapacity ceased.]—On Oct. 17, 1923, a workman contracted miners' nystagmus in the course of his employment, & by voluntary agreement the employers paid him a weekly sum by way of compensation until Sept. 3, 1925, when they stopped the weekly payments, on the ground that the man had completely recovered. After the employers had commenced proceedings for a review, the workman admitted that the incapacity had ceased on Sept. 3, but claimed compensation up to the date of the award:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, to award any payment after the incapacity had ceased, & he ought to make a retrospective award terminating the weekly payments as from the date of recovery.—OCEAN COAL CO. v. DAVIES, [1927] A. A copy of this certificate was sent to the workman, together with notice of the intention of the employers at the expiry of ten days to diminish the weekly payments, but the copy was not received by the workman until after the expiry of the six days allowed for sending it under para. 15 of Sched. I. to 1906 Act. The workman was then examined by his own doctor who reported that he was not fit for any work, & a copy of this report was sent to the employers within six days of the examination. The employers then applied for a medical reference under Sched. I. para. 15 & they consigned a portion of the weekly payments in terms of sect. 14, proviso (ii) of 1923 Act:—Held: the report of the workman's doctor disagreeing with the employer's medical certificate, even though it was sent merely for the purpose of preventing the diminishing of the weekly payments under sect. 14 of the 1923 Act, was a report within Sched. I., para. 15 of 1906 Act &, as it had been received by the employers within six days of the examination they were entitled, under para. 15 as amended by sect. 11 (1) of 1923 Act, to apply for a medical reference, although the certificate of their own doctor had not been received by the workman within the six days required by that paragraph & accordingly, as the application for a medical reference had been duly made, they were entitled to consign the amount of the weekly payments in dispute as from the date of that application.—WHITE v. BAIRD (WILLIAM) & CO., LTD., [1932] S. 3701d. —— ——.]—A boiler-maker's riveter whose compensation for the loss of his right finger had been stopped under 1925 Act, s. 12, filed a request for arbn. The employers in their answer offered to submit to an award on the basis of partial incapacity, but at the same time gave notice that they denied liability. An award was consequently made for an agreed amount until the same should be ended or diminished. Eleven months later the employers applied to review with a view to termination of the weekly payment on the ground that the workman had completely recovered. The county ct. judge found as facts that the workman could do his pre-accident work, but that his physical condition was the same in all material respects as at the time of the previous award & refused to terminate the weekly payments. The employers appealed:—Held: the two findings of fact were wholly inconsistent with each other, but once the county ct. judge had found that the workman could do his pre-accident work, all right to compensation ceased.—FAIRFIELD SHIPBUILDING CO., LTD. v. HARRIS (1931), 24 B. 3701e. —— Workman malingering.]—A workman, in Jan. 1932, suffered a fracture of his arm by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. In May, 1932, his employer offered him work which he said he was unable to do. In Sept. 1932, the weekly payments were reduced by an award of the county ct. judge. In Oct. 1932, the employer again offered work which was refused. In Sept. 1933, the employer applied for termination of the weekly payments. The county ct. judge repeatedly adjourned the arbn. to enable the workman to try suitable work. The workman was on some occasions medically examined before & after the trials of work, & on one occasion the county ct. judge inspected the work himself. Finally the county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was malingering & he terminated the weekly payments. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—MALLANDAIN v. HILL (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 177, C. A.

3701g. —— —— No amendment—Right of judge to treat proceedings as arbitration.]—A workman was voluntarily paid compensation at the rate of 25*s.* a week in respect of an injury by accident. The employers served a notice on the workman under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 12 (3), & in due course reduced the weekly payments to 17*s.* 6*d.* No counter-notice was served & for 6 months the workman accepted the weekly payments of 17*s.* 6*d.* During those 6 months correspondence passed between the solrs. acting for the parties & there were negotiations for a lump sum settlement, but no complaint was made as to the reduction in the weekly payments. The workman then applied for a review & for a restoration of the weekly payments of 25*s.* The county ct. judge declined to infer an agreement between the parties that the workman should receive compensation at the reduced rate, & he held that the workman's condition was the same as at the date of service of the employers' notice under sect. 12 (3). He found the measure of the workman's incapacity at that date to be £1 a week, &, treating the proceedings as an original application for arbn., he awarded compensation at the rate of £1 a week. No formal amendment of the proceedings was, however, made. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) the county ct. judge was entitled to allow the application for review to be treated as an application for arbn.; (2) the fact that the workman did not serve a counter-notice on the employers did not preclude him from bringing arbn. proceedings in opposition to the diminution of the compensation paid; (3) the county ct. judge was entitled to decline to infer an agreement that the workman should receive compensation at the reduced rate.

Per SLESSER, L.J.: where a county ct. judge thinks fit to give leave to amend the proceedings particularised, either in whole or in part, the amendment ought to be made then & there, so that if any question subsequently arises, the Ct. of Appeal can see exactly what case was made before the county ct. judge.—HARDING v. WATERS (H. & E.), LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 3702a. —— ——.] —A workman met with an accident, which he alleged caused an inguinal swelling. He was paid full compensation until Sept. 20, 1926, when the payments were reduced. The workman filed an application claiming compensation at the old rate, & the employers filed a counter-application for termination of compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman had entirely recovered on Sept. 20, 1926, & that the swelling from which he suffered at the date of the trial was not a result of the accident, & made an award for the employers on both applications :—Held : the employers, by paying compensation, were not estopped from saying that the injury was not caused by the accident, & there was evidence to support the judge's findings, & no misdirection.—THORPE v. SADLER (A. 3702b. —— ——.]—On May 15, 1927, a trimmer met with an accident on board a liner causing hernia. He received compensation until Nov. 12. On receipt of a medical report that he was fit to resume work, his employers gave notice on Nov. 2, that the weekly payments would be terminated. The workman did not obtain a counter-certificate, but, on Nov. 24, his solrs. wrote suggesting that he had not been examined for hernia, that an operation would be necessary, & that the notice of Nov. 2 should be cancelled. The employers thereupon requested the workman to present himself for further examinations, & as a result of these examinations again repudiated liability to pay compensation. The county ct. judge found that there was no incapacity on Jan. 7, 1928, but he made an award of compensation for eight weeks from Nov. 12, 1927, on the ground that compensation was not properly terminated on that date, in that the employers by subjecting the workman to further examinations had shown that they did not rely on their first medical report. He estimated the period during which the employers were satisfying themselves after Nov. 12 as to the workman's condition at eight weeks :—Held : the workman had not discharged the onus of proving incapacity after Nov. 12, 1927. The judge, in awarding compensation to the workman, in fact, for the trouble he had been put to by the employers after notice of termination had been given, had misdirected himself.—DODD v. OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD. Ultimately a doctor reported that pltf. had recovered, & defts. stopped the payments & applied for a review thereof, & paid into ct., with a denial of liability, the amount of the weekly payments up to that date. While the county ct. proceedings were still pending, pltf. brought an action, alleging that he had not recovered from his injury, & claiming (1) a declaration that under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, defts. had committed a breach of their duty by stopping the payments otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbn., & (2) an injunction restraining a continuance of the breach :—Held : under sect. 21 the only tribunal to determine the question of incapacity was the county ct., &, as that question had not yet been determined by that tribunal, pltf. could not show that his incapacity was continuing since the date when defts. stopped the weekly payments, & the action failed.—CATTON v. ASHWELL & NESBIT, LTD., [1928] Ch. 484 ; 97 L. After a time the workman started work again with the same employers, not at his former work as a machine moulder, but as a labourer. The employers ceased payment of compensation as from the date of the workman's re-employment, without having served any certificate or notice under sect. 12 (3). The workman brought an application for an award of compensation as for partial incapacity from the date of the cessation of payments, & moved the arbitrator to make an interim award of compensation. On Jan. 18, two days after receiving the medical certificate, the employer served it upon the workman, along with notice that his weekly payments would be ended. In arbn. proceedings the

Subsequently, having obtained other work, he agreed to the compensation being terminated, with the making in his favour of a declaration of liability. On Dec. 3, 1931, his solrs. wrote to the employers' solrs. informing them that the workman had attained his majority on July 6, 1931, & adding : "I shall be glad to know whether your clients are prepared to pay my client compensation on the basis of partial incapacity." The workman subsequently, on Jan. 18, 1932, gave notice of his intention to apply to the ct. under sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act to award him increased weekly payments of compensation, in view of his having attained full age. The employers contended : (a) that whereas by sect. 1 of 1926 Act, the claim under sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act should have been made by "application for the review . . . before or within six months after the workman attains the age of twenty-one years," it had not been made until Jan. 18, 1932, twelve days after the prescribed period ; & (b) that sect. 11 (2) being for the review of "any weekly payment" it was not applicable to a case where no weekly payments were being made :—Held : (1) the words "application for the review" in sect. 1 of 1926 Act were not restricted to a formal application to the ct. An application within the section could be made informally to the employer, & this had been done by the solrs.' letter of Dec. 3, 1931 ; (2) the declaration of liability which had been made, being in lieu of the old order for payment of 1*d.* a week, was a declaration intended to keep open the rights of the parties, & took effect as if there were a weekly payment which was at the moment in abeyance.—VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. v. REGAN, [1933] 1 K. workman maintained that the employer was not entitled under sect. 12 (3) to end his weekly payments, because he had failed to serve the certificate within six days after the medical examination, & he contended that the six days' time-limit contained in sect. 19 (2) must be read into the provisions of sect. 12 (3) :—Held : the employer had ended the workman's weekly payments in compliance with sect. 12 (3). —M'GEE v. M'BRAYNE, [1931] S. 8f. Power to diminish payments—From what date.]—A dock labourer, who, in consequence of injuries to both ankles, had been found by an arbitrator to be in a permanent state of partial incapacity, was paid compensation up till June 7, 1930, at a weekly rate of 25*s.* On May 23 his employers served upon him a medical certificate to the effect that he was fit for light work, & intimated their intention to diminish his weekly payments to 7*s.* 6*d.* per week. The workman served a counter certificate to the effect that he would never be fit for any but sedentary work. On June 2 his employers offered him light cleaning-up work. Thereafter they applied for, & obtained a medical reference ; &, on Aug. 9, the referee reported that the workman was fit for light cleaning-up work on a level surface. Subsequently the workman accepted the light work offered. The employers having thereafter applied to the arbitrator to diminish the weekly payments to 7*s.* 6*d.* per week as from June 7, the workman contended that, as the referee had made no finding upon his condition before Aug. 9, there was no evidence to justify the arbitrator in diminishing the payments prior to that date. The arbitrator having diminished the weekly payments as from June 7 :—Held : as no change in the workman's condition between June 7 & Aug. 9 had been alleged to the referee or to the arbitrator, the arbitrator was, in the circumstances, entitled to treat the referee's report as conclusive of the workman's condition as from June 7, & to diminish the compensation payable to him as from that date.—DOCHERTY v. ROSS & MARSHALL, LTD., [1931] S. 3708b. —— Reasonable steps to obtain employment.]—A woman who by reason of injury by accident arising out of her employment had suffered the amputation of three fingers of her right hand was paid full compensation until 1934, when the employers were advised that she was then only partially incapacitated. She applied for an award, & the county ct. judge awarded compensation for partial incapacity treated as being total, under the above sub-sect., finding that she had taken all reasonable steps to obtain work, but had failed. In May, 1936, the employers applied to review & diminish the payment, alleging that, though the condition of the hand remained static, she was able to do certain work & had made little or no effort to obtain any work. The county ct. judge held that the employers had failed to show any change of circumstances, that he could not take into consideration the question whether the woman had or had not endeavoured to find work upon an application to review the payments, & dismissed it:—Held: as the workwoman had admitted that she had given up making any attempt to obtain suitable employment, this fact was a change of circumstances since the previous hearing which the county ct. judge was entitled to take into consideration on the application for a review for the purpose of deciding whether the conditions mentioned in sect. 9 (4) of Workmen's Compensation Act still obtained, & the case must be remitted to him to be reheard.—UNITED DAIRIES (LONDON), LTD. v. STIRLING, [1937] 1 K. 3708c. Award for fixed period under 1925 Act, s. 9 (4)—Partial incapacity continuing beyond fixed period.]—A workman was injured in June, 1928, & received full compensation until June, 1929. In July, 1929, he applied for the restoration of compensation on the ground of continuing incapacity. The county ct. judge heard the application in Oct. 1929, & ordered that the workman's partial incapacity should be treated as total incapacity under sect. 9 (4). Under this order he awarded full compensation until Jan. 7, 1930. On Jan. 7, 1930, the employers ceased payment. In Apr. 1930 the workman applied for review but subsequently altered his application to one to restore the proceedings begun in July, 1929, to deal with the amount of compensation payable for his partial incapacity after Jan. 7, 1930. The county ct. judge in Nov. 1930 refused to assent to this application. In consequence the workman once more filed an application for review. On this application the county ct. judge held that he was by virtue of sect. 9 (4) entitled to review the matter, although no liberty to apply was expressly given under the award made in Oct. 1929, & made an award of £1 a week for partial incapacity from Jan. 7, 1930. The employer appealed on the ground that there could be no right of review of a weekly payment that did not exist. The workman cross-appealed on the ground that the judge was wrong in refusing to restore the original proceedings:—Held: as the award made in Oct. 1929, dealt solely with matters referable to sect. 9 (4), there still remained the issue of partial incapacity considered apart from sect. 9 (4) &, although the award appealed from was made in review proceedings, it should properly be treated as an award made in the proceedings initiated in July, 1929, which the workman was entitled to have restored, the court having had seisin of the matter throughout. 3710a. ——.]—A miner was certified on Nov. 22, 1919, as suffering from nystagmus & received compensation. After some years the employers requested a review, on which the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments as from Aug. 21, 1925, the date of his award, on the ground that the workman had recovered from his disablement & was able to do his ordinary work as a miner. There was no appeal by the workman from this award. Three years later, on June 12, 1928, the workman obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate to the effect that he was suffering from nystagmus, & thereby disabled from earning full wages at his old employment. The date of the commencement of disablement not appearing on this certificate, the workman went to the medical referee, who issued a certificate confirming the certificate of the certifying surgeon, & fixing Nov. 22, 1919, as the date of the commencement of disablement. The medical referee also certified that the workman was only fit for surface work. On that the workman commenced arbn. proceedings, claiming compensation for partial incapacity as from 1925 & a declaration of liability. The employers contended that the matter was res judicata, & this contention was accepted by the county ct. judge. The workman appealed:—Held: the award of Aug. 21, 1925, was final between the parties & could not be affected by the certificate of the medical referee.—WILLIAMS v. CRAWSHAY BROS. 3716b. —— —— ——.]—A workman was injured in Mar. 1933, & underwent an operation for the removal of cartilage from his knee. He was paid compensation as for total incapacity until Nov. 1933, when he returned to light work & was paid compensation as for partial incapacity. In Mar. 1934, payments were stopped, & the workman applied for an arbn. At the hearing in Jan. 1935, the workman's doctor said that the workman was not fit for his old work, the employers' doctor saying that he was fit for such work. The latter in his evidence referred to the probability that there was "some loose body which occasionally gets nipped between the bones of the joint," but he said there was no X-ray evidence of such loose body. The county ct. judge awarded compensation as for partial incapacity up to the date of the hearing & granted a declaration of liability. The workman applied to his foreman for his old work, but this was refused in the absence of a certificate of fitness from the workman's doctor. The doctor refused such a certificate & the workman continued at light work. In June, 1935, trouble developed, due to the nipping of a piece of cartilage which had not been removed. In Aug. 1935, the workman applied for a review. The county ct. judge came to the conclusion that the workman was more disabled than he had thought in Jan. 1935, "due to change of circumstances," & made an award for compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. The employers appealed:—Held: the finding that there was a change of circumstances was founded upon additional positive evidence of fact not before him at the first hearing & the matter was not res judicata.

3718a. —— ——.]—A riveter lost his right eye as the result of an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He was paid full compensation for a year & then went back to his old work. He left work after two days, alleging that he was unable to do the work, & made a claim for compensation based on total incapacity. The county ct. judge found that the injury had left no incapacity & made his award in favour of the employers & refused to grant a declaration of liability. The workman gave notice of appeal from that award but did not proceed any further. Seven months later the workman applied for a review alleging that though he had recovered & was capable of work he had found that he was unable to obtain employment owing to the disfigurement caused by the loss of his eye. The employers took the preliminary points that the matter was res judicata & also that there could be no review as there were no weekly payments & no declaration of liability to review. These second proceedings came before another county ct. judge, who refused to allow leave to amend the proceedings & held that the decision of the first county ct. judge was binding on him & final against the workman. He therefore dismissed the application. The workman appealed:—Held: the first county ct. judge having made an award in favour of the employers, finally terminating all liability, & there having been no appeal from that award, the second county ct. judge had rightly held in the second case, which raised exactly the same issues, that the matter was res judicata. The result must have been the same whether the second proceedings had been by way of original application or review.—SMITH v. CUTLER (SAMUEL) & SONS, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 408, C. A.

Their application was granted, but the workman obtained a declaration of liability. The workman then applied for a review, asking for an increase, & produced evidence that he had tried other work but was unable to do it. 3726d. ——.]—Employers paid a workman who had sustained a fractured skull in July, 1928, full compensation until Nov. 1929, when they reduced the weekly payments in accordance with the provisions of sect. 12 to 11*s.* 9*d.* on the basis that he could earn 30*s.* a week at light work. In Jan. 1933, the workman bought a grocery business with a beer off-licence, & the employers applied for a review by termination or diminution of the 11*s.* 9*d.* a week on the ground that he was able to earn in some suitable employment as much or more than his average weekly earnings before the accident, or alternatively that he had such earning capacity as entitled them to relief. The only evidence called at the arbn. was to the effect that the workman's condition had improved, but that he had to lie down with headaches for a few hours. The county ct. judge said that he formed the conclusion that there was no material change in the workman's working capacity since Nov. 1929. He then went on to find that the workman & his wife shared the profits of the grocery business, & that the share of the profits would be about 30*s.* a week, so that the existing compensation of 11*s.* 9*d.* a week would be correct. The employers appealed on the ground that there was no evidence for the various findings :—Held : there being evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the employers had failed to prove any change of circumstances, that alone was sufficient to justify him in dismissing the application to review, & the other matters did not therefore arise.—STEEL PEECH & TOZER, LTD. v. LAMBERT (1933), 26 B. 3726e. ——.]—A workman suffered injury by accident in Dec. 1932, & was under treatment until Aug. 1933, when he underwent an operation. Compensation was paid on the basis of total incapacity from Dec. 1932 until Apr. 1934, when payments were discontinued. An application for compensation was then made. The employers denied liability on the ground that since the date of the application the workman had not been incapacitated for work by reason of the jury, but they submitted to a declaration of liability. The judge found in favour of the workman & made an award on the basis of total incapacity. In Feb. 1936, the employers applied for a review. Evidence was given that the workman would have had to undergo the operation even if there had been no accident & the employers contended that at the time of the review it could no longer be shown that the incapacity was due to the accident. The judge allowed the application & terminated the employers' liability. The workman appealed :—Held : as the employers, by submitting to a declaration of liability, had made an unqualified admission that the incapacity was due to the accident, it was not open to the judge, without a change of circumstances, to hear new evidence on a matter which had already been decided.—LONDON POWER CO., LTD. v. LAMB, [1936] 3 All E. 3733a. ——.]—A workman was certified to be disabled by an industrial disease contracted whilst employed as a mule spinner, & in 1926 was awarded compensation of £1 a week on the basis that he was fit for any work not in the spinning trade & should be able to earn £1 19*s.* 7*d.* a week, his pre-accident average weekly earnings being £3 19*s.* 7*d.* After being unemployed for some two years he obtained work at a wage of £1 18*s.* a week for a year, when he was again unemployed for nearly two & a half years until Apr. 1932. In Apr. 1932, he obtained employment as a clerk to a commission agent, being employed for each afternoon while racing was proceeding at £1 5*s.* a week. The work was seasonal from Apr. to Nov. in each year. Whilst so employed, in Oct. 1933, he applied for a review of the weekly payment of £1. The county ct. judge held that there had been no change of circumstances since the award of 1926 which would justify a review of that award, & that he could not regard the £1 5*s.* earned for part-time work as any criterion. The Ct. of Appeal set aside the award of 1926 & substituted the actual wage of £1 5*s.* for the estimate of £1 19*s.* 7*d.* & made an award for £1 7*s.* 3½*d.* a week :—Held : the words " he is earning or is able to earn " in sect. 9 (3) (i), were strictly alternative, & the first alternative was not qualified by the words " in some suitable employment or business." Assuming that the £1 5*s.* a week was derived otherwise than from " a suitable employment or business " it still was an average weekly amount which the workman was earning after the accident within the meaning of the first alternative, & as there was no evidence that that amount was not really what he might earn if he took proper steps to get the most remunerative employment he could find, he must be charged with the 25*s.* & no more.—DELTA MILL (1919), LTD. v. BLAKEMORE (1935), 104 L. 3734a. Workman generally more fit for work.]—A colliery repairer had a series of hernia & operations for hernia commencing in 1922. In 1927, on the workman's appln. for compensation, the county ct. judge found as a fact that he was not fit to do the work of repairer, & awarded compensation. In 1928, the employers applied to terminate the weekly payment, & the matter was referred by the judge to the medical referee, who reported that the workman was fit for his former work [illegible] on this [illegible] the employers had rejected at the former hearing & made an award terminating the weekly payments. The workman appealed on the ground that the judge had merely reversed his first decision without any change of circumstances. In view of this argument, the judge was written to & asked what change of circumstances he found which justified him in coming to his decision in 1928. In reply the judge said he had found that the workman was generally more fit for work:—Held: there was evidence that the man was fitter generally, & there had been, therefore, such a change of circumstances as justified the later award.—PARTRIDGE, JONES & PATON JOHN, LTD. v. SULWAY (1928), 21 B. 3734b. Injury to right eye—Subsequent blindness in left eye unconnected with accident—Inability to work.]—A first helper at a blast furnace was in Aug. 1929, injured by reason of a piece of molten metal entering his right eye which was in consequence removed. He returned to work & though he could not do it properly by reason of his injury, he was able to carry on for three years with help & was paid his full former wages. In Nov. 1933, he had to cease work on account of a cataract unconnected with his injury having developed in his left eye, & subsequently resumed work at reduced wages. In Apr. 1935, he applied for review of a declaration of liability which had previously been recorded. The county ct. judge held that, in spite of some physical disability resulting from the accident, the workman would have been earning his pre-accident rate of wages at the date of the arbn. but for an event not connected with the accident & that he had not proved a change of circumstances since the date of filing the declaration of liability. He therefore made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the cessation of work in 1933, although due to a reason unconnected with the accident, was a change of circumstances entitling the workman to ask for a review. The workman was entitled to have compensation for his partial incapacity assessed. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for assessment of compensation.—DRURY v. APPLEBY IRON CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. 3737b. —— General fall in wages.]—A collier being partially incapacitated by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, entered into an agreement with his employers by which, after reciting that the workman's average weekly earnings for twelve months before the accident were £3 19*s.* 4*d.*, it was agreed that the employers should find him suitable employment & pay him the wages which he could earn therein &, in addition to those wages in each week, half the difference between his said average weekly earnings & the wages he could earn at the said employment by working while the pit was at work, but not in any case exceeding £1. After weekly payments under the agreement had been made for some years, the rate of wages having fallen, the employers applied to have the payments reviewed under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I., s. 16:—Held: a change in the rate of wages, being one of the events contemplated & provided for by the agreement, was not such a change in the circumstances as entitled either party to have the weekly payments reviewed.—BARBER, WALKER & CO. v. FLINT, [1929] 1 K. When the unemployment benefit ceased he claimed full compensation, proving that he had made genuine attempts to obtain work but had failed owing to his injury. 3748a. ——.]—A workman was injured by accident on July 4, 1926, & was paid compensation for total incapacity until Jan. 1929, when the weekly payments were reduced to 25*s.* In Mar. 1929, the workman applied for an increase by way of review. The county ct. judge held that there had been no change of circumstances & refused the application. The workman later renewed his application, alleging that a change of circumstances had been created by the combined effect of the state of the labour market & his own injury, & claimed to come within sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found that the workman had not really tried to obtain employment, & again held that there had been no change of circumstances that would justify a review. The workman appealed:—

3748b. No genuine effort to keep work.]—A builder's labourer lost his right eye as a result of an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He was paid full compensation for some two years when he was offered light work which he refused. The employer then applied to terminate the weekly payments but submitted to a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments & a declaration of liability was recorded. The workman within three months applied for a review on the ground that he was entitled to the benefit of the 1931 Act. The county ct. judge found that the workman had in fact obtained two jobs from which he had been dismissed for wilful clumsiness, although he could have done the work. He therefore held that there had been no change of circumstances since the award terminating the weekly payments, & that he had not brought himself within the 1931 Act:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—FEW v. GOODCHILD (ARTHUR G.) & SONS, LTD. 3750a. ——.]—A miner was injured in 1922. His average weekly earnings were 42*s.* 8*d.* He was paid 20*s.* a week as compensation with 15*s.* as war addition. He developed nervous weakness of the heart & neurasthenia. In 1927 an award for 35*s.* a week was made & filed. In Apr. 1932, an application by the employer to diminish the weekly payment was refused, but the medical witnesses agreed that the workman was fit to do suitable light work. The employer thereupon offered the workman a job as a watchman at a weekly wage of 30*s.* in a colliery which was in the process of being dismantled, & the offer was accepted. The workman then received 30*s.* a week as wages & 6*s.* 4*d.* as compensation. In July, 1932, the employer again applied to diminish the weekly payment. The workman contended that there had been no change of circumstances since Apr. 1932, entitling the employer to review, the watchman's job being a job specially created by the employer for the purpose of the review. The county ct. judge held that there was no evidence of any change for the better in the workman's physical capacity, & refused the application. The employer appealed:—Held: there was misdirection, the offer & acceptance of work at 30*s.* a week being in itself a change of circumstances entitling the employer to review. Appeal allowed. 3753b. —— Time for making claim.]—An infant sustained an accident on Jan. 14, 1930, & received compensation at the rate of £1 a week. On June 24, 1930, he was given light work, & in addition to his pay for this work received 8*s.* 3*d.* a week as compensation. He was discharged on Dec. 3, 1930. He became twenty-one on June 30, 1931. In Nov. 1931 certain correspondence passed between the employers' insurers & the workman's solrs. whereby it was agreed that the sum of 8*s.* 3*d.* a week should be paid to the workman as compensation. This letter said, "We think it will be necessary to record an agreement to show the review by consent of the post-infancy basis of compensation. Before doing so, however, we shall be glad to know whether you are prepared to settle this case." The workman never signed this agreement nor was it recorded. He received 8*s.* 3*d.* a week for three weeks only, when he was taken back to work at £2 4*s.* a week. On Jan. 4, 1932, an application was filed by the workman for arbn. by way of review on sg. Limitation to light work not due to accident medical report going beyond reference.]—The employers of a workman, who had been receiving compensation for an injury to his back alleged that he was now "fit for ordinary work" & craved that the matter should be referred to a medical referee under sect. 19. The medical referee certified that the workman was fit for light work only, but added that his unfitness was not due to the accident, the effects of which had completely passed off, but to rheumatic fibrosis. The arbitrator having refused a motion by the employers to end the compensation:—Held: the arbitrator had acted rightly in refusing to end the compensation, in respect that the only matter referred to the medical referee was the question under sect. 19 (2) & the referee has decided that question in the workman's favour. —QUINN v. MOUNT VERNON COLLIERY CO., [1932] S. sa. Recovery of workman—No jurisdiction to increase payments.]—A farm labourer under twenty-one years of age, who had lost an eye by accident arising out of his employment, & had been awarded compensation, brought proceedings for review; & in the course thereof a medical reference was obtained, as a result of which the referee certified that the workman had again become fit for his ordinary work. At a proof subsequently taken in the review proceedings it was established that, if the workman had remained uninjured, he would probably have been earning more during the whole period under review than he had been earning at the time of the accident. The employer thereafter moved the arbitrator to end compensation at the date of the referee's certificate, but the arbitrator refused to do so, on the ground that the workman was, in virtue of 1925 Act, s. 11 (2), entitled to compensation in respect of his earning capacity being as a result of the accident less than it would have been had he not been injured; & he awarded a weekly payment as for partial incapacity until further order of the ct.:—Held: the workman having fully recovered capacity, the arbitrator was bound to end compensation as from the date of the referee's certificate, subject to the workman's right to have the award made suspensory; & the arbitrator was not entitled to award further weekly payments in virtue of sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act, in respect that sect. 11 (2) only warranted the increase of weekly payments to which a workman in minority was already entitled, & had no application in cases where the right to compensation had terminated.—M'ILWRAITH v. PATON, [1932] S. the ground that, but for the accident, he would have been earning £3 0*s.* 6*d.* a week. The county ct. judge held that no agreement capable of being recorded was contained in the letters, & that the application for review was out of time. The workman appealed, & also instituted proceedings to record a memorandum of agreement:—Held: without deciding whether any agreement was in fact contained in the letters, & without prejudice to the proceedings to record a memorandum of agreement, the application for review was out of time. Appeal dismissed.—JOHNSON v. SHARP BROS. & KNIGHT, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 86, C. A.

3753d. —— ——.]—An infant suffered an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment on Dec. 16, 1926. Liability was admitted & compensation of £1 a week paid by the employer until May 17, 1927, when a declaration of liability was filed. The workman was given light work which he was able to do, but after six weeks he left of his own accord. The workman came of age on June 12, 1931, & on Aug. 17, 1931, a letter was written by his solr. to the employer, discussing the amount of compensation payable now that the workman had attained the age of twenty-one & requesting payment of an increased amount. A request for arbn. was filed on Mar. 10, 1932, & at the hearing the county ct. judge upheld a preliminary objection of the employer that the application for review was out of time having regard to sect. 11 (2), as amended by sect. 1 of the 1926 Act:—Held: the point was already decided in Vickers-Armstrongs, Ltd. v. Regan, No. 3753c, ante, that an informal application for review if within time is sufficient to comply with the sect. 3754a. —— —— ——.]—An infant workman at fifteen years of age commenced work at 8*s.* a week. At sixteen years of age when he met with an accident he was receiving 12*s.* a week, & received compensation based on that figure. When he was twenty years old he applied for a review of the weekly payment, his evidence being that three years earlier he had been offered a post on a liner. The county ct. judge found that the workman was not suitable for a post at sea, &, apparently without considering whether the man might have obtained work elsewhere at an increased wage, he further found that at the date of the hearing the workman would probably have been earning, if uninjured, no more than the amount which he was earning when he met with the accident. The workman appealed:—Held: the reasons given by the county ct. judge for his award were unsatisfactory & the case must be remitted for further consideration. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—MILLER v. TAYLOR & SON (1931), 100 L. J. K. B. 641; 145 L. T. 539; 24 B. W. C. C. 237, C. A.

3754b. —— Question of fact.]—An infant workman met with an accident while employed as a motor-lorry driver's mate & received compensation. On attaining twenty-one the workman asked for a review of the weekly payment, alleging that but for the accident he would now have been able to earn wages as a motor-lorry driver. At the hearing of the arbn. the workman called evidence to show that he had learned to drive a motor lorry, but the county ct. judge disbelieved this evidence & made an award in accordance with an offer submitted to by the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the question was purely one of fact & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—RUSTON v. RYBURN (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 101, C. A.

3756a. —— Effect of criminal conviction.]—An infant, aged nineteen & a half, while employed as a railway porter lost his left arm in May, 1913, by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Liability was admitted under the 1906 Act, & a weekly payment of 10*s.* was made from May to Dec. 1913. In Dec. 1913, he was employed as a signalman at 23*s.* a week, & was promoted from time to time so that in 1930 he was being paid at the rate of 65*s.* a week. On Sept. 8, 1930, he committed a criminal offence totally unconnected with his employment, & served a term of imprisonment from Sept. 30, 1930, to July 26, 1931. It being a rule of railway cos. that persons who have been convicted & imprisoned shall not be employed by them the workman was unable to obtain his former employment. In Jan. 1932, he applied for a review of the original payment of 10*s.* a week. The county ct. judge assessed his earning capacity in the open labour market at 20*s.* a week, & held that, had he been uninjured, he would probably have been earning not less than 65*s.* a week at the date of the review. He therefore made an award under Sched. I. (16) of the 1906 Act increasing the compensation to 20*s.* a week, but ordered that such increase should not commence to operate on Sept. 8, 1930, but be suspended until July 26, 1931. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could exercise the discretion given to him by Sched. I. (16) of the 1906 Act, & he had exercised his discretion judicially. Appeal dismissed.—WEBB v. SOUTHERN RY. CO. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 521, C. A.

3762a. What court has jurisdiction.]—Where an arbn. is heard in a county ct. in the district of which both workman & employer reside, & an award is made capable of being reviewed, it is competent for either party to apply for a review in another county ct. in the district of which the accident happened, & the judge of the second county ct. has jurisdiction to hear & determine the case, & is under no obligation to transfer the proceedings to the first county ct. 3762b. ——.]—A claim for compensation was heard by the county ct. judge of the district in which both employer & workman resided. An award was given in favour of the workman & recorded in that ct. The employer then applied for a review, in the county ct. of the district in which the accident happended, having first obtained a certified copy of the award & filed it in the second ct. The county ct. judge of the second ct. refused to transfer the proceedings to the first ct. & found that the workman had recovered & made an award ending the weekly payments. The workman appealed, alleged that the second judge had no jurisdiction to hear the review:—Held: the word "shall" in 1925 Act, s. 27, is not mandatory but is qualified by the words "subject to rules of ct." & by rule 89 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to hear the review. He also had jurisdiction by virtue of County Ct. Act, 1919 (c. 73), s. 10 (1). Appeal dismissed.—THOMAS ALLEN, LTD. v. HAGGER (No. 3) (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 513, C. A.

3766a. Particulars—Contents of.] — Upon an application by an employer to review a weekly payment & diminish it, or terminate or diminish it, the appropriate form is Form 5, under which certain particulars are to be given. These do not include particulars of the extent to which diminution is asked for, but the county ct. judge has a discretion to order or to refuse such further particulars under r. 29 (2). His decision on the point is not a decision on a question of law, & there is no appeal therefrom. Semble: such particulars ought to be sparingly ordered, & not with the object of compelling the county ct. judge to give costs to one side or the other, & there is much greater reason for asking for particulars of the extent of diminution of a weekly payment where termination is not asked for, than where the employer is asking for termination or diminution.—VICKERS, LTD. v. MINERS, THAMES STEAM TUG & LIGHTERAGE CO. v. INGRAM (1927), 96 L. 3769a. —— —— ——.]—A workman suffered an accident to his right eye in Apr. 1923. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. In Dec. 1927, the weekly payments were reviewed & the county ct. judge made an award in respect of partial incapacity at the rate of 17*s.* 6*d.* a week, such rate to date from Feb. 1927. Compensation continued to be paid at this rate without any suggestion on the part of the workman that the rate should be altered. In June, 1929, the employers filed an application for redemption of the 17*s.* 6*d.* per week under sect. 13 on the basis of permanent partial incapacity. The workman's solrs. wrote to the employers that the workman objected to the application to redeem, but that they could not object to it as they themselves felt that his medical condition was & would continue to be the same as it had been for the past two years, At the hearing of the application on July 1, medical evidence was called to the effect that the workman's condition was stabilised & that there was unlikely to be any change in either eye. The county ct. judge, however, dismissed the application to redeem, stating that he was doing so in the exercise of the discretion which, in his opinion, the legislature had given to him. The employers gave notice of appeal, & later the workman filed an application for review on the ground that his incapacity had increased:—Held: (1) the employers have an absolute right to redeem, & the judge has no discretion to refuse such application; (2) the application of the workman to review not being in existence at the date of the hearing of the employers' application to redeem & the right of the employers to redeem having become crystalised by that date, the subsequent application to review could have no effect.—ELLIOTT, LTD. v. HOBBS (1929), 22 B. 3771a. —— ——.]—An injured workman was paid full compensation at 22*s.* 10*d.* per week until Mar. 23, 1933. On Oct. 31, 1933, an agreement was entered into between the parties, whereby the employer agreed to employ the workman on light work at 2*s.* 6*d.* per day for eight months during the year & to pay compensation at 14*s.* 7*d.* per week. On Jan. 7, 1936, the employer applied to redeem the weekly payments on the basis of a weekly payment of 14*s.* 7*d.* per week, & the workman applied for a review of the award on the ground of a change of circumstances:—Held (1) the agreement to provide light work & pay compensation must be regarded as a whole & the employers could not redeem on the basis of a weekly payment of 14*s.* 7*d.*; (2) the employers should have asked for a review of the weekly payment & redemption, & the county ct. judge was not bound on an application for redemption on the footing of a weekly payment of 14*s.* 7*d.* to proceed to a review of the weekly sum; (3) the counter-applica- of the workman for a review did not oblige the county ct. judge to review the payment for the purposes of the employer's application to redeem.—PICK v. PALING, [1936] 2 All E. 3801a. —— Scheme inapplicable where employment occasional—What is occasional work.]—By Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, clause 2, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the grinding of metal by mechanical power or in glazing, when such glazing is carried on in the same room as the grinding, but by proviso (a) thereof the scheme is not to apply, if such employment is occasional only, & for not more than eight hours in any week. A workman, employed by knife-blade manufacturers, superintended the girls in the glazing shop, & also worked on the processes of glazing known as rebuffing & whittening. In the course of his work he used an abrasive wheel in the whittening shop, whittening involving the raising of silica dust. He became totally disabled from silicosis & was certified accordingly. The county ct. judge found that the work done by the workman in rebuffing & whittening was "occasional only & for not more than eight hours in any week," & was, therefore, within the above proviso, & that he was thereby precluded from the benefit of the scheme. The workman appealed:—Held: for the employment to fall within the proviso it must be both "occasional only" & "for not more than eight hours in any week." In this case the workman was called on, under his ordinary employment, to do the work, &, therefore, such work was not "occasional only."—MAKIN v. NEEDHAM, VEALL & TYZACK, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. 3801b. —— Disablement before Scheme in operation.]—By Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, dated Dec. 11, 1928, workmen engaged in certain processes are brought within the operation of the 1925 Act. By para. 2 the scheme came into operation on Feb. 1, 1929, & is made to apply to all workmen employed at any time on or after Jan. 1, 1929, in the processes therein specified. By para. 11 1925 Act, s. 14, requiring the claim to be made within six months of the happening of the accident, is made to apply, the disablement being treated as the date of the accident. A street mason employed on Jan. 1, 1929, on a process within the scheme was taken ill on Jan. 8, & later went to hospital suffering from silicosis. He did not know until Apr. that he was entitled to compensation. On Apr. 28 he wrote to the certifying surgeon who, however, was away. He took no further steps to get certified until at the end of June he was discharged from hospital in order to see the certifying surgeon, who examined him & certified him on July 2, 1929, to be disabled by silicosis as from Jan. 10, 1929. On July 12 he first gave notice to his employer of the accident & made a claim. The county ct. judge held that the accident having occurred between Jan. 1 and Feb. 1, 1929, was not one to which the scheme applied, & that there was no reasonable cause why the workman should have delayed making his claim until two days after the six months had expired. The workman appealed:—Held: although the Scheme did not become operative until Feb. 1, 1929, it nevertheless applied to all workmen employed on or after Jan. 1, 1929, & therefore applied to a workman employed on Jan. 1, 1929, who was certified after that date as being disabled. On the second point the award was upheld on the ground that there was here no reasonable cause for the delay in making a claim. Appeal dismissed. —HOLT v. HOBSON (ANDREW) & SONS (1930), 23 B. W. C. 3801c. Order extending Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), s. 8, to Ironworkers' cataract — Construction of Order.] — Held: the proviso to Workmen's Compensation (Ironworkers' Cataract) Order, 1925, was not governed by the operative words in par. 2 which contained the absolute limit of six months in all, & where the incapacity was continuing, compensation could be allowed for the continuing incapacity. Semble: the absence of a bed in a ward or a vacancy in a place for an operation would be a good medical reason for the non-performance of an operation within the four months.—DAVIES

he shall forfeit any right to compensation under the Scheme. A workman, who had been certified by the certifying surgeon to be totally disabled by silicosis, claimed compensation from his employer. His claim having been refused, he brought arbn. proceedings, & in the initial writ furnished for the first time the particulars as to his previous employment required by para. 13 of the Scheme:—Held; there being in para. 13 no time limit within which the information must be furnished, the workman, having furnished it in the initial writ, was not in breach of para. 13; &, accordingly, he had not forfeited his right to compensation.—HENRY v. GLADSTONE, [1931] S. sf. Disease result of "long exposure" —Two certificates.]—Industrial Diseases Order, 1929, para. 2, limits the right of a workman, who is disabled for certain forms of employment by the industrial disease of dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, to recover compensation to cases where the arbitrator is satisfied that the disease is the result of "long exposure" to dust & liquids.

A workman employed by rubber manufacturers as a tyre builder, an employment which exposed him to the fumes of benzene, was certified disabled by dermatitis, due to the nature of his employment, in Sept. 1934, & he received compensation as for total incapacity until Nov. 1935, when he obtained a National Health Insurance certificate of fitness for work, & his employers ceased payment. On Jan. 4, 1936, he was given work by the employers as a labourer to their electricians who were doing general repairs while the works were closed for the holidays & no tyre building was being carried on. Within three days, however, he again developed dermatitis, & was certified to be disabled as from Jan. 7, 1936. In arbn. proceedings the employers maintained that the second certificate of disablement could alone be regarded, &, as that disablement was not the result of "long exposure," the limitation in the Order applied. In awarding compensation as for partial incapacity, the arbitrator found that the workman had never wholly recovered from the original disablement in 1934, which was the result of "long exposure"; that his subsequent condition was one of increased susceptibility to another disabling attack; & that his disablement on Jan. 7, 1936, was due to that susceptibility in addition to the conditions under which he worked between Jan. 4 & Jan. 7.

In a question as to whether, in determining liability for compensation, the effects of the original disablement might be treated as a cause of the injury notwithstanding the second certified disablement: Held: while the second certificate established that, as from Jan. 7, 1936, the workman was disabled from earning full wages through dermatitis, it could not be read as importing that he had recovered from the disease previously certified, & was consistent with the view that the later disablement was simply due to a recrudescence of the original disease, &, accordingly, the arbitrator was entitled to make his award on the basis of an original injury by accident in Sept. 1934.—MACNAMARA v. INDIA TYRE & RUBBER CO., [1937] S. 3801d. Right to compensation not limited to skilled workers.]—Applt. was employed by resps., who were varnish manufacturers, as a general labourer. He was twenty-two years of age & his wages were £2 a week. His work was to help with the loading & unloading of vehicles, & clean & fill old varnish drums In the course of his work he came into contact with rosin, turps, wood-oil, gum, etc., & he had to use turpentine for cleaning his hands as soap would not remove the dirt. In Dec. 1929, the certifying surgeon certified that he was suffering from dermatitis produced by dust & liquids & was thereby disabled for work. On a claim for compensation under the Act the county ct. judge awarded him a weekly sum for compensation from Dec. 7, 1929, until Feb. 1, 1930, when it was to be terminated. He held that applt. was not then disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed ; that he was employed as a labourer simply & that he had full capacity to perform all kinds of general labouring work ; & that the wording of sect. 43 (1) (i) precluded applt., who was a labourer, from recovering compensation as a worker in the varnish-making industry or otherwise than as a general labourer :— Held : the view taken by the county ct. judge that the workman did not come within sect. 43 was erroneous. There was nothing in the words of that sect. which limited its application to skilled workers in a process. It applied to any ordinary unskilled labourer who suffered from any industrial disease due to the nature of his employment, & who was thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed.—GILMORE v. FREDERICK BOEHM, LTD. Extension of section to other diseases by Order in Council—Subject to modification—What amounts to modification.]—1925 Act, s. 43 (3), gives the Secretary of State power to " make Orders for extending the provisions of this section to other diseases & other processes, & to injuries due to the nature of any employment specified in the Order not being injuries by accident, either without modification or subject to such modifications as may be contained in the Order." Workmen's Compensation (Industrial Diseases) Consolidation Order, 1929, para. 1, extends the provisions of sect. 43 " subject to the modifications hereinafter specified," to (inter alia) cataract caused by exposure to rays from molten or red-hot metal. Para. 3 provides that " a person suffering from cataract shall not be entitled to compensation under the provisions of the said sect. on account of that disease for more than six months in all," subject to a power of extension at the discretion of the arbitrator acting on the advice of the medical referee :— Held : para. 3 was a " modification " within sect. 43 (3), & was therefore not ultra vires.—LEONARD v. REDBROOK TINPLATE CO., LTD., [1931] A. 3801f. Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme —Necessity for employment on process when Scheme brought into force.]—By para. 2 of Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, which came into force on July 1, 1927, the Scheme is made to apply to any workman employed on or after that date in certain processes connected with the grinding of metals. By para. 7 the certifying surgeon is to certify the date of disablement, & by para. 4 the workman, to qualify for compensation, must have been employed in the specified processes within the three years previous to the certified date. By para. 5, where the workman has been employed in the processes for not less than five years, the onus is on the employer to prove that the disease is not due to employment in the processes instead of on the workman to prove that the disease is so due. A workman had been employed as a nail & tack maker for thirty-five years & as such had for many years to use a sandstone grindstone. On Feb. 7, 1930, the workman ceased work, & on Aug. 19, 1930, he was certified by the certifying surgeon to be suffering from silicosis, the date of disablement being fixed as Feb. 7, 1930. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found that, although the workman had not been employed in any process mentioned in para. 2 of the Scheme since the Scheme came into force, yet as he had been employed previously in such a process for not less than five years, he held that the employers had failed to discharge the onus put upon them by para. 5 of the Scheme, & therefore held that the disease must be deemed to be due to the employment. He accordingly made an award in favour of the workman. The employer appealed :— Held : by the finding of fact that the workman had not been employed in any process mentioned in the Scheme on or after the date when the Scheme came into force, the workman was not within the Scheme at all, & therefore para. 5 could not be made to apply to him. Appeal allowed.—HUGHES v. HARRISON & COOK (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 104, C. A.

Date of disablement—No date in certificate —Date of accident.]—Various Industries (Silicosis) Amendment Scheme, 1930, which came into force on Feb. 1, 1931, held applicable to a workman who ceased work by reason of silicosis on Dec. 27, 1930, for the reason that no date of commencement of the disease was stated in the surgeon's certificate which was given on May 7, 1931.—BRIDGES v. NEW ROCK COLLIERIES CO. 3801h. —— No wages earned within twelve months of date—Calculation of compensation.]—Where a workman is certified to be totally disabled from silicosis & the date of disablement is more than two years after the date when he was last employed in a process coming within Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1927, he can, in view of the proviso to para. 4, sub-para. 1, of the Scheme that " no compensation shall be payable if the workman has not been employed at any time in the processes within the three years previous to the date of total disablement," recover compensation from that last employer, notwithstanding that by 10 of the Scheme sects. 8 to 13 of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, are made applicable for the purpose of fixing the amount of compensation but with the exception that the amount of compensation is to be calculated with reference to the earnings of the workman under the employer from whom compensation able under the Scheme.

The provision in sect. 9 (2) of 1925 Act that the weekly payment of compensation shall be fixed by s average weekly twelve months" for the purpose of the Scheme be as to apply to the altered circumstances, by treating it as referring to the previous twelve months during which the workman was employed in a process coming within the Scheme.—BACON v. WILLS (A. 3801j. —— —— ——.]—By para. 4 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, where a workman is certified as totally disabled from silicosis, & the disease is due to the employment in the processes whether under one or more employers, compensation shall be payable during such disablement as if the disease were a personal injury by accident arising out of & in the course of that employment. By para. 11 of the same Scheme the total disablement is to be treated as the happening of the accident. A collier working in a process to which this scheme applied, whose average weekly earnings were 56*s.* 8*d.* gave up work in Nov. 1929, owing to illness which ultimately proved to be silicosis. From June, 1930, to March, 1931, he was re-employed by the same employers as a whitewasher, work not within the scheme, at an average weekly wage of 45*s.* 4*d.* He was unemployed from Mar. 1931, to Nov. 1931, when he returned to work with them as a whitewasher. He ceased work owing to illness on Dec. 11, 1931. In May, 1932, a Medical Board certified him as totally disabled from silicosis, & fixed the date of disablement as Jan. 1, 1932. The workman claimed to be paid compensation based on his average weekly earnings as a collier, but the county ct. judge held that compensation previous to the certified date of disablement, viz. on the lower rate paid to a whitewasher. The workman appealed :—Held : the combined effect of paras. 4 & 11 of the Scheme was to provide that compensation should be based on the average weekly earnings earned in the process which gave rise to the disease, & the words "previous twelve months" in sect. 9 (2) must be construed accordingly. The workman must therefore be paid compensation based on the higher rate of a collier. —COLE v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 560, C. A.

PART XIV. SECT. 22, SUB-SECT. 2.

3811a i. Silicosis — Construction of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme.]—A workman was employed as a "hewer" up to Dec. 1931, in a private quarry, his work within the curtilage of the quarry being to dress, for use as building material, sandstone which had been won from the quarry. The quarrymaster was a member of the Sandstone Industry Compensation Fund, Ltd., & had paid, since 1929, levies in respect of his employees, including the workman in question. In Jan. 1933, the workman was certified as suffering from disablement due to a process specified in para. 2 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, & he obtained an award of compensation against a firm of builders, his last employers in these processes. In a question whether the quarrymaster, as a previous employer of the workman, was liable to make contribution to the builders under para. 8 of the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme :—Held : (1) "manipulation" in the sense of para. 2 of Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, was not restricted to any particular process of preparing sandstone, but included fine as well as rough dressing; (2) the work on which the workman had been engaged at the quarry, being that of fine dressing, was a process included in the Sandstone Scheme; (3) as the provisions of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, were, in these circumstances, excluded by the proviso to para. 2 of that Scheme, the quarrymaster was not liable as a contributor. Appeal allowed.—ALEXANDER MILNE & SON v. MACLEAN & SON (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. Suppt. 44.—SCOT.

sf. Pulmonary fibrosis — Whether caused by silica dust—Onus of proof.]—Sect. 7 (1) of New South Wales Workers' Compensation Act, 1926–29, provides for the payment of compensation by his employer to a workman who has received an injury, & by sect. 6 (1). "injury" means "personal injury arising out of & in the course of the employment & includes a disease so arising whether of sudden onset or of such a nature as to be contracted by gradual process other than a disease caused by silica dust." Workmen's Compensation (Silicosis) Act, 1920, as amended, provides for the payment of compensation by the employers of workmen in specified industries & processes involving exposure to silica dust who suffer death or total or partial disablement from diseases of the pulmonary or respiratory organs caused by exposure to silica dust. "Coal-mining" is not included in the industries or processes so specified.

Resp., who was employed by applts. as a miner in one of their coal-mines, became partially incapacitated for work owing to pulmonary fibrosis resulting from the inhalation of dust in the coal-mine. The Workers' Compensation Commission before whom his claim for compensation came, & who were not satisfied that the partial incapacity for work resulted from a disease caused by silica dust, awarded him compensation as for partial incapacity. On a case stated at the request of applts. :—Held : resp. was entitled to compensation. The intention of Workers' Compensation Act was, as appears from sect. 6 (1) to provide for compensation in every case of injury, including disease, arising out of & in the course of a workman's employment, & to give effect to the Act the words "other than a disease caused by silica dust." must be read as inserted not to limit the Act, but to prevent it being appealed to in particular circumstances where the relief would overlap that provided by a special & narrower 3811a. Silicosis—Construction of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928.]—By clause 2 (vii of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the potteries in certain specified processes only. One of such specified processes is " any process in or incidental to the manufacture of china or earthenware, including sanitary earthenware, electrical earthenware, & ware tiles." A workman was employed to put spouts & handles on teapots made of Jet & Rockingham ware, & was certified as being totally disabled from silicosis. Evidence was given before the county ct. judge that Jet & Rockingham ware was a special branch of the pottery trade & did not come within the meaning of the trade term " earthenware "—Held: the words used in describing the processes specified in the scheme are to be interpreted in the technical sense in which they would be understood by those engaged in the trades concerned & not in the wide sense in which they might be understood by the general public.—DONCASTER v. SUDLOW (R.) & SONS (1929), 22 B. 3811b. —— ——.]—A coal miner was employed for eleven years, during which time he worked in rock known as " clift." He was then certified as being totally disabled from silicosis & claimed compensation under Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, as amended by Silicosis Amendment Scheme, 1930. The 1928 scheme excluded from the definition of silica rock in clause 2 (i.) of the scheme " any rock containing less than 50 per cent. free silica." These words were deleted by the Amendment Scheme, 1930. At the hearing of the arbn. the employers called a geologist who gave evidence that " clift " did not contain 50 per cent. free silica & was not silica rock. The county ct. judge accepted this evidence, & found that the workman had not been employed in work in silica rock, & therefore had not worked in any process covered by the scheme. The workman appealed :—Held: there was no evidence that " clift " was silica rock. The question was one of fact for the county ct. judge.—DAVIES v. OAKDALE NAVIGATION COLLIERIES, LTD. 3811c. —— ——.]—A miner worked in his employer's collieries from 1910 to Apr. 26, 1929, when he had to cease work. In Dec. 1931, he was certified to be suffering from silicosis, & to have been disabled in Aug. 1931. His employer admitted that the disease was due to employment in the processes of drilling & blasting in silica rock, but alleged that his employment in such processes had ceased before Jan. 1, 1929. The Silicosis Scheme of 1928 only applied to workmen employed in such processes after Jan. 1, 1929. The county ct. judge, after seeing samples of the materials in which the workman had been working between Jan. 1, 1929, & Apr. 26, 1929, found as a fact that the workman had been engaged in drilling & blasting in silica rock after Jan. 1, 1929, & held that he was therefore entitled to the benefit of the Scheme. The employer appealed :—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Whether the quantum of silica rock, in regard to which the workman was employed, is sufficient to bring him within the scheme, is a question of fact for the judge. Appeal dismissed.—PRICE v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 615, C. A.

3811d. —— ——.]—A miner was employed after Jan. 1, 1929, until June 12, 1929, when he became disabled for work by silicosis as a rider on the trams in which silica rock was conveyed. A great deal of dust was created while the trams were moving. He would often have to handle the silica rock when the trams overturned. The county ct. judge found that the workman was employed in the process of handling or moving silica rock in or incidental to the processes specified in the scheme, & made his award for the workman. The employer appealed :—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—WILLIAMS v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 634, C. A.

3811f. —— ——.]—By para. 2 (vii.) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, the scheme applies to all workmen employed on or after Jan. 1, 1929, in " any process in or incidental to the manufacture of china . . . up to & including the preparation for glazing." A workman was employed in the pottery trade as a glost oddman & wad-squeezer. He made wads of clay which were used to close the saggars in which the ware was placed, after having been dipped in the liquid glaze, for heating & hardening in the glost ovens. The workman was disabled by silicosis & applied for compensation.

scheme. Till such overlapping appears its operation is unaffected. To hold otherwise would have the result that where the medical evidence showed that the disease was due to dust but could not specify the kind of dust, the workman would be left without any compensation at all though undoubtedly suffering from a disease arising out of & in the course of his employment. Coal-mining not being an industry brought within the operation of the Act dealing with silicosis, if disease in a coal-miner was affirmatively proved to be due to silica dust the workman was left unprotected, for in such case he would not come within either Workers' Act or Workmen's Compensation (Silicosis) Act.—METROPOLITAN COAL CO., LTD. v. PYE, [1936] A. sh. Dupuytren's Contraction.]—A worker who had been employed in the hat-making industry for periods aggregating eighteen years, became incapacitated for work by Dupuytren's Contraction, a disease of gradual progress, & claimed compensation from his last employer in that industry, who denied liability. The Comrs. held that Dupuytren's Contraction is not in the same category as an industrial disease, for instance, lead poisoning, for the reason that the cause of lead poisoning may arise out of the employment, whereas the cause of Dupuytren's Contraction remains unknown; that the real question at issue was one of fact as to whether appct.'s employment in the felt hat industry was such as would aggravate the disease after its onset, accelerate its progress, & be a contributing cause to his incapacity for work. The Commission found that as the evidence did not establish any connection between appct.'s employment & his incapacity for work, his claim for compensation must be disallowed.—HAMILTON v. R. C. HENDERSON & CO. LTD., [1934] W. C. R. 200.—AUS.

county ct. judge found that the operation of glazing included the process of placing the ware in saggars & then placing the saggars in the glost ovens, but held that as the wads were actually made before this was done, the workman was employed in a process in or incidental to the manufacture of china up to & including the preparation for glazing. He therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: on the facts found by the county ct. judge as to what processes constituted the operation of glazing, the making of the wads was a process which belonged to the operation of glazing itself & did not come within the words "any process . . . up to & including the preparation for glazing."—ELLIS v. [illegible]

3811g. —— "Process involving exposure to silica dust"—Question of fact.]—A miner was employed first as a ripper & later as a stall man in a coal mine from 1913 to 1930. As a stallman he was only occasionally employed in drilling & blasting. He ceased work in Nov. 1930; a medical board certified that he was suffering from silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, & that total disablement commenced in Oct. 1931. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman had been employed since Jan. 1, 1929 (the date from which the Silicosis Scheme, 1928, applied), in the process of drilling & blasting within the meaning of the scheme, & that the stone in which he worked was silica rock within the meaning of the scheme as amended in 1930. He therefore awarded compensation. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. It is a question of fact for the judge whether the workman is sufficiently engaged in the operation under consideration to bring him within the scheme as being employed in a process specified therein.—KILBRIDE v. WILLIAM HARRISON, LTD. Both Morgan & Hutchings did work breaking down shale which, though not silica rock in itself, contained small lenticles of quartz which became broken in the course of work. The county ct. judge found that the men were not employed in any process referred to in the Scheme. This award was affirmed by the Ct. of Appeal. The workmen appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: as the lenticles themselves were silica rock & were broken in the course of work, the workmen were within process (v) of Clause 2 referring to the breaking of silica rock. 3811j. —— —— ——.]—For twenty-two years a miner was employed in blasting & drilling stone. In Sept. 1928, he was employed by fresh employers as a stone ripper breaking friable shale. On July 7, 1933, he was certified to be suffering from silicosis. On a claim by him for compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, & the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the employers denied that the disease was due to the nature of his employment by them. The workman alleged that he was employed in breaking a dry admixture containing a dry deposit or dry residue of silica, & was therefore brought within the scheme. The county ct. judge, after hearing the evidence of expert analysts accepted the evidence of the employers' expert, who stated that the shale was not a dry admixture containing a dry deposit or dry residue of silica, & held that the workman was not employed in any process within the scheme. The workman appealed:—Held: the question was one of fact, & there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—GLEDHALL v. DALTON MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 181, C.

The contention of the employers was upheld by the county ct. judge who made his award in favour of the employers. The workmen appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had not sufficiently considered whether the work in which the workmen were engaged might not come within those general "sweeping-up" clauses of the scheme which followed the clauses which specified more particularly the processes in which workmen must be engaged in order to obtain the benefit of the scheme & the cases must be remitted for him to do so.—MORGAN v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD., HUTCHINGS v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. 3811m. —— ——.]—A workman who had been employed in operating a power-driven machine used for drilling, cutting, ripping, or breaking stone in a coal mine, a process specified in the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, as amended in 1930, was certified to be totally disabled by silicosis & claimed compensation. Under the provisions of the Scheme an employer could escape liability in respect of this process if he could prove that the workman had not, during the employment to which the disease was alleged to be due, been exposed to the dust of silica rock. Silica rock was stated to mean, inter alia, quartz. Evidence was given at the arbn. that there were particles of quartz in the stone in which the workman had been working. The county ct. judge found that the workman had been employed in a process within the Scheme & that the employers had failed to prove that the workman had not been exposed to the dust of silica rock & made his award for the workman. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of the county ct. judge & no misdirection on his part, although he had failed to find in terms that the silicosis was due to employment in the relevant process. 3811n. —— Employment under different schemes —Right of election.]—By para. 5 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, it is provided that if the workman had been employed in the processes specified in that scheme for a period amounting to not less than five years, the disease shall be deemed to be due to employment in the processes unless the employer proves the contrary. By para. 4 (a) of Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, it is provided that no compensation shall be payable if the medical board certifies that the silicosis could not have been contracted in the industry owing to the shortness of the time during which the workman has been employed therein.

A stonemason was certified under Various Industries Scheme to be totally disabled by silicosis from June 27, 1932. From July, 1924, to Jan. 1931, he had been employed by G., & then for three years by S. From Apr. to June, 1931, he was employed by P. From July to Aug. 1931, he was again employed by G., & lastly, from Sept. 1931, to Mar. 1932, he was again employed by S. G. & P. were engaged in business to which Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme applied, & S. was engaged in business to which Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme applied, but the work done by the workman for all the employers was of the same class & exposed him in all cases to silica dust. The county ct. judge dismissed a claim for compensation made against G. on the ground that the workman should have proceeded against the employers who last employed him working in silica dust. The workman appealed:—Held: the workman was entitled to elect to proceed under any scheme applicable provided he proceeded against the last employer who employed him in a process under that scheme. Therefore he was entitled to proceed against respts. who had employed him for 6½ years under Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, rather than against his last employer who had only employed him for short periods under Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, & he was particularly justified in doing so in view of para. 5 of Various Industries Scheme, & para. 4 (a) of Sandstone Industry Scheme. —VALE v. GODWIN (THOMAS) & SONS (1933), 26 B. 3811o. —— Construction of Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme.]—By para. 2 of the Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the Scheme applies to the processes of (i.) grinding metals, (ii.) work incidental to grinding metals, & (iii.) racing grindstones for the purpose of grinding metals, provided that the Scheme does not apply to processes (i.) & (ii.) in the case of machine file grinding where the grindstone is enclosed & the metal immersed in water.

A machine file grinder died after being certified by a medical board as being disabled by silicosis. His duty was to grind files by means of an enclosed power-driven grindstone. Each grindstone lasted about a week. Before a fresh grindstone could be used it had to be freely revolved by him to see whether it was perfectly true. During this process the surface was smoothed, if necessary, by means of hacker saws. During the subsequent operation of grinding files the grindstone would require to have fresh inequalities removed from time to time by the same hacker saws. The widow claimed compensation on behalf of herself & her infant child as dependants. At the arbn. evidence was called that the process of revolving the grindstone before work on the files commenced was termed "racing" by the men engaged in the work. The employers' manager said that any use of the hacker saws was "hacking." The county ct. judge found that the preliminary use of the hacker saws was both "hacking" & "racing," & held that the process in which the workman was engaged was not exempted from the scheme. He therefore made his award for the widow. The employers appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge having found as a fact on sufficient evidence that the preliminary use of the hacker saws was "racing" within the meaning of the scheme, it was a process to which the scheme applied & was not within the exemption stated in the proviso to para. 2.—ROBERTS v. ENGLISH STEEL CORPN., LTD. 3811p. —— Time for making claim.]—By sect. 14 of 1925 Act, claims for compensation must be made within six months from the occurrence of the accident giving rise to the claim, unless the workman is prevented from making a claim within that time by (inter alia) a reasonable cause. By the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, the date certified as the date of total disablement is to be treated as being the date of the occurrence of the accident. A miner contracted silicosis in 1930 & was certified as being partially disabled by that disease in 1931. His condition became worse, & he was unable to 3811q. Dermatitis.]—A dock labourer had been [illegible] when he was employed by fresh employers. In Oct., Nov. & Dec. 1930, he was employed in discharging & handling Russian turpentine. On Dec. 24 a certifying surgeon certified that he was suffering from dermatitis, & that the disease commenced on Dec. 8, 1930. He was paid full compensation, which was terminated on Nov. 7, 1931. He applied for a continuance of compensation. The county ct. judge found that he had contracted the disease through the long continued exposure involved in handling oils during the forty years ending in 1929, & therefore held that under para. 2 of Workmen's Compensation (Industrial Diseases) Consolidation Order, 1929, he was entitled to compensation although he was disabled only from handling oils, & made an award for the workman for 10*s.* a week. The employers appealed:—Held: the interpretation of the words "long continued exposure" was a question of fact & degree for the county ct. judge, & he had in no way misdirected himself. Appeal dismissed.—HAGAN v. LONDON OIL STORAGE CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 278, C. A.

3811r. ——.]—A steel chipper had been employed for seventeen years without having suffered from any skin disease. On Aug. 18, 1933, he had to give up his work owing to skin trouble, & on Oct. 17, 1933, he was certified to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids as from Aug. 27, 1933. In Aug. neither he nor his panel doctor connected his disease with his employment. He gave notice to his employers of the disease in Oct. 1933, but did not make a claim for compensation until Mar. 1934. In his evidence the panel doctor said he thought the skin trouble was due to the employment & added that he saw no other cause. The certifying surgeon was called by the employers & stated that the disease was not due to industrial infection but was a seborrhœic infection not due to occupation. The county ct. judge said that after carefully considering the evidence he was not satisfied that the dermatitis was caused by the employment, & he thought that the dermatitis was caused by some agency not connected with the employment. He accordingly made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was no misdirection on the part of the county ct. judge, & evidence to support his finding.—HOLFORD v. STEEL, PEECH & TOZER, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 260, C. In October, 1933, eruptions having appeared on his hands, he was certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from [illegible] ficate was never served on the employers. At about the same time he was examined by a dermatologist, who formed the opinion that the workman was suffering from seborrhœic eczema, an idiopathic type of dermatitis, & not from dermatitis due to dust or liquids. In Jan. 1934, the workman went back to work, but the eruptions reappeared, & in Feb. 1934, the certifying surgeon again [illegible] van boy. In Dec. 1935, a rash having reappeared on his arms & neck, the workman filed a request for arbn. On the hearing of the arbn. the certifying surgeon & another doctor who were called by the workman, stated that in their opinion the workman was at that time suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids. The dermatologist who was called by the employers gave it as his opinion that the workman had suffered both in Oct. 1933, & in Mar. 1935, & was still suffering, from seborrhœic eczema & nothing else. His evidence was corroborated by another dermatologist. The county ct. judge found that the workman had fully recovered from the dermatitis produced by dust or liquids which had been certified in Feb. 1934, & that since Mar. 1935, he had only suffered from seborrhœic eczema & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—STANFORD v. FLINN & SON, LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 126, C. A.

Consequently a claim by the workman for compensation founded upon the certificate was not made within the period prescribed by 1925 Act, s. 14 (1), namely, six months from the occurrence of the accident, the disablement being treated by sect. 43 as the happening of the accident. If the certificate had been granted immediately after the examination of the workman by the certifying surgeon the claim for compensation could have been made in time:—Held: on the facts, the 3816a. Certificate of death—Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928—Whether presence of medical referee at post-mortem essential.]—By clause 14 (1) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, it is provided that where an application is made on behalf of dependants of a deceased workman to a medical referee for a certificate that death has been due to silicosis or silicosis & tuberculosis, the medical referee must, after a post-mortem examination, give a certificate in accordance with the facts & such certificate shall be conclusive. It is further provided by the same paragraph that the post-mortem examination shall, if possible, be made by or under the personal supervision of the medical referee. The last provision is directory & not imperative. Therefore, where, on the death of a workman, a coroner ordered a post-mortem examination, which the medical referee was not invited to attend, & subsequently, after an examination of portions of the lungs, the medical referee gave a certificate that death was due to silicosis & tuberculosis:—Held: (1) the provisions of clause 14 (1) of the Scheme were complied with & the certificate was conclusive; (2) further, the correct procedure to quash a certificate would be to obtain a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari.—HINDMARSH v. JOHNS (EDWARD) & CO., LTD. 3816b. Application for certificate—Notice to employer—Necessity for.]—A workman employed in the process of cotton-spinning by means of self-acting mules noticed a black pimple on his scrotum. His panel doctor who happened also to be the certifying surgeon for the district, suspected epitheliomatous cancer (being item 13 (a) in the Extension of Sched. III) & sent him to the infirmary where the diagnosis was confirmed. The workman obtained a certificate of disablement by such disease & notice thereof was given to the employer. The employer appealed to the medical referee. The workman then had the pimple removed & sent for microscopic examination, & the report of the examination was sent to the medical referee. As a result the medical referee reported that the workman was not suffering from epitheliomatous cancer but from a keratotic condition. By the Workmen's Compensation (Industrial Diseases) Order, S. R. & O., 1932, No. 314, this condition was placed within Sched. III as an industrial disease, but it was also provided in the Order that compensation should not be payable under the Act for that disease unless at least one week's notice of intention to apply for a certifying surgeon's certificate had been given to the employer. No such notice had been given, & on that ground the employer refused to pay compensation. On the workman's application for compensation the county ct. judge held that the notice was a condition precedent to claiming compensation & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: under the special provisions of the Order, the requirement as to notice was a condition precedent to the payment of compensation & could not be excused. The workman must be deemed to know that his application to the certifying surgeon might result in his obtaining a certificate of disablement by this disease. Appeal dismissed. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords refused.—HASLAM v. SELBY MILL, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 82, C. A.

3818a. ——— ———.]—A french polisher had suffered intermittently from dermatitis since 1925, while working for different employers. The medical referee issued a certificate on Jan. 30, 1928, in which he certified that on Jan. 30, 1928, appct. was no longer disabled by dermatitis. On Mar. 10, 1928, appct. was examined by the certifying surgeon, who on that date certified that she was suffering from dermatitis & had been disabled thereby since Sept. 29, 1927. On a claim by the workman for compensation based on the certifying surgeon's certificate of Mar. 10, 1928, the county ct. judge held the two certificates, being inconsistent, the certificate of the medical referee must prevail to the effect that the workman was not disabled after Jan. 30, 1928:—Held: there was no vital inconsistency between the two certificates, bearing in mind the intermittent character of dermatitis, & the certificate of Mar. 10 was consistent with dermatitis having broken out again.—MACY v. CORK MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. 3819a. Certificate incomplete—Death of certifying surgeon—Subsequent certificate by successor—Validity.]—On July 12, 1926, eighteen months after the workman had left his employment, Dr. S., the certifying surgeon of the district, certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning. The certificate did not comply with the regulations as no date of disablement was filled in, nor were the words "I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out. Before the workman could see Dr. S. to have the omission put right the doctor died. After Dr. F. had been appointed in his place the workman, on Aug. 12, 1926, obtained a certificate from him in which the date of disablement was filled in as Nov. 23, 1924. In answer to the workmen's request for arbn., based on Dr. F.'s certificate, the employers denied liability to pay compensation on the ground that, as

Dr. S.'s certificate did not specify the date of disablement, such date was deemed to be the date of the certificate, & was final & conclusive, & Dr. F.'s certificate was accordingly invalid, & as the workman had not been in their employment for more than twelve months prior to that date of disablement, he could not recover compensation. The county ct. judge upheld that contention:—Held: the first certificate was incomplete in that it had not dealt with the date of disablement in either manner provided by the regulations & was invalid, & the workman, not being able by reason of the death of Dr. S. to have the matter put in order, was entitled to rely on the second certificate.—POWELL v. CAULDON POTTERIES, LTD. 3819b. Certificate ineffective—Issue of second certificate.]—A miner was certified by the certifying surgeon as being disabled from Mar. 31, 1924, by miner's nystagmus. From Oct. 1924, to Mar. 1929, he worked on the surface as a partially incapacitated workman. On Mar. 8, 1929, he was served under 1925 Act, s. 12 (3) with a doctor's certificate alleging complete recovery, & the question was ultimately referred to a medical referee, who, in Apr. 1929, certified that the workman was not then suffering from miner's nystagmus & was fit to resume work underground. On Dec. 12, 1929, the workman obtained from the same certifying surgeon a certificate that he was disabled by miner's nystagmus, but the certificate did not certify a date from which disablement commenced, nor were the words "& I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out in accordance with the instructions contained in Form 3 in the schedule to the regulations as to certifying surgeons, which states "[if the surgeon is unable to certify a date on which the disablement commenced, he should strike out this part of the certificate. In that case the disablement will be deemed to have commenced on the date on which this certificate is given]." On obtaining this certificate the workman made a claim for compensation on his employers, who appealed to a medical referee. The medical referee on Jan. 4, 1930, dismissed the employer's appeal. The certifying surgeon then issued a second certificate which he ante-dated Dec. 12, 1929, & in which he certified that the workman's disablement commenced on Mar. 31, 1924. In Mar. 1930, the workman filed an application for arbn. based on an allegation of recurrence of the industrial disease which originally manifested itself in 1924. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that the date of disablement must be taken to be Dec. 12, 1929, & that the certifying surgeon had no power to displace the certificate given on Dec. 12, 1929, by the certificate given in Jan. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of Dec. 12, 1929, was ineffective, as no date of disablement could be inferred from it, & the certifying surgeon was entitled to issue an effective certificate giving the date of disablement as Mar. 31, 1924. A leading symptom of the disease was stated on the form to be dupuytrens contraction. Full compensation was paid until an application by the employers to review the weekly payments. The workman was still incapacitated by dupuytrens contraction. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive as to dupuytrens contraction being a symptom of lead poisoning, &, on contradictory medical evidence given at the hearing, & also on knowledge he had acquired some years before while sitting on a commission to consider industrial diseases, including dupuytrens contraction, held the symptoms, though still the same as those set out in the certificate, were not due to the certified disease, & reduced the compensation to 1*d.* a week. The case involved a point of law, &, early in the hearing, counsel called attention to that fact, but the judge omitted to take any notes of the proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate that the symptoms were due to the certified disease was conclusive, & evidence to the contrary was inadmissible, & there was no evidence of any new factor or new disease to support an award in reduction of compensation. 3821f. —— Failure to give notice of disablement.] —A workman was employed by resp. as a labourer at breaking up concrete floors & relaying them. After varying periods of employment he ultimately stopped work on July 22, 1929, & on July 30 obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon that he was disabled from dermatitis contracted during his employment by resp., & fixing the date of disablement as Mar. 14, 1929. Resp. paid the workman compensation till Nov. 19, 1929, when resp.'s doctor reported that the workman had practically recovered & was fit for any work except on cement. Resp. then employed the workman at other work till Dec. 24, 1929, when he was dismissed for want of work. After a period of unemployment the workman obtained work in Apr. 1930, with new employers in unloading lorries containing old iron, rags & bones. By May 2 the dermatitis had become so bad that he had to cease work. On Aug. 28, 1930, he obtained a second certificate from the certifying surgeon that he was suffering from dermatitis, but fixing the date of disablement at the date of the original disablement, Mar. 14, 1929. On this occasion no notice of disablement was given to resp., & he remained unaware of the certificate till the workman commenced the present proceedings against him for compensation on Sept. 19, 1930. The county ct. judge declined in the circumstances to treat the second certificate as conclusive of the date of disablement in accordance with 1925 Act, s. 43 (2), & on the evidence that the workman had recovered from the disablement of Mar. 14, 1929, by Nov. of that year, dismissed the application. On appeal : —Held : (1) as no notice of disablement had been given after the second certificate as required by 1925 Act, s. 14 & r. 41, subr. 2, of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, so that resp. was never given the opportunity of appealing to the medical referee as provided by reg. 8 of the Regulations as to Certifying Surgeons, the certificate was not conclusive of the date of disablement ; (2) as there was evidence to support the county ct. judge's finding that the workman had recovered from the old disablement, the appeal must be dismissed.—MASON v. FOSTER, [1931] 2 K. 3821g. ——.]—A glass-blower had been employed by S. for thirty years & had become a highly skilled worker. His employment terminated in Apr. 1931, & he was out of work. On Aug. 16, 1932, he was taken on as a glass-blower on trial by W. & C. with a view to being permanently employed if his work should prove satisfactory. The proportion of his spoiled work was so high that he was dismissed on Aug. 17, 1932. In Oct. 1932, he obtained a certificate from a certifying surgeon which stated that he had been disabled by "cataract in glass-workers" since Aug. 12, 1932, & gave the name of his last employer as S. A claim made by him against S. failed for the reason that more than twelve months had elapsed between the end of his employment with S. & the date of his disablement. He then obtained a fresh certificate in Jan. 1933, in which the certifying surgeon altered the date of disablement to Aug. 17, 1932, & the name of his last employer to W. & C. The workman now made a claim against W. & C. for compensation for partial incapacity. The county ct. judge held that there was no loss of earning capacity because he was already suffering from cataract when he entered into employment with W. & C., & the high proportion of rejected work showed him to have become reduced in skill to the level of a glass-blower's labourer. He therefore only awarded him a declaration of liability. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge was wrong in admitting evidence to show that the man was disabled from the disease before the date of disablement which appeared in the second certificate which was conclusive on this point. The matter must be remitted to estimate the compensation to which the man was entitled on this basis.—KIRKHAM v. WEBB & CORBETT, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 425, C. A.

He worked for resp. until May 9, when he felt too ill to continue. On June 4 he obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon who certified that he was suffering from dermatitis & gave May 9 as the date of the beginning of the disablement. Resp. appealed to the medical referee who decided that applt. was, when examined by the certifying surgeon, suffering from dermatitis, but fixed Apr. 6, 1936, as the date on which the disease began. At that date applt. was, as stated, working for H. K. & F., Ltd., & receiving full wages. Applt. sought to recover compensation from resp.:—Held: the medical referee's certificate was final & conclusive as to the date of the beginning of the disease & applt. was not entitled to endeavour to displace that certificate by showing that on a certified matter it was not in accordance with the facts.—SAVAGE v. NIGHTINGALE, [1937] 3 All E. 3821j. As to extent of disability.]—A miner was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & for a short time received full compensation. On a reduction being made in the weekly payment the workman commenced proceedings claiming restoration of full compensation. The employer then applied for a reference to the medical referee who reported that the workman had partially recovered & was fit for surface work. The hearing of the claim had meanwhile been postponed, but when it came on for hearing medical evidence was given on behalf of the workman to the effect that the workman was totally disabled by the disease. Objection was taken by the employer to this evidence on the ground that the medical referee's certificate was conclusive. The county ct. judge held that miner's nystagmus being a nervous disease & variable in its symptoms, he was entitled to find that there had been a change for the worse since the medical referee had made his report, & he accordingly made his award for the workman on the basis of total incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—ROBERTS v. DENABY & CADEBY MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 112, C. 3822c. Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931—Examination & certification by Medical Board—When certificate conclusive—Re-examination not made "in pursuance of any Compensation Scheme."]—A pottery worker to whom Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, applied ceased work on Sept. 25, 1930. On Sept. 30 the certifying surgeon certified that he was totally disabled from silicosis & that the disablement commenced on Sept. 25. An appeal by the employer to the medical referee having been dismissed, compensation on the basis of total incapacity was paid to the workman. On June 1, 1931, there came into force Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, which instituted a medical board to deal with Silicosis, & Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931. By the preamble to Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the 1928 Scheme was made to continue to apply in the case of workmen who were within that scheme with the exception that the provisions of the new scheme as to the examination & certification by the medical board were substituted for the provisions of the former scheme as to the examination & certification by the certifying surgeon & medical referee. This preamble further stated that the medical board shall have the same powers & duties in cases under the old scheme as under the new scheme. By para. 12 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, & para. 11 of Various Indus. tries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the provisions of the 1925 Act relating to submission to medical examination continued to apply to workmen within the respective schemes. By a proviso to para. 11 of the 1931 Scheme any reference to be made to a medical referee under the provisions of the 1925 Act was to be made to the medical board. By para. 9 of Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, where, " in pursuance of any compensation scheme " an employer applied to a medical board for re-examination of a workman under that scheme or any compensation scheme, the board should re-examine & give a fresh certificate in the appropriate form. On Sept. 9, 1931, the employer applied to the medical board for re-examination of the workman. The workman having submitted under protest to such re-examination, the medical board, on Oct. 21, certified that he was no longer totally incapacitated. The employer thereupon refused to pay further compensation, & on Oct. 26, 1931, the workman filed a request for arbitration claiming a continuance of the weekly payments. The county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical board was valid & conclusive against the workman & that therefore he had no jurisdiction to hear the case. The workman appealed :— Held : (1) the application to the medical board for re-examination had not been made " in pursuance of any compensation scheme " as there was no scheme applicable which gave such power. The certificate of the medical board was therefore not given in accordance with the provisions of Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, & was not conclusive evidence within para. 5 of such scheme ; (2) the substitution by Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, of a medical board for certifying surgeon & medical referee, as stated in the preamble, related only to the functions performed in conjunction by the certifying surgeon & medical referee in originally bringing a workman within the 1928 Scheme. Appeal allowed. Case remitted to hear arbitration on all points.—WHITE v. WINTERTON POTTERY (LONGTON), LTD., [1932] 2 K. B. 265 ; 101 L. J. K. B. 546 ; 147 L. T. 177 ; 25 B. W. C. C. 129, C. A.

3822e. Second certificate of disablement—Whether conclusive against former employer.]—A hewer was certified in Nov. 1925, as totally incapacitated by miner's nystagmus & received compensation on that basis until June, 1928, when he was given work on the surface & was treated as partially incapacitated. In May, 1932, the employers alleged that he had completely recovered, & in June, 1932, the medical referee certified : " I find the man not suffering from nystagmus & fit for work at the face as a hewer." In Sept. 1932, the workman having signed a declaration that he had not previously suffered from nystagmus, obtained work in another colliery but was discharged sick after eleven days. In Nov. 1932, he was certified by a certifying surgeon as suffering from nystagmus, the —— of disablement being given as Oct. 25, 1932. No notice of this certificate was given to the first employer. The workman could not succeed in a claim against the second employer by reason of sect. 43 (1) (b), nor could he claim against the first employer under the certificate of Nov. 1932, because he had not been employed by them within twelve months from the date of disablement stated in such certificate. He therefore brought a claim against his first employers on the basis of the certificate given in 1925. The county ct. judge held that he was bound by the certificate given in Nov. 1932, to find in favour of the workman. The employers appealed :— Held : the certificate obtained by the workman in Nov. 1932, not having been served on them, was not conclusive against the first employers in proceedings based on the certificate of Nov. 1925. The matter must be referred to the medical referee for information whether in June, 1932, the workman was still susceptible to nystagmus &, if so, whether such susceptibility was due to the first disablement or was constitutional. If there were susceptibility due to the first disablement, then the question whether the second disablement resulted therefrom was a matter of evidence.—BRITTON v. LEVERSON'S WALLSEND COLLIERIES, LTD. 3822f. ——.]—A hewer was certified as disabled by miner's nystagmus in 1925. In 1926 he had recovered & was able to resume work underground. In 1930 he was again certified as being disabled by nystagmus & was paid compensation until 1932, when his employers served a notice & certificate in accordance with sect. 12. A counter-certificate having been served the matter was referred to the medical referee, who gave the following certificate : " He has recovered from this attack of coal-miner's nystagmus & is able to return to his old work of a hewer. There will, however, be an increased susceptibility to the disease as a result of this attack." The workman then filed an application for arbn. After hearing certain evidence in the arbn. the county ct. judge wrote to the medical referee as follows : " In this case you certify that the workman was liable to an increased susceptibility to a fresh attack, see footnote (b) [to Form C. in the Sched. to Rules dated Nov. 9, 1932]. Is the judge entitled to consider that you do not think there was a reasonable probability of the man again becoming incapacitated through the effects of the accident, or through a recrudescence of the attack of the disease (footnote (a)) ? " The medical referee replied as follows : " I do not think there was a reasonable probability of the man again becoming incapacitated through the effects of the accident, or through a recrudescence of the attack of miner's nystagmus." Having received this reply the county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical referee was one of complete recovery & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed :— Held : the certificate of the medical referee was unambiguous & showed that the workman had not completely recovered from the attack of the disease. It was not therefore necessary to consider the effect of the reply given to the county ct. judge's inquiry.—

22g. ——.]—In review proceedings brought by the employers to terminate compensation on the grounds of alleged recovery from miner's nystagmus a medical referee reported to the county ct. judge as follows: "I find that [the workman] has now recovered from miner's nystagmus, but as a result there is increased susceptibility to a recrudescence of an attack of the disease & therefore it is not advisable for him to work underground, as if he did work below he would probably be only able to keep working for a short time, & would then have to give up again." On receipt of this report, the county ct. judge asked further questions of the medical referee, who replied as follows: "[The previous answer] means that this man has recovered from miner's nystagmus (i.e. the disease is not now present). The original susceptibility of the workman to nystagmus is still present, but owing to the workman having actually had an attack of nystagmus, & to the original susceptibility, if the man is put underground he is more likely to develop another attack more easily & more quickly; there is no new susceptibility, it has always been there. I consider any future attack of nystagmus a fresh attack. There is no disability caused by the original attack still existing—it is only a question of the inadvisability of his going underground again because of the danger of another attack." On receipt of this further answer the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments on the ground that the case was covered by Edwards v. Penrhiceiber Navigation Colliery Co. The workman appealed:—Held: the two answers of the medical referee must be read together. The second must not be taken to contradict the first, & on a proper interpretation of these answers there continued an increased susceptibility to nystagmus over & above any idiopathic susceptibility & therefore there was no evidence to support the application for review.—UNITED NATIONAL COLLIERIES, LTD., TREORCHY v. JONES (1934), 27 B. 3822h. —— Evidence of change of condition—Admissibility.]—A stone-mason was examined by the medical board set up under Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, on Jan. 31, 1935, & on Mar. 2 1935, they issued a certificate under para. 4 (3) of the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme 1931, that he was, though not totally disabled, suffering from silicosis to such a degree as to make it dangerous for him to continue work in the process in which he was employed & that he was suspended from Jan. 11, 1935. On Apr. 12, 1935, the workman filed a request for arbn., claiming that he was totally incapacitated. At the arbn. on May 10, 1935 the workman tendered evidence to show that he was totally incapacitated, but the county ct. judge held that as the certificate of the medical board was conclusive he was bound to refuse to hear evidence showing a change in the workman's condition, & made an award for partial incapacity only. The workman appealed:—Held: (1) the certificate of the medical board was conclusive as to the matters certified at the date when certified. No evidence was therefore admissible in regard to this, but if the judge required more information as to the effect & contents of the certificate, it was his duty to communicate with the medical board; (2) the county ct. judge was wrong in refusing to receive evidence of a change in the workman's physical condition since the date of certification; (3) in view of the decision of White v. Winterton Pottery (Longton), Ltd., No. 3822c, there was no other means of showing that the condition of a workman certified by a medical board to be disabled by silicosis had improved or worsened than by calling such evidence. The power to review conferred upon the medical referee is not confined to the questions whether the certifying surgeon should or whether he should not give a certificate of disablement under sub-sect. 1 (i.), but covers the whole range of the action of the certifying surgeon in giving or refusing to give a certificate under that sub-sect.—WEMYSS COAL CO., LTD. v. HAIG, [1933] A. 3828b. —— —— Subsequent alteration without notice to employer.]—A cement worker contracted dermatitis in Nov. 1931. He was discharged from hospital as fit for work in Dec. 1931, but the disease continued to recur. He went in June, 1932, to a certifying surgeon, who refused to give him a certificate. The workman appealed to the medical referee, who gave him a certificate dated July 7, 1932, & fixed the date of disablement as Nov. 16, 1931. No claim was made by the workman on his employer until July 25, 1932, more than six months after the certified date of disablement. The workman then approached the medical referee, who on Sept. 7, 1932, altered the date of disablement to Jan. 4, 1932, without giving notice of his intentions to the employer. Proceedings were begun in Nov. 1932, on the basis of the altered certificate. The county ct. judge held that he must treat the altered certificate as revoking the one dated July 7, 1932, & as being an entirely new certificate dated Sept. 7, 1932. He also held that as the workman had made his claim under the certificate dated July 7, & had never made a claim under the certificate dated Sept. 7, the workman must fail. He accordingly made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the date of disablement being a material part of the certificate, the medical referee could not alter it without due notice to the employers. The purported alteration was a nullity & the date of disablement remained Nov. 16, 1931. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial to allow the workman opportunity to show reasonable cause for delay in making a claim more than six months after Nov. 16, 1931. The question as to whether a medical referee has power, even on notice to both parties, to alter his certificate except to correct a slip or clerical error was left undecided.—LAURIE v. UNIT CONSTRUCTION CO., LTD. 3828c. —— —— ——.]—A coal miner who had been engaged in a process coming within Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, ceased work on Apr. 2, 1930. On Nov. 17, 1932, as a result of an X-ray examination at hospital, he was given a form of certificate to the effect that he was suffering from silicosis. On Apr. 10, 1933, he was examined by the medical board appointed in pursuance of the Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, & on Apr. 19, 1933, the board certified him as totally disabled, but gave in the certificate the date of commencement of the total disablement as Apr. 10, 1933. Compensation having been claimed by the workman as from Apr. 10, 1933, the employer disputed the claim on the ground that the workman was, in virtue of proviso (b) to para. 4 of the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, disentitled to compensation on the ground that he had not been employed in any process under the Scheme within the three years previous to the certified date of disablement. As a result of representations made on behalf of the workman the medical board reconsidered the matter & altered the date of commencement of total disablement in the certificate from Apr. 10, 1933, to Nov. 16, 1932, the date of the X-ray examination in hospital. On this altered certificate the county ct. judge awarded compensation to the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: the medical board having once heard the matter was functus officio. The date was vital to both parties & could not in the circumstances be altered under the "slip rule" as being a mere clerical mistake or error due to an accidental slip or omission.—POWELL DYFFRYN STEAM COAL CO. v. GRIFFITHS (1934), 27 B. 3828d. —— —— Failure to fix when appeal dismissed—Subsequent decision fixing date.]—On Feb. 6, 1932, a miner was certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed & that his disablement therefrom commenced on Feb. 6, 1932. Compensation was accordingly paid by his employers. On Oct. 16, 1933, a medical referee certified that he was not then suffering from miner's nystagmus & was fit to resume work underground, but that his condition was such that if he worked underground there was reasonable probability of his becoming again incapacitated by reason of a recrudescence of the attack of the disease. He did not return to work with his old employers, but in Jan. 1934, he obtained work with fresh employers after making a declaration that he had not previously suffered from the disease. He only worked with them for nine shifts, when he was compelled to cease work on account of nystagmus. On Feb. 7, 1934, the certifying surgeon certified that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & that his disablement therefrom commenced on Feb. 6, 1932. On an appeal by the first employers from that certificate the medical referee on Mar. 5, 1934, dismissed the appeal. The registrar then wrote to the medical referee that the employers had called attention to the fact that no date of disablement was given in the decision dismissing the appeal. Thereupon the medical referee issued a second document dated back to Mar. 5, 1934, & to the following effect: The workman "is suffering from miner's nystagmus & so is disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed. He is fit for work on the surface. The date of the disablement is from Jan. 1934, after he had been working underground for three weeks." The medical referee issued the second document without giving any notice to the workman. The workman claimed compensation against the first employers, relying on the certificate of Feb. 7, 1934, which gave the date of disablement as Feb. 6, 1932. The employers relied on the statement in the medical referee's second decision that there had been a fresh disablement in Jan. 1934. The county ct. judge held that the medical referee was not functus officio when he issued the first document dated Mar. 5, 1934, & could properly complete an otherwise unfinished document by adding the date of disablement. He therefore made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: (1) the effect of the first decision of the medical referee in Mar. 1934, dimissing the appeal from the certifying surgeon was to fix the date of disablement as Feb. 6, 1932, & after dismissing the appeal the medical referee was functus officio & could not by a second decision alter that date; in any case he had not given the workman an opportunity of appearing before him before he made this second decision; (2) Timmins v. Brodsworth Main Colliery Co., Ltd., No. 3846a, & Richards v. Goskar, No. 3846c, did not decide that in the previous employer after a period of unemployment, that representation had been made on "entering the employment" within the sub-sect., &, accordingly, he was barred from recovering compensation on the recurrence of the disease.—SCOTT v. SUMMERLEE IRON CO., LTD., CONNELLY v. A. The particular contractor by whom the workman had been engaged received notice from the co. that he & his squad would not be required after Nov. 7, 1927. Before that date the workman arranged with another contractor for a new job in the colliery, to begin on Nov. 8; &, on starting work on Nov. 8, he signed a declaration in which he falsely represented that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. After being employed under this contract for more than twelve months, he was certified as disabled by miner's nystagmus as from Dec. 22, 1928:—Held: the false declaration made on Nov. 8, 1927, was not made by the workman at the "time of entering the employment," within sect. 43 (1) (b), &, accordingly, he was not deprived of his right to compensation.—MOORE v. MANOR POWIS COAL CO., [1931] S. On the latter date he was again employed by the co., & he remained continuously in their employment until Jan. 16, 1931, when he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus. He had not signed any declaration subsequent to that dated June 19, 1928:—Held: the workman was not deprived of his right to compensation, in respect that the false declaration signed on June 19, 1928, was not made at the time of entering the employment in which he was engaged at any time within twelve months of his disablement, the entry into that employment having taken place on Oct. 26, 1928.—M'GUIGAN v. MOORE (A. He did not, however, intend to deceive, & did not in fact deceive, the employers' officials who were responsible for re-engaging him, as these officials were, in his knowledge, aware that the statement was false & they acquiesced in his making it. A statement of previous immunity from nystagmus was required by the employers from all appcts. for employment underground. After a period of absence from work owing to beat elbow from May to August, 1931, he presented himself as again fit for work. There was then put before him a printed declaration, with blanks to be filled in, to the effect that he had not previously suffered from the industrial disease of miner's nystagmus. He filled in his name, address, & age; the manager filled in the date, & the workman signed the declaration before two witnesses, who also signed. The declaration was not read over to the workman, nor did he read it or give any attention to its contents, although he had every opportunity to do so; nor was he asked if he had suffered from miner's nystagmus. The miner restarted work & continued at work with employer B until May, 1932, when he left that employment & entered the employment of employer C, the present applts. On entering this new employment he signed no document relating to miner's nystagmus. In Aug. 1932, the manager of these employers showed the workman a form relating to miner's nystagmus & asked him if he had ever suffered from it. The workman replied that he had suffered from the disease about ten years previously, & in view of that answer the manager did not ask the workman to sign the form. The employers had not known until then that the workman had ever suffered from miner's nystagmus. In Sept. 1932, the workman was again disabled by miner's nystagmus, & claimed compensation. After negotiation the employers agreed to pay compensation, but in Dec. 1932, stopped payment at their own hand on discovering for the first time that the workman had signed the declaration of Aug. 1931, as above narrated. On these facts the arbitrator found that the workman had not wilfully or falsely represented himself as not having previously suffered from miner's nystagmus within sect. 43 (1) (b), & in respect of the agreement to pay compensation above mentioned awarded a continuation of compensation. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) (allowing the appeal on this point), the declaration of Aug. 1931, was a wilful representation on the part of the workman; (2) sect. 43 (1) (b) does not enact an absolute disqualification from receiving compensation, but merely provides a ground of defence against the claim; accordingly, the employers were not entitled to discontinue payment of compensation, on the ground (per LORD PRESIDENT & LORD FLEMING) that the defence should have been proponed before the workman's claim was settled by agreement, & on the ground (per LORD MORISON) that the defence was not open to employers who had employed the workman in the knowledge that he had suffered from the disease. 3846a. —— —— ——.]—A miner, after obtaining in 1928 the certificate of a certifying surgeon that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & was thereby disabled, was in 1932 able to return to his old work for nearly a year, but thereafter obtained a second certificate that he was suffering from the same industrial disease & was thereby disabled. Neither certificate expressly fixed a date for the commencement of disablement, so that under sect. 43 (2), the disablement was in each case treated as commencing on the date of the certificate. After he had obtained the second certificate the workman commenced proceedings for compensation on the basis of the first certificate, his claim being that he was suffering from a recrudescence of the old trouble. The county ct. judge held on the evidence that this was so. On appeal :—Held : as under sect. 43 the certificate of a certifying surgeon was conclusive of the date of disablement, & the disablement was to be treated as the happening of an accident, the county ct. judge was debarred after the workman had obtained the second certificate from holding on evidence that the disablement was caused by a recrudescence of the old trouble. —TIMMINS v. BRODSWORTH MAIN COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1934] 2 K. Subsequently he obtained work of a different kind, & while doing that he was again disabled in the same manner & obtained two fresh certificates dated after he had left the original work :—Held : as to the four certificates, (1) the disablement to which the first certificate referred came to an end when the workman returned to his old work with the same employers; (2) the second certificate was conclusive that at the date of the beginning of this disablement there was a fresh notional accident; (3) there being no evidence that this disablement under the second certificate had ceased, it was not open to a certifying surgeon to certify that the disablement was due to an accident at a later date : the third & fourth certificates were nullities.—DURRANT v. BRITISH FIBROCEMENT WORKS, LTD. 3846c. —— Mistaken certificate of recovery.]—An employee of manufacturing chemists was on Sept. 6, 1934, certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids & disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he had been employed, the date of disablement being Sept. 1, 1934. Compensation was paid by the employers until Feb. 8, 1935, when the workman's panel doctor issued a certificate in the following terms : " This is to certify that Mr. Robert McGrath is recovered from dermatitis & is fit as from to-day to seek employment." The workman then registered at the labour exchange & received unemployment benefit. By Unemployment Insurance Act, 1920 (c. 30), s. 7 (1), it was made a statutory condition for the receipt of unemployment benefit (inter alia), that the insured contributor should be capable of & available for work. He received unemployment benefit until May 16, 1935, when he was seen by his panel doctor who was of opinion that he was suffering from a relapse. He applied to the certifying surgeon for a fresh certificate of disablement which was refused. He then filed an application for resumption of compensation. At the arbn. the panel doctor stated that he had made a mistake on Feb. 8, 1935, & that the workman was then fit only for special work & had not fully recovered. The employers called no evidence. The county ct. judge accepted the evidence of the panel doctor & found that the workman had not on Feb. 8, 1935, completely recovered from the disease. He also, however, found that the workman had nevertheless recovered from the disablement & made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge having accepted the evidence of the panel doctor that he had made a mistake in certifying recovery on Feb. 8, 1935, there was no evidence on which he could find that disablement had ceased. The fact that the workman might have satisfied the statutory condition for obtaining unemployment benefit was in no way inconsistent with his being disabled from earning full wages at an employment involving working in dust or liquids. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—McGRATH v. DAY & EMERY, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 474, C. A.

3849a. Determination of contributions by arbitration—Liability in dispute—Whether amount of compensation "in dispute."]—The workman had been employed for thirty-one weeks by resps., & then on July 13, 1932, was taken on by applts. but was not examined as the custom was by applts.' doctor, who was then away on holiday. He worked for one week only & then he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus, an industrial disease brought within the ambit of 1925 Act, for which compensation under the Act became payable. The workman claimed 30*s.* a week as compensation for total incapacity, but an agreement was arrived at under which he accepted 23*s.* 9*d.* a week. Under sect. 43 (1) (c) (iii.) applts. brought proceedings by way of arbn. under the Act against resps. claiming contribution by them to the payment of the 23*s.* 9*d.* a week. On the hearing in the county ct. the question arose as to when the compensation was in dispute, & the county ct. judge thought it was in dispute under the sub-clause set out if any of the persons who were to contribute had not agreed the amount. Resps. claimed that they should have been entitled to co-operate in fixing the amount payable to the workman. The county ct. judge, taking that view, held that applts. ought to have refused compensation & compelled the workman to make a claim against them under the Act, in which case under r. 41 (5) of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, resps. could have been added as third parties to the workman's arbn. :—Held : the county ct. judge had wrongly interpreted that part of sub-clause (c) (iii.) "if the amount of compensation is not in dispute," as when the applts. & the workman reached an agreement as to the amount of it, it was not in dispute. That being so, the proper course was adopted of an arbn. under the Act between the employers alone, in which any question as to resps.' disagreement with the amount applts. had agreed to pay the workman could be considered, & the case must be sent back to the county ct. judge for him to determine the issues open to resps. to raise in the proceedings in which it was sought to fix them with liability to pay contributions.—BOLSOVER COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. OXCROFT COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1933] 2 K. sg. Failure to obtain declaration of immunity—Whether bar to claim for contribution.]—A miner, who was employed by a colliery co. from Sept. 4 to Dec. 5, 1929, at the time of entering the employment signed a true declaration that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. On Dec. 7 he became disabled by miner's nystagmus, & the co. after paying him weekly compensation finally discharged his claim for a lump sum in Apr. 1930. On May 12, 1930, the workman entered the employment of another colliery co. who, however, took from him no declaration as to previous immunity from nystagmus. He left their employment after two days & was certified as having again become disabled by nystagmus on May 16. His last employers, having duly paid him compensation, claimed a contribution from his previous employers. The latter maintained that pursuers' claim was barred by their having failed to take from the workman a declaration of his previous immunity from disease :—Held : pursuers' claim, under sect. 43, to a contribution was not so barred.—UNITED COLLIERIES v. ROBERT ADDIE & SONS' COLLIERIES, [1932] S. The workman's last employers were builders & contractors, with whom he worked as a labourer & stone cutter from June to Oct. 1931. As the employers who last employed the workman in one of the processes mentioned in para. 2 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, they were liable to pay, & did pay, compensation to the workman's dependants amounting to £542 8*s.* Thereafter they sought relief against the workman's former employers, with whom he had worked from Sept. 1919, till Jan. 1931. These employers were quarrymasters & engaged in the Sandstone Industry as defined in para. 2 of Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931. The Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, provides (para. 8 (2)) for contributions by former employers in relief of compensation paid by the last employer, but it also provides (para. 2) that "nothing in this Scheme shall apply to the employment of a workman included in . . . the Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931." 3860a. Effect of agreement for compensation—Facts as to agreement not presented in county court.]—On an application for review & redemption of weekly payments a workman alleged that he had negotiated with persons representing a new co. which had taken over the business of his employers, & the new co. had agreed to pay him £650 in full settlement of his claims. The county ct. judge had previously decided in a similar case that the workman could not rely upon such an agreement with the new co., as such agreement was only with a third party, & not with his employers. The parties treated the case as governed by that decision, & the question of the agreement was not gone into at the hearing. The application was then proceeded with as an application for review & the judge held the workman had recovered, & by his award stopped further weekly payments. The workman appealed, on the ground that the judge could not terminate the payments in view of the agreement :—Held : (1) the ct. could not entertain an appeal as to the effect of the agreement, as the facts as to that agreement had not been presented in the county ct., & there were no materials before the ct. on which they could come to a decision; (2) the question whether the workman had recovered was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & there was no misdirection.—EAST KENT COLLIERY Co. v. HEATH (1926), 20 B. 3872a. —— ——.]—A dock labourer seriously injured his left arm in an accident & was totally incapacitated for fourteen months, during which period he received compensation. His employers then terminated the weekly payments, using the provisions of sect. 12, & relying on a medical certificate to the effect that although the workman had lost his power of gripping with the left hand a return to work would restore that power. The workman applied for an arbn. & the judge on the grounds stated in the certificate found that the workman had completely recovered from the accident & made his award for the employers. On appeal by the workman the Ct. of Ap applying Buck v. Denning, No. 3227a, held that there was no evidence of complete recovery, & ordered the case to be remitted to the county ct. judge for compensation to

The county ct. judge in conformity with the order of the Ct. of Appeal accordingly made an award of a weekly sum of 10*s.* as compensation, the employers being present & consenting to the amount proposed. Payment of compensation had been made under this award for four months when the employers petitioned for appeal to the House of Lords from the decision of the Ct. of Appeal :—Held : (1) there was some evidence upon which the county ct. judge could find that incapacity from every relevant point of view had ceased, & it was of the first importance that the finality of an arbitrator's findings of fact in cases under the Workmen's Compensation Act should be jealously maintained; (2) the employers were not, by consenting to the amount of the award, & making payments thereunder, deprived of their then statutory right of appeal. The employer filed no answer. At the arbn. no evidence was given as to the average weekly earnings, but the father gave evidence that he was totally dependent. The county ct. judge made an award for £275 only, on the ground that there was no evidence as to the average weekly earnings. The father appealed on the question of amount & the employer cross-appealed on the question of dependency :—Held : on the appeal, the employer having failed to file an answer, the amount of the average weekly earnings must be taken to be admitted under rule 18 (3). 3887b. Duration of exposure—Resulting in dermatitis.]—A woman worked as a washer in a laundry during July & Aug. 1928. She left without any signs of dermatitis. On Sept. 6, 1928, she was employed in a similar capacity by another laundry, & left work on Sept. 19 with symptoms of dermatitis. On Sept. 26, she obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon under sect. 43. Her second employers admitted liability & paid compensation, but discontinued the payments in Dec. on their doctor's certificate that she had recovered. He further stated that she suffered from a condition of the skin which rendered her particularly susceptible to dermatitis, & that but for this she would not have developed the disease after so short a period of exposure. On a claim for continuance of the compensation, the county ct.

3887 iv. ——.] — The question whether a survivor of a workman is a "dependant" within the Workmen's Compensation Act, R.S.S., 1930, as well as the question whether deceased was a "workman" within the meaning of the Act, is a mixed question of law & fact, at least in cases such as the present one, &, therefore, the Ct. of Appeal must determine, not only whether there is any evidence to sustain a finding of dependence, but also whether the district ct. judge drew proper inferences from the facts & arrived at a proper conclusion in holding, as he did in this case, that pltf. was a "dependant."—WOLFE v. CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS, [1934] 3 W. judge made an award in favour of the employers. He found that the exposure of the workman to dust or liquids was of short duration & only resulted in dermatitis owing to an unusual proclivity to such disease on her part. The workman appealed. On appeal it was argued that the employers were estopped from denying that the disease had been contracted through long-continued within Statutory Rules & Orders, 1929, No. 2, by reason of their admission of liability & payment of compensation :—Held : the point as to estoppel not having been taken in the county ct. could not be raised on appeal, & on the evidence the county ct. judge was bound to find that exposure was not of long-continued duration. The question was one of fact.—Appeal dismissed.—LANE v. "PUREWITE" LAUNDRY SERVICE CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 396, C. A.

3887c. Computation of remuneration.]—A workman had been at work for only four weeks when he met with an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. While admitting liability, the employers contended that by reason of the shortness of the time it was impracticable at the date of the accident to compute the workman's rate of remuneration, & that regard must be had to the wages earned by other workmen. The county ct. judge refused to do so & calculated the compensation on the basis of the exact average of the wages earned by the workman during the four weeks. The employers appealed :—Held : it was a question of fact for the county ct. judge to decide whether or not it was impracticable at the date of the accident to compute the rate of remuneration on only four weeks of employment, & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—TANSEY v. WILCOCK & CO. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 214, C. A.

3892a. Quantum in excess of evidence.]—An electric lift erector's mate was being tried out as an erector & paid accordingly when he injured his left thumb by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. The top of the thumb was amputated but not to such an extent as to prevent the thumb-nail from growing. He returned to work at the wage of a mate & was again tried as an erector but on simpler jobs. After about two months he was dismissed as incompetent. He filed an application for arbn. & then entered into an agreement with his employer that he should receive £30 in final settlement of all claims. A memorandum of agreement was drawn up together with a statement of facts, both of which were signed by the workman. From the statement it appeared that the workman's average pre-accident earnings were £3 0*s.* 2*d.*, & his average post-accident earnings were £3 4*s.* 3*d.*, & that his employment ceased for reasons unconnected with his injury. The registrar &, on appeal, the county ct. judge refused to record the memorandum on the ground of inadequacy. The parties proceeded to arbn. At the hearing the workman admitted the facts contained in the statement accompanying the memorandum. The medical men called on each side disagreed as to whether the disability caused by the injury amounted to 5 per cent. or 20 per cent. The county ct. judge in his award assessed the loss of earning capacity at 16*s.* a week & ordered payment of compensation at the rate of 8*s.* a week. The employer appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge in awarding to the workman a sum based on an incapacity equivalent to 25 per cent. of his earnings had gone beyond the evidence called before him. 3901a. —— ——.]—A workman, who had suffered an injury to his knee, was paid compensation by his employers for a time. He underwent a successful operation & his compensation was stopped. He later suffered another injury to the same knee, & brought proceedings for further compensation. After hearing evidence, the county ct. judge came to the conclusion that he was not satisfied as to any further injury after the cessation of compensation. The county ct. judge then considered the question of a declaration of liability &, while doing so, asked a medical man, who happened to be present in ct., whether there was any probability of further injury to the workman. The opinion of the medical man was not given as evidence on oath nor was he called by consent of the parties. The county ct. judge then made an award to the effect that the workman had recovered from his injury on the date when compensation was stopped, but granted a declaration of liability by consent. The workman appealed :—Held : although the procedure followed with regard to the doctor was undesirable & irregular, it had not been detrimental to the workman, because the county ct. judge had already made up his mind on the main question before him. There was ample evidence to support his finding on the question.—RANSOM v. FULHAM FOOTBALL & ATHLETIC CO., LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 375, C. A.

3904a. —— ——.]—A workman, whose compensation had been stopped, claimed a continuance of compensation on the basis of total incapacity, & it was argued on his behalf that he was entitled to be paid on this basis under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was partially incapacitated as a result of the accident but had, since the payment ceased, been doing work which he did before the accident. He held that sect. 9 (4) did not apply, but gave no reasons for so holding beyond stating that the workman refused work offered him on the ground that he could not do it when in fact he could have done it. He, therefore, refused to find total incapacity but gave a declaration of liability. On the appeal by the workman it was argued that, the county ct. judge having found partial incapacity, the case should be remitted to him to assess the amount of such incapacity:—Held: although the finding of the county ct. judge on the point was not too clear, the case had been argued & dealt with under sect. 9 (4) alone. The issue as to partial incapacity, not having been raised on the claim, in the ct. below, or in the notice of appeal, could not be taken in the Ct. of Appeal.—PLUMB v. RALEIGH CYCLE CO. 3922a. —— ——.]—A miner, who was a healthy man of forty-seven, was engaged for an hour in pulling down coal with an iron bar. His mate then asked for the bar, & worked with it. The miner appeared to be quite well when he handed over the bar to his mate. but within a few minutes he was lying on the ground dead. An autopsy was made by a surgeon. At the hearing of a claim for compensation by the widow the surgeon was not called but his report was by agreement read to the county ct. judge. He therein stated that the cause of death was syncope following double pneumonia of one or two days' duration, & that in his opinion death was accelerated by the strain put upon an overburdened heart by his work. That was the only medical evidence before the ct., & it was accepted as correct by the judge, who made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that there was "no real evidence within the meaning of the decided cases that any particular piece of work caused death." The widow appealed:—Held: it being doubtful from the use in the award of the words "particular piece of work" whether the county ct. judge had not misdirected himself by thinking that he had to find as a fact that some particular or special strain had to be proved in order to connect the death with the work, the case must be remitted to him for reconsideration. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial.—WALKER v. BROWN (JOHN) & CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 166, C. A.

.. —— .]—A haulage hand sustained an injury by accident to his right leg with the result that it was bowed outward & backward, & caused him to walk with a limp & with the right foot somewhat inverted. He could walk quite briskly but felt pain in the right foot after walking continuously for several miles. He had not obtained any work since the accident nor had he looked for it. After paying compensation for total incapacity for seven months, the employers applied to review the weekly payments. The county ct. judge found that the workman was capable of ordinary light work of an unskilled nature such as gardening work of not too arduous a nature, & of doing such work continuously, &, having stated that he was constrained by the authorities to ignore the remoteness of the prospect of obtaining regular light work, he found that a man who obtains a job of unskilled light work on the footing that he suffers from some physical disability which disqualifies him from competing in the labour market on equal terms with men not so disabled might expect to receive about two-thirds of the ordinary wages of an unskilled labourer, & made an award diminishing the weekly payments accordingly. The workman appealed:—Held: it being impossible to decide on the judgment whether the county ct. judge had or had not found that the workman was capable of becoming an ordinary workman of average capacity in any well-known branch of the labour market, in other words, whether his labour was or was not an "odd lot" within the definition of FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J., in Cardiff Corporation v. Hall, the case must be sent back for him to make the necessary finding. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—ACKTON HALL COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. BARKER (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 89, C. A.

3926a. ——.]—A glazier living in Liverpool fell 24 feet from a ladder & received very severe injuries to his spine & sacrum. A year later his doctor made a report to his employers at their request. It was a detailed report & contained the following conclusions: The movements of the spine were much freer, but not much improvement could be expected: the workman's capacity for walking had considerably deteriorated: his mental condition had changed for the worse but elimination of the compensation negotiations might improve the mental condition: he was at that time only fit for sedentary work or semi-sedentary light work. This report was sent on to the employers' insurers who wrote a letter to the workman's solr. saying that the doctor's report showed that the workman had made considerable recovery & that it was advisable that he should be given light work as it would give him occupation & tend to make him fit. The employers then offered the workman employment in their stores near Birmingham consisting of "a certain amount of clerical work & also sorting out small parts & handing them out when he desired" at £2 a week together with the appropriate compensation & travelling expenses. This offer was refused. The employers applied for a review of the weekly payment on the ground that the workman was able to earn £2 a week. The county ct. judge found that the workman had no earning capacity in the open labour market, but that the offer of work was suitable & should have been accepted. He therefore made his award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed :—Held : there was misdirection as the county ct. judge had failed to put to himself & answer two separate questions, viz., first, whether the offer of employment was in the circumstances under which it was made a genuine offer, & secondly whether, bearing in mind the distance from the workman's home of the employment offered, it was suitable employment. Appeal allowed. Matter sent to another county ct. judge for new trial.—HILLS PATENT GLAZING CO., LTD. v. DOUGLAS (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 145, C. A.

3927a. Date of termination of incapacity.]—A fireman had to have his right thumb amputated as the result of an accident in the stokehold of a ship. On Nov. 5, 1928, his employers obtained a certificate to the effect that he was fit to return to his work, & thereupon gave notice to terminate the weekly payments on Nov. 15. The weekly payments were stopped on that day although a certificate had been furnished by the workman which stated that he was not fit to resume his old occupation, but also stated that there was plenty of other work he could do. The workman applied for an arbn. The arbn. took place on Jan. 29, & Feb. 5, 1929. On Mar. 1, the county ct. judge made his award in which he found as a fact that the workman was able to earn his pre-accident wages, & that up to the date of the hearing there was a dispute whether he had recovered. He did not give a finding as to the date on which the workman had become able to earn his pre-accident wages, but ordered the employers to continue to pay the full amount of weekly payments as from Nov. 15, 1928, to Feb. 5, 1929. The employers appealed :—Held : the judge should have found in fact the date when incapacity ceased. If by fixing Feb. 5, 1929, as the date down to which compensation must be paid, he intended to hold that incapacity continued to that date, there was no evidence to support such a finding.—MOCKBILL v. HOMER CITY S.S. 3927b. Whether workman within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4).]—An employer having reduced a workman's compensation to 12*s.* 3*d.* a week, the workman applied for an arbn. on the ground that, although he was only partially incapacitated, he was unable to earn anything. At the hearing the workman said that it was impossible to say what he could earn if he could get light work. On that evidence it was submitted on his behalf that he was brought within sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employer that the workman was only entitled to 12*s.* 3*d.* a week as from the date of reduction. An appln. was subsequently made to the county ct. judge on behalf of the workman for an amendment of his note, or for a new trial, on the ground that sect. 9 (4) had not been properly considered at the hearing. The county ct. judge refused to grant a new trial, but said that he had not considered sect. 9 (4) until the end of the case. The workman appealed from the award & from the refusal to grant a new trial : —Held : the appln. was clearly made under sect. 9 (4), & the county ct. judge must be taken to have realised that fact in making the award which he did.—STORER v. MORRIS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 177, C. A.

3927c. Contract of service.]—A miner in receipt of unemployment benefit died from the effects of fire-damp while working at an outcrop of coal on a farm. The widow filed an application for compensation on behalf of herself & other dependants. No evidence was given at the arbn. to show by whom or on what terms the deceased man was employed to get the coal. The county ct. judge made his award for the widow. Resps. appealed :—Held : the hearing was unsatisfactory as the county ct. judge had not found the facts which were necessary to enable him to come to a decision. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered before a different judge.—MEAKIN v. LOMAS (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 73, C. A.

3927d. Whether accident arising in course of employment.]—A workman after a few minutes' interval from the time he was working as a dipper in a galvanising department suddenly fell dead. Death was diagnosed as being due to angina pectoris. There was some medical evidence pointing to a connection between the arduous nature of the work & the death. The county ct. judge in making his award for the employer said that he was unable to find as a fact that the workman suffered any strain or that the work contributed in any way to his death. The widow appealed :—Held : in view of the medical evidence, it was not clear that the judge had rightly directed himself in law & there should be a new trial. Appeal allowed. 3927e. Whether fresh accident — Unsatisfactory pleadings.]—A wagon-tippler suffered an inguinal hernia in 1923 while at work. After a few weeks' absence, for which he received compensation, he returned to light work which he continued to perform until 1930 In June, 1930, he had further intestinal trouble & was away from work for two weeks for which he received compensation. After some difficulty with regard to wearing a truss he applied in Nov. 1930, for further compensation, alleging the 1923 accident as the cause of incapacity. It was then discovered that he was suffering from a femoral hernia. The workman then by leave amended his application by adding the femoral hernia, but still alleged that his incapacity was caused by the inguinal hernia. The county ct. judge held that the incapacity was due to the femoral hernia & not to the inguinal hernia, & dismissed the application. The workman appealed :—Held : the hearing was unsatisfactory, largely owing to the condition of the pleadings which did not make the issues clear. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered. —HARDSTAFF v. SHERWOOD COLLIERY CO. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 349, C. A.

3927f. Whether employment continuous.]—A miner was certified in 1924 to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & thereby disabled from earning full wages. After a short period he returned to work on the surface. In 1926 there was a general strike & stoppage of work in all the coalfields which continued till Dec. of that year. Work was re-started in Wales under a general agreement between masters & men which contained a clause that each workman should receive a fortnight's notice of termination of his employment. The workman was re-employed in Dec. with others but when signing on falsely declared in writing that he had not suffered from miner's nystagmus. Certain subsequent agreements had been made between the parties. With the exception of three months' unemployment in 1929 & two weeks in 1933, when he received unemployment pay, he continued at work until Aug. 1933, when he was dismissed on a fortnight's notice. He than obtained a certifying surgeon's certificate that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & made a claim for compensation accordingly. The employer denied liability on the ground that the workman had made a wilful & false declaration in writing within the meaning of sect. 43 (1) (b) at the time of entering his employment in 1926 & that that employment had continued up to the date of his dismissal in 1933. The county ct. judge without finding whether the agreement which commenced in Dec. 1926, had been put an end to, held that the contentions of the employer were correct & dismissed the workman's application. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had both misdirected himself in not considering the effect of Scott v. Summerlee Iron Co., Ltd., No. 3837a, & had also failed to determine the essential question of the continuity of employment from 1926 to 1933. There must be a new trial for him to find the essential facts as to this & to apply the law in the light of those facts. For the workman to be deprived of compensation by reason of the false declaration, such declaration must have been made on entering a contract of employment in which he was in fact engaged at some time during the period of twelve months previous to the date of disablement on which his claim is based. Appeal allowed.—WILLIAMS v. TREDEGAR IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 291, C. A.

3927g. Whether agreement between parties as to quantum.]—A workman having been injured in Oct. 1930, his employer admitted liability & paid him a weekly sum of 30*s.* as compensation. The employer was at that time under the impression that the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident were £6 1*s.* 6*d.* In June, 1933, the employer learned for the first time that the workman was earning £3 a week in a fresh employment & suggested that the weekly payment of compensation should be adjusted accordingly. The workman refused an adjustment & 30*s.* continued to be paid weekly. In Dec. 1934, the employer applied for a review & raised the question of the amount of the pre-accident average weekly earnings. For the workman it was argued that there having been an agreement to pay 30*s.* a week, the employer must be taken also impliedly to have agreed the amount of the pre-accident average weekly earnings. The county ct. judge made no finding as to the existence of any agreement express or implied, but found that the pre-accident average weekly earnings were £5 7*s.* 6*d.* & made an award reducing the weekly payment to 23*s.* 9*d.*, being half the difference between £3 & £5 7*s.* 6*d.* The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge should have found whether there was any agreement between the parties &, if so, what were its terms express or implied, & the matter must go back for him to do so.

Per ROMER, L.J. If it were proved that the parties were labouring under a mutual mistake of fact as to the amount of the pre-accident average weekly earnings, the county ct. judge would be entitled on these figures to diminish the weekly payment under sect. 21, even if there were no change of circumstances. Appeal allowed.—TEILO TINPLATE CO., LTD. v. GRIFFITHS (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 127, C. A.

3932a. Reliance on medical assessor—On question of fact.]—An engine-driver while coaling felt sudden pain in his stomach. He continued to drive his engine, but the pain increased & he went home. The next morning his doctor stated that he had a strangulated hernia. The workman claimed compensation. At the hearing the judge sat with a medical assessor. He held that the workman had not discharged the onus of proving that there had been an accident in the sense of an abnormal strain, & stated in his judgment that the medical assessor had advised him that the man never had a strangulated hernia. He made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed, asking for a new trial:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, the judge having misdirected himself on the points at issue, & having accepted the opinion of the assessor as to what his findings of fact should be. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered in another county ct. with directions to apply the principles laid down in Clover, Clayton & Co., Ltd. v. Hughes, No. 2316.—DAVIS v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. CO. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 368, C. A.

3932b. No details in award.]—A domestic servant alleged that while carrying a bottle of her own nail polish she slipped on a mat & the bottle broke in her hand, cutting it. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge made a short award stating that the workman had not discharged the onus that was on her to satisfy him that the accident arose out of & in the course of her employment. The workman appealed on the ground that the county ct. judge had not stated the facts on which he based his decision & asked for a new trial:—Held: it not being a case in which a detailed finding was required, the shortness of the award was no ground for a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—GILBERT v. COLES (No. 2) (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 481, C. A.

3932c. Contradictory judgment.]—A miner who had suffered from periodical attacks of miner's nystagmus & was in receipt of weekly payments was examined by a medical referee who certified that the man "is not now suffering from miner's nystagmus, but from nervous debility." On his report the employer stopped the weekly payments. Six months later the workman applied for further compensation. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was not suffering from nystagmus, & looked the picture of health, but said that he thought it possible, & even likely, that he might have a recurrence though he was not satisfied that such would be the case. His award was in the form that the employers were to be liable to pay the workman further compensation if at any time he became incapacitated for work from nystagmus. The workman appealed :—Held : as the award made by the county ct. judge was not consistent with his judgment, & the judgment was contradictory in itself, there must be a new trial. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial.—HILLIER v. EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 238, C. A.

3932d. Excessive award.]—A workman claimed compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. On the matter coming before him, the county ct. judge referred it to a medical referee, who reported as follows : " S. has good general health, but is not fit for his ordinary work." The judge, without considering the effect of sect. 9 (4), made an award of 30*s.* a week on a finding of total incapacity. The employers appealed :—Held : the hearing was unsatisfactory, the judge having made an award in excess of what the workman was claiming & not justified by the evidence. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—SINGLETON v. DRAKE (D.) & SONS (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 369, C. A.

3932e. Confusion at hearing as to relationship of principal & contractor.]—A workman was injured while screening coal supplied by a colliery co. to be put on board ship. The coal shippers & the colliery co. were under the same control. The workman framed an application for compensation against the colliery co. as his immediate employers, but the colliery co. denied that he had ever been employed by them. At the arbn. the case was opened & argued on the basis that the shippers were contractors within sect. 6, & that the colliery co. were principals. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman against the colliery co. The colliery co. appealed :—Held : there having been confusion as to the basis on which the claim was being made against the colliery co. the case must be sent back for re-hearing. —JENKINS v. OCEAN COAL CO., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 111, C. A.

3932f. Insufficient evidence as to whether reasonable cause for delay in giving notice.]—On Nov. 14, 1933, a labourer struck his knee while at work. On returning home he showed his wife a black bruise. The bruise was attended to by his wife, & he continued working for a month suffering occasionally from cramp. On Dec. 12, 1933, he suddenly felt severe pain & was sent to the infirmary. On Dec. 14 he underwent two operations but died on Dec. 16. On Dec. 15 his wife gave notice to the employer. The county ct. judge, on a claim by the widow for compensation, found that death resulted from the injury, but held that that being so the deceased workman must have suffered sufficient discomfort to make it obligatory for him to give notice of the accident. He held that there was no reasonable cause for failure to give notice before Dec. 15, & that the employer was prejudiced by the delay. He therefore made his award for the employer. The widow appealed :—Held : there was not sufficient evidence as to whether in fact the injury was such as to call for notice being given before Dec. 15, & there must be a new trial to see whether such evidence was forthcoming.—REDMAN v. SUNDERLAND CORPN. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 376, C. A.

3932g. Decision unsupported by evidence.]—An employer applied for a review & diminution to 8*s.* 6*d.* of a weekly payment then being paid to an injured workman under a recorded memorandum of agreement, the grounds of the application being that the workman had received a genuine offer of employment at £2 a week. The county ct. judge held that the workman had an earning capacity of a higher amount than £2 a week & reduced the weekly payment to 5*s.* The workman appealed :—Held : there being no evidence on the point before him the county ct. judge was wrong in taking it upon himself to find that the workman's earning capacity was greater than that alleged by the employers, & there must be an award for 8*s.* 6*d.* Appeal allowed.—WIMBUSH v. GARNER (1936), 28 B. W. C. C. 135, C. A.

3932h. Misdirection.]—On Feb. 21, 1936, a cold day, a lorry driver strained himself by having to crank up his lorry at frequent intervals. On returning to his home he complained of pain to his wife. On Feb. 23, he was found to be suffering from influenza. He returned to work on Mar. 16, having recovered from the influenza. He died on Apr. 27. Evidence showed that the strain on Feb. 21 was much more than the ordinary strain of work, & that the lorry driver was continuously ill from the day of the strain to the day of his death. The lorry driver had been suffering from heart disease of long standing & he might have died from the effects of any sudden strain. One doctor said that death was due to the strain, another that excessive strain would have shortened his life, & the lorry driver's own doctor stated that he had " apparently well recovered, but heart irregular—heaving impulse." The county ct. judge was not satisfied on the medical evidence that death had been caused by the strain & he dismissed an application for compensation by the lorry driver's widow :—Held : the county ct. judge had misunderstood the evidence of the lorry driver's own doctor, when he thought that it meant that the lorry driver had recovered from the strain. The evidence meant that he had recovered from the influenza but not from the strain, & there was no evidence of the effect of the influenza on his heart. The judge had misdirected himself & the appeal was allowed & an award made in favour of the widow.—HILTON v. BILLINGTON & NEWTON, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. R. 292 ; 155 L. T. 530 ; 80 Sol. 3932j. Decision based upon proper reasoning—Addition of unsound reason.]—A workman stayed away from work & was considered by his doctor to be suffering from influenza & gastric trouble. On the next day the doctor discovered an injury to the scrotum which appeared to be of a few days' standing. On the next two days the workman was visited by a mate & by his foreman to each of whom he gave an account of an accident a week earlier when he fell from a ladder while at work & injured his scrotum. An entry of this was made in the accident book. A few days later the workman died of septicæmia. On a claim for compensation brought by the widow the county ct. judge held that the probabilities were that the injury which caused the death was sustained during work, but went on to say that, apart from that, the information given by the workman when notifying the accident could not be ignored, & made his award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed :—Held : there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the injury occurred while at work. As the county ct. judge had come to his decision by proper reasoning, the fact that he might have added another reason which was unsound in law would not be a ground for upsetting that decision.—CHURCHWARD v. LANCASTER'S STEAM COAL COLLIERS, LTD. 3932k. Lump sum award—Incorrect finding of dependency.]—A family consisted of father, mother & three sons. One son died as the result of an injury arising out of & in the course of his employment. The father & all three sons contributed varying sums to the family purse. At the time of the death, one son was in no way dependent on deceased & the other son was in ill-health & out of work. The father earned £4 17*s.* 3*d.* a week, of which he contributed £3 to the family purse & kept a savings bank account of his own. The father & mother claimed compensation on behalf of themselves & the brother in ill-health, as being partially dependent on deceased's earnings. The county ct. judge held that they were all partial dependants & awarded them a lump sum of £150, but reserved the question of apportionment. The employer appealed :—Held : there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the father was a partial dependant within the meaning of sect. 4 (2), & as in view of the nature of the award of an undivided lump sum to all three appts., it was impossible to say what portion of it the county ct. judge had appropriated to the father, there must be a new trial to consider the amounts to which the mother & brother were entitled.—JACKSON v. CANHAM (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 30, C. A.

3932l. Award based on ambiguous medical certificate.]—A miner had worked underground for some years but on Oct. 12, 1934, the mine in which he was working closed down. On Oct. 17, 1934, he obtained work in a quarry, but gave up that work on Feb. 9, 1935, on account of miner's nystagmus. On Feb. 11, 1935, he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & the date of disablement was fixed by the certifying surgeon as Oct. 12, 1934. The mine owners appealed from that certificate to the medical referee who, on Mar. 12, 1935, found that the workman "was at the time of his examination by the certifying surgeon suffering from miner's nystagmus but was not thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed," & certified that his condition at the date of examination by the medical referee was that "he is suffering from miner's nystagmus with well marked oscillation of the eyes but slight subjective discomfort, so that his earning capacity is not decreased. He is quite fit to do the work in a quarry at which he is at present employed." The county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical referee was unambiguous, & meant that the workman was fit for his full work as a miner. He therefore made his award for the employer. The workman appealed on the ground that the certificate should have been sent back to the medical referee for explanation as it was not clear whether it intended to certify that the man was fit for his full work as a miner or only for work as a quarryman :—Held : the certificate of the medical referee was ambiguous, for if he had meant to say that the workman's earning capacity was not decreased for the purpose of earning full wages at the work of mining, there was no necessity also to state that he was quite fit to do work in a quarry. The certificate must therefore be remitted to the medical referee for further explanation. Appeal adjourned. Certificate remitted to medical referee.—EVANS v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 413, C. A.

3932m. Formal award inconsistent with written judgment.]—A miner was certified to be disabled by miner's nystagmus. Though fit for light work, he received compensation for total incapacity under sect. 9 (4) for a time & was then given notice to terminate his contract of service. The employer then brought proceedings to review & diminish the weekly payment. The workman contended, & at the arbn. called evidence to show, that he was entitled to the benefit of an order under sect. 9 (4) as amended, both on the ground, under clause (i), that he was in consequence of the injury unable to obtain the same class of work & also, under clause (ii), that his failure to obtain employment was a consequence wholly or mainly of his injury. The county ct. judge gave a written judgment in which he said that the case was indistinguishable from that of Ingham's Thornhill Collieries, Ltd. v. Barstow, No. 3291d, & held that, after considering the state of the labour market & the evidence called at the arbn., it was not probable that the workman would in consequence of the injury be able to obtain the same class of work as before. He therefore reduced compensation. On the same day the county ct. judge signed a printed award (Form 24B) in which the words in square brackets dealing with clause (ii) were not deleted. The printed award diminished the weekly payment. The result of this was to make the award appear as if the judge had refused to make an order under sect. 9 (4) because he was not satisfied that the provisions of either clause (i) or (ii) had been fulfilled. The workman appealed :—Held : it was clear from his judgment that the county ct. judge had not intended to deal with clause (ii) & the fact that he had not deleted that part of his printed award which referred to it did not mean that he had necessarily considered it. There must be a new trial to consider the evidence under both clause (i) & clause (ii) of sect. 9 (4) as amended. Appeal allowed.—EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. WILLIAMS (1935), 28 B. W. 3932o. Fresh evidence—Available at original hearing.]—A workman injured his arm in Dec. 1931. In June, 1933, the county ct. judge found that he had completely recovered & made an award for the employers. In 1935 the workman was examined by specialists & X-ray photographs were taken, with the result that it was then discovered that he had been more seriously injured than had been apparent two years previously, five fresh fractures being disclosed. As the workman was still incapacitated, he applied to the county ct. judge for a new trial. The county ct. judge refused the application on the ground that with reasonable diligence the fresh evidence could have been available at the original hearing & the responsibility for any inadequacy in the presentation of his case then rested on the workman & his advisers. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly exercised his discretion in refusing to grant a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—MOORE v. CUNARD S.S. CO. (No. 2) (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 469, C. A.

3932p. Refusal to grant new trial.]—An appeal from a refusal of the county ct. judge to grant a new trial:—Held: the judge had acted within his discretion & there were no grounds for ordering a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—COCHRANE & SONS, LTD. v. HUTCHENS (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 219, C. A.

3932q. Admission of accident—Incapacity not considered.]—A chef on board a yacht suffered an accident. The accident was admitted but incapacity was denied. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found as a fact that there had never been an accident & dismissed the claim. The workman appealed:—Held: as the accident had been admitted there must be a new trial to consider the issue of incapacity. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—RIVOLI v. DUDLEY, EARL (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 249, C. A.

3940a. —— —— ——.]—A steel erector lost his left little finger by accident & was paid compensation. Compensation was stopped under the provisions of sect. 12 & the workman returned to work on the ground level for a few days. He complained of tenderness in his hand & was discharged. He claimed compensation for total incapacity or alternatively for partial incapacity to be treated as total under sect. 9 (4) as amended. The county ct. judge found that he was not entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated under sect. 9 (4) as he had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment & made an award for 5*s.* a week. The workman appealed on the ground that the judge had, according to the recollection of counsel, given reasons which were unsound & could not support the award. There was no note of such reasons having been given but they were set out in the notice of appeal. The Ct. of Appeal ordered that the case should be remitted for the judge to reconsider the whole matter on the evidence already given. On the second hearing the county ct. judge said that he had no recollection of giving any of the reasons alleged. He thereupon reconsidered the whole evidence & came to the same conclusion as before & consequently made the same award:—Held: the matter had now been made clear & there was abundant evidence to support the finding. Appeal dismissed.—KEOHANE v. DORMAN LONG & CO. (No. 2) (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 146, C. A.

3945a. —— Not to be supplemented by note taken by articled clerk—Note apparently complete.]—A miner, after helping to put a tram on the rails, died within a few minutes. At the post-mortem examination it was found that death was due to effusion in the pericardium. At the arbn., on the claim by his dependant for compensation, the employer's doctor gave evidence to the effect that there was no connection between the exertion & the sudden collapse. In making his award for the employer, the county ct. judge said that he preferred the evidence given for the employer to that given for the dependant, & held that death was not caused by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment. The dependant appealed, & on the hearing of the appeal counsel for the dependant asked for permission to read, in addition to the judge's note, a note taken at the hearing in the ct. below by an articled clerk. Permission was refused:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, which was purely a question of fact for the county ct. judge, & no misdirection. —— ——.]—A workman obtained, on Feb. 19, 1937, an award for weekly compensation at the rate of 4*s.* 6*d.* from June 9, 1936, up to the date of hearing & to continue. The arrears of compensation amounted to £8 9*s.* 6*d.* The formal award was drawn up & signed on Apr. 2, 1937. On Apr. 22, 1937, the workman's solr. gave notice of appeal as to quantum only. Resps. did not know of the intention to appeal until after service of the notice of appeal. A week after the award resps. had sent to the workman a cheque for £8 9*s.* 6*d.* for arrears & thereafter continued to send cheques for 4*s.* 6*d.* each week. These cheques were endorsed & cashed by the workman. The workman was in need of the money & stated that he treated the payments as merely made on account of the sum to which he considered he was entitled. The workman's solr. was throughout in ignorance of these payments. On the preliminary objection that no appeal lay on the ground that the workman was both approbating & reprobating the award :—Held : the rule was well established that any acceptance by a workman of money payable under an award was an approbation of that award & he could not now be heard to appeal from it.—EVANS v. MONMOUTHSHIRE & SOUTH WALES EMPLOYERS' MUTUAL INDEMNITY SOCIETY, LTD. 3954c. Appeal against date of termination of compensation—Application for review.]—An infant workman was in receipt of compensation from the date of his injury to Aug. 10, 1928. On that date the employers, without following the procedure indicated in sect. 12, stopped the compensation on the ground that the workman had fully recovered. The county ct. judge heard the workman's claim for a continuance of the weekly payments on Jan. 8, 1929, when he found as a fact that the workman had fully recovered on Aug. 10, 1928, but granted a declaration of liability. The workman claimed that on this finding he was entitled to a continuance of the weekly payments to Jan. 8, 1929, in accordance with sect. 12. The county ct. judge adjourned the case for further argument on this point, & on Aug. 14, 1929, gave a considered judgment in which he held that, on his previous finding as to the date of recovery, the liability of the employers to make weekly payments ceased on Aug. 10, 1928. In May, 1929, the infant workman had come of age. In Sept. 1929, he entered an appeal against the decision of Aug. 14, 1929, by which the judge had ended payments as from Aug. 10, 1928, & in Oct. 1929, he filed an application in the county ct. for a review of the declaration of liability. On the hearing of the appeal the employers took the preliminary objection that by starting proceedings both by way of appeal & by way of review, the workman was both approbating & reprobating the award :—Held : (1) on the preliminary objection, the two sets of proceedings were in respect of independent matters & did not amount to approbation & reprobation ; (2) on the merits, the county ct. judge having fixed the date of recovery of the workman, the employers could not then be ordered to continue the weekly payments after that date.—BEVAN v. GROVESEND STEEL & TINPLATE CO., LTD. I. Other Cases.

3977a. Death of applicant before appeal heard—Judgment given in ignorance of death.]—A widow of a deceased workman was refused compensation by the county ct. judge. She appealed, but died five days before the hearing of the appeal. The appeal was however heard, the ct. being unaware of her death, & on Oct. 25, 1934, the appeal was allowed. The case was sent back to the county ct. judge to assess the amount of compensation payable to her & her four children. On a motion by the employers to set aside or strike out the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal was a nullity & the award of the county ct. judge must stand, & the parties must take such proceedings as they might be advised.—PATTENDEN v. MCINTOSH (No. 2) (1934), 27 B. 3993a. —— —— Denial of liability.]—A workman having been injured by accident, his employers applied for a reference to a medical referee under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19, on the ground that there was a dispute as to whether he was fit for his employment & as to whether any incapacity from which he might be suffering was due to the accident. Four days later the workman filed an objection to the reference on the ground that, as the employers were refusing to admit that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, the matter should be dealt with by arbn. & not by reference. On the same day he filed his appln. for arbn. The sheriff-clerk allowed the reference to the medical referee & his decision was not appealed from. The employers filed an answer to the workman's appln. for arbn., in which they objected to the arbn. proceedings on the ground that the matter had already been referred to a medical referee, & further alleged that the workman was not entitled to any compensation because the accident had not arisen out of & in the course of the employment. The medical referee reported that the workman was partially incapacitated, & two days later the parties arrived at an agreement for settlement. On argument as to the costs the sheriff-substitute held that the workman's appln. for arbn. was premature, unwarranted & unnecessary, & while awarding no costs on the reference to the medical referee, gave the costs of the alleged abortive arbn. proceedings to the employers. On appeal it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that the sheriff-substitute was wrong in depriving the workman of the costs of the arbn. proceedings on the ground stated by him, & remitted the question of costs to him for further argument. The employers appealed:—Held: the medical referee having no power to decide whether the accident arose out of or in the course of the employment, it was perfectly proper for the workman to take the earliest opportunity of getting that point determined by arbn., & was entitled to act as he had done.—BARR & HIGGINS, LTD. v. GREEN (1928), 98 L. 3995a. ——.]—A workman alleged that on Jan. 19, 1933, he was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He was away from work from Mar. 2 to June 19, 1933. From June 19, 1933, to Dec. 1, 1934, he continued at his old work. He alleged that he had to cease work on Dec. 1, 1934, on account of the injury sustained on Jan. 19, 1933, & claimed compensation from Dec. 1, 1934, only. It was agreed between the parties at the arbn. that the three issues to be tried by the county ct. judge were: (1) Was there an accident? (2) Did it cause an injury at the time? (3) Was the workman's condition at the date of the arbn. due to that accident? The judge found for the workman on the first two issues & for the employer on the third issue, but awarded compensation to the workman for the period from Mar. 2 to June 19, 1933, & ordered each side to pay their own costs. The employers appealed:—Held: in so far as the award was given in favour of the workman, it was given on a matter that had never been submitted to arbn. by him & was bad, & the employers having therefore been wholly successful in the arbn., there was no ground for depriving them of their costs. Appeal allowed.—WILLIAMS v. DOROTHEA SLATE QUARRY CO., LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 174, C. A.

4014a. ——.]—On an application to review weekly payments the employers received a letter from the workman's solrs., asking what was the exact amount of diminution they claimed, & replied that they intended to ask for a reduction of the 15*s.* a week to 2*s.* 6*d.* a week or to such other sum as the ct. should hold proper. The county ct. judge reduced the weekly payment to 10*s.*, & ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: on the correct reading of the letter stating the diminution claimed the employers were successful on the award given, & the order as to costs should be set aside, &, by consent of the employers, each party was ordered to pay their own costs.—MIDDLETON ESTATE & COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. FINAN (1926), 20 B. 4014c. —— Ambiguous answer by workman—Workman to pay costs.]—Employers asked for termination or diminution of a weekly payment to a workman on the ground that he was fit to resume work. The workman put in an answer in which he admitted that he was fit for light work, but alleged that the employers had neglected to provide any light work. He also said that he was prepared to accept such reduced compensation as might be found to be half the difference between his average pre-accident earnings & the average weekly amount he could earn at such light work as might be available for him. The county ct. judge made an award diminishing the weekly payment, & giving the costs to the employers on the ground that they had succeeded on the main issue, the answer being ambiguous, & leaving it open to the workman to argue at the hearing that his labour was an "odd lot" & that he was, therefore, entitled to resist any reduction. The workman appealed on the ground that the county ct. judge had failed to exercise judicially his discretion as to costs:—Held: the county ct. judge had not violated any principle of law in exercising his discretion as to costs. Appeal dismissed.—MIDLAND EMPLOYERS' MUTUAL ASSURANCE, LTD. v. LEWIS (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 192, C. A.

4035a. Decision of registrar as to quantum—Appeal to judge—No jurisdiction to review.]—In the taxation of costs the County Ct. Rules & the Workmen's Compensation Rules give a discretion to the registrar of the county ct. which cannot be interfered with by the county ct. judge on a question of amount when the discretion is otherwise properly exercised. A bill of costs in a case under the Workmen's Compensation Act included fees paid to three medical witnesses, two for £8 8*s.* each & one for £10 10*s.* On taxation the registrar reduced the fee to be allowed to each of those witnesses to £3 3*s.*, stating that he did so in the exercise of his discretion & after careful consideration of the relevant circumstances. On the hearing of an application to review, the county ct. judge increased the allowance for each of the three witnesses to £7 7*s.* On appeal:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction to interfere with the discretion of the registrar in fixing the quantum of allowance for the medical witnesses.—WHITE v. ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1936] 2 K. Pltf. was, in fact, paid full wages all the time he was off work, & made no claim for compensation. Some time after his return to work, however, he signed the usual form of receipt in respect of each week he was off work, the receipt stating that he had received compensation at the rate of 30*s.* per week. 4068a. —— —— Adjournment of compensation proceedings—Pending action by widow under Fatal Accidents Act.]—A workman met with a fatal accident. A claim under 1925 Act was made by two infant dependants. The widow, acting under advice, stated that she proposed to take proceedings in another ct. to recover damages in respect of her husband's death, but declined to make or give up any claim to compensation under the Act. The county ct. judge, acting under Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, r. 4 (2), then made an order joining the widow as resp. to the arbn. proceedings, stating that the order was made without prejudice to her right to proceed under Fatal Accidents Act or to claim compensation under the Act. The employers contended that by reason of the above matters the widow was barred from bringing an action under Fatal Accidents Act, she having elected to proceed under the Workmen's Compensation Act:—Held: (1) the widow had not in law or in fact exercised an option to claim compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act; (2) it was open to the widow to bring proceedings under Fatal Accidents Act, & for the children at the same time to proceed under Workmen's Compensation Act; (3) the provisions of 1925 Act, s. 8 (3) (ii), do not make such proceedings impossible, in that, in such a case, it would be impossible to make a proper award of compensation in respect of the children under the sect.—TAYLOR v. ARROL (SIR WILLIAM) & Co., LTD., [1937] 1 All E. against the workman, & found the employers entitled to expenses. In a stated case the question of law was whether the arbitrator was entitled, on the facts found proved, to decide against the workman. The ct. answered the question of law in the negative, & remitted the case to the arbitrator. The arbitrator refused a motion by the workman for the expenses of the proof, on the ground that he had already awarded them to the employers & could not recall his own award:—Held: the effect of the answer to the question of law was to recall the interlocutor of the arbitrator on the merits, that the award of expenses being merely ancillary fell with it, &, accordingly, it was now open to the arbitrator to reconsider the question of the expenses of the proof.—MORTON v DAVID COLVILLE & SONS, [1931] S. In that process the co. paid into ct. the maximum amount payable under the Act, & the arbitrator awarded the stepson compensation. In their defences to the common law action the co. pleaded that the defenders having paid into ct. the maximum compensation payable under 1925 Act, & not being liable to proceedings independently of said Act, the present action was incompetent:—Held: the option of the widow either to claim compensation under the Act or to take proceedings independently of it could not be defeated by the arbn. proceedings taken by the stepson, & the action was competent.—KINNEIL CANNEL & COKING COAL CO., LTD. v. SNEDDON (OR WADDELL), [1931] A. 4071a. Action for breach of statutory duty.]—An infant workgirl lost the ring finger of her right hand by accident arising out of & in the course of her employment. She received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for a time, & then accepted £20 in purported settlement on the promise by the employer to re-employ her. No memorandum of this agreement was recorded. She worked at this employment for five years when, by reason of trade conditions, she was discharged. She then commenced an action against the employer for damages for personal injuries resultant from the employer's alleged breach of statutory duty to fence the machine. The action was tried by a judge alone who found that the injury had been caused by the employer's breach of statutory duty to fence, & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. He, however, also found, having regard to the fact that the infant had received employment for five years after her accident under the agreement, that the agreement to accept compensation, though not registered, was for her benefit & therefore binding, with the result that the action was barred by sect. 29 of the Act The infant appealed:—Held: without deciding whether the agreement was for the infant's benefit or whether further proceedings might be taken under Workmen's Compensation Act, the action for breach of statutory duty failed because, on the evidence, the machine was not a dangerous machine within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, & therefore there was no duty on the employer to fence it. Further, on the evidence, the accident was caused by the negligence of pltf. which was a complete defence to the action even if such negligence had only been of a contributory character.—HIGGINS v. HARRISON (1932), 25 B. 4071d. —— —— What amounts to.]—Defts. installed in their factory as part of the plant with the intention that it should be used by their employees a dangerous machine which was not fenced or guarded as required by Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22). Owing to the condition of the machine pltf., a workman in the employment of defts., was injured by it in the course of his work. It was found that it was not by the negligence of defts. but of their foreman that the machine had been allowed to be used in the condition in which it was at the time of the accident:—Held: the defence of volenti non fit injuria had no validity against an action based on breach of statutory duty; & further, pltf.'s injury was caused by the "wilful act" of defts. within sect. 29 (1) of 1925 Act, & defts. were therefore not protected by that sect. from liability to pltf. independent of the Act.

Defts. appealed, & contended that the maxim volenti non fit injuria was a defence to the action:—Held: the defence of volenti non fit injuria was no answer to a claim made by a workman against his employer for injury caused through a breach by the employer of a duty imposed upon him by statute.—WHEELER v. NEW MERTON BOARD MILLS, LTD., [1933] 2 K. The latter contended that, by reason of the definition of "employer" in sect. 5 of 1925 Act (whereby, upon the loan of services of a workman, the person with whom he has entered into a contract of service is to be deemed to be, & to continue to be, his employer) appct. co. was the employer within the meaning of sect. 30 of the Act & that therefore the injury was not caused in circumstances creating a legal liability in some person other than the employer as required by that sect.:—Held: (1) the "legal liability in some person other than the employer" referred to in sect. 30 was a liability outside the Act, & it was not legitimate to refer to the definition in sect. 5 of the Act in the way contended; (2) the construction of the sect. was the same whether the right to an indemnity was sought to be enforced by an arbn. under the Act or by action.—DOXFORD & SONS, LTD. v. FURNESS SHIPBUILDING CO., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. 4085 i. —— Payment of compensation —No claim under Act.]—In an action claiming damages for personal injuries caused by deft.'s negligence, deft. specially pleaded in bar that pltf. was precluded from recovering damages from him by Workmen's Compensation Act, s. 38, in that the accident was one in respect of which compensation was payable under the Act by pltf.'s employer, from whom pltf. had in fact claimed & recovered such compensation. It was admitted that, for a period of 6 months from the date of the accident, pltf.'s employer had paid him weekly, upon the day of each week upon which his weekly salary was paid before the accident, an amount equal to half the amount of his previous salary. The ct. found as a fact that pltf. accepted the payments with the knowledge that they were made to him as being due under the Act:—Held: pltf. notwithstanding he had made no claim under the Act, had recovered compensation & so was barred under sect. 38.—DIXON v. SHAVE (1929), 50 N. See Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 41.

4137a. When right arises—Payment by guardians pending settlement of claim—By arbitration or agreement.]—In an action brought by debenture holders against a co. to realise their security receivers were appointed of the assets comprised in the debentures. At the date of their appointment there were a number of workmen in receipt of weekly payments from the co. as compensation for accidents suffered by them causing total or partial incapacity. These payments having ceased on the appointment of the receivers, the workmen were paid outdoor relief by the guardians. On an application by the guardians under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 41, for repayment of the money so expended by them :—Held : the words "pending the settlement of his claim" in sect. 41 did not refer to the settlement of the workman's claim by the payment of a lump sum, but to the settlement of compensation by an award or by agreement between the workman & the employer; therefore, as the claims of the workmen in the present case had long since been settled by the co. by the weekly sums, the guardians were not entitled to the repayment they claimed.—Re LEWIS MERTHYR CONSOLIDATED COLLIERIES, LLOYDS BANK v. THE CO. An inquiry was then held & the Council adjudged that the practitioner was guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect & by their direction his name was erased from the register :—Held : the practitioner was not entitled to have his name removed from the medical register on his mere application for that purpose ; until the Council ordered his name to be removed he was still a registered medical practitioner, & in ordering his name to be erased for infamous conduct in a professional respect the Council had acted within the powers conferred upon them by the Act & by their Standing Orders validly made thereunder.—R. v. GENERAL MEDICAL COUNCIL, [1930] 1 K. 55 i. Want of proper skill in assistant —Liability of surgeon—Nurse.]—F., a surgeon, on being consulted by I., advised that she should undergo at the same time two distinct operations, the second of which involved an abdominal incision; he suggested that she should enter a named private hospital for such purpose, & she & her husband made the necessary arrangements with that hospital to do so. In due course she was suitably prepared for the operation before being taken into the operating theatre, where F., his assistant surgeon, & the anæsthetist were present, as well as the theatre sister, & one, & at times two, assistant theatre sisters, all members of the nursing staff of the hospital & engaged, paid, & provided by the hospital in the ordinary course. Each was qualified & had sufficient experience properly to undertake the work which fell to her duty to discharge in the theatre. In the course of the first operation iodised phenol (iodine containing carbolic acid) was used for cauterising purposes by F., & after such use it became the duty of one of the assistant sisters to remove the beaker containing it outside the theatre or to a safe place. Instead she returned it to a tray which held a similar beaker containing tincture of iodine & to the spot where the stock iodine was kept. The first operation continued for about forty minutes after the iodised phenol was used. After the first operation, F. & his assistant surgeon proceeded to scrub up & regown, this taking about fifteen minutes. While they were so engaged, the two assistant sisters placed the patient in the position required for the second operation, &, upon an indication from the anæsthetist, the assistant sister who had previously handled the iodised phenol proceeded to paint the abdomen of the patient. Instead of painting the patient with plain tincture of iodine, the sister actually used the iodised phenol, with the result that the patient was badly burned. The sister's error was discovered by F. very soon after it had occurred, & prompt measures were taken by him. I. claimed damages against F. After evidence had been given, the case was removed into the Ct. of Appeal for argument. It was explicitly admitted that F. was not personally negligent, & it was taken as a fact that I., through the sister's negligence, was painted with iodised phenol instead of with tincture of iodine. The question for the Ct. of Appeal was whether F. was vicariously liable for the sister's negligence :—Held : in the circumstances, the sister, in discharging the duty of painting, was neither the servant of the operating surgeon, nor was she in a position analogous to that of a servant doing work as his servant or agent, & accordingly he was not vicariously liable for her negligence.—INGRAM v. FITZGERALD, [1936] N. The evidence showed that M. failed to diagnose the ear-trouble from which pltf. suffered as mastoiditis, & although M. was not able to ascertain what the exact trouble was, he did not send for nor advise sending for an ear-specialist :—Held : all a medical practitioner is required to bring to the performance of his duty is reasonable care & average skill; & he is not responsible merely because some other practitioner of greater skill & greater knowledge might have prescribed a different treatment. If a physician in charge of a case is unable to diagnose the trouble he is under no legal obligation so to inform the patient & to advise the calling in of a specialist.—JARVIS v. INTERNATIONAL NICKEL CO., [1929] 2 D. When a physician requires a patient to get upon a table in order that he may continue his diagnosis, he is bound to exercise reasonable care to see that the table is safe & properly adjusted so that the patient will not be injured as a result of getting upon it. The physician's neglect to so adjust the table is " malpractice, error or mistake in the practice of his profession," within the meaning of those words in an insurance policy under which the insurer agreed to indemnify him against liability for damages in consequence thereof.—BALTZAN v. FIDELITY INSURANCE CO. Deft. said nothing. On examination under the anæsthetic pltf. decided that an immediate operation was necessary to prevent blood poisoning with no possibility of saving the hand & it was amputated. This view was supported by two other attending physicians. Pltf. sued for professional fees & deft. counterclaimed for damages for the cost of an artificial hand, loss of wages, & general damages :—Held : the operation was necessary, & it was performed in a highly satisfactory manner. 86 vi. —— Insufficient staff.]—Defts., the O. Board of Health, maintained a County Hospital, to which pltf. was admitted, & where she underwent an operation. Pltf. was admitted to the hospital upon the terms that her father would pay defts. 4*s.* per day for the treatment therein. After the operation pltf. was burnt by a hot-water jar, which, she alleged, had been placed in her bed by another patient, & she sued the defts for damages. The jury found that defts. contracted to care & maintain pltf.; that defts. were guilty of negligence or breach of duty in the care & maintenance of pltf.; &, in answer to the question whether the negligence was that of some of defts.' employees, answered : "Through insufficient staff" :—Held : once defts. went outside the statutes relating to the relief of the poor, & proceeded to contract with paying patients, they were bound by the ordinary law of contract.—MULRENNAN v. OFFALY BOARD OF HEALTH, [1930] I. R. 345.—IR.

86 vii. —— Negligent operation of apparatus.]—A boy of three years, a patient in deft. corpn.'s hospital, was scalded & burnt by steam escaping from an apparatus designed for his treatment by steam inhalation for pneumonia. The nurse in charge was absent from the room at the time, & was recalled by the boy's screams. She found the apparatus in order & was not able to account for the condition of the patient. In an action by the patient & his father to recover damages arising from the former's injuries, it was not shown how the accident happened, but there was evidence to show that the apparatus was safe if proper care was taken :—Held : the obligation of deft. corpn. being not merely to supply properly qualified nurses, but to nurse the patient, the only inference to be drawn from what happened was that there was an absence of proper care on the part of the hospital attendants, & deft. corpn. was liable for the negligence of its servants. 86 viii. —— ——.]—In an action against an infirmary for damages for personal injuries, pursuer averred that she attended the infirmary for ultra-violet ray treatment; that the nurse in charge, who was in the employment of defenders, allowed her to be exposed to the rays for too long a period; that she thereby sustained injury; & that the injury was due solely to the negligence of the nurse, for whom defenders were responsible. She further averred that she had relied on the knowledge & skill of the nurse in applying the treatment. She did not aver that defenders had acted negligently in the selection of their medical or nursing staffs, or of the apparatus employed. Defenders averred, & pursuer did not deny, that their electrical department was in charge of, & was superintended by, a doctor, & that the treatment received by pursuer was administered by the nurse upon his instructions. The Second Division having dismissed the action as irrelevant the pursuer appealed to the House of Lords. The House, with the assent of the parties, reversed that decision & ordered a proof before answer.—ANDERSON OR LAVELLE v. GLASGOW ROYAL INFIRMARY, [1931] S. C. 34.—SCOT.

86 ix. —— ——.]—Applt. collapsed under an operation performed in the Waitaki Hospital, & had to be moved out of the theatre into a ward. The operating surgeon gave instructions to the house surgeon to apply the usual restorative measures, including the application of heat. The house surgeon decided that applt., who was unconscious, should be placed under an electrical radiant-heat cradle, a common device to keep up the heat of the body, & left general instructions noted in the ward-book as "Hot bath on; watch carefully, & see that patient does not get too hot," &, later, "Bed temperature to be kept between 90 & 100 degrees; watch the heater very carefully." No one was told off to watch or sit by the patient continuously, & during the night applt. was left for intervals of twenty minutes to half an hour without observation. A burn on the knee resulted, necessitating amputation of applt.'s leg. In an action by applt. against the hospital board :—Held : the burn was due to the negligence of the nurse in the care & treatment of the patient while his temperature was being so kept up by means of the heat-cradle, although the evidence did not disclose the precise way in which the burn was caused. The judge assessed the damages at £1,350, but came to the conclusion that the negligence in question was not in a matter of mere ministerial ward duty or in a matter of routine, but was negligence in the discharge of a professional duty for which resp. was not liable. On appeal :—Held : the evidence justified a finding of negligence on the part of a nurse.—LOGAN v. WAITAKI HOSPITAL BOARD, [1935] N. Z. L. R. 385; G. L. R. 1, 421.—N.Z.

86 xi. ——.]—An infirmary was governed by managers, none of whom took any control over the treatment of the patients. The nurses were engaged, & might be suspended, by the matron, whose duty it was to see that they were attentive to their duties. The electrical department of the infirmary was under the control of a director, who was a qualified medical practitioner, & its staff included several qualified nurses. The director prescribed for a patient treatment by ultra-violet rays. He did not specify the time for which the patient was to be exposed, but the regular period for a first exposure was ten minutes. The first exposure was supervised by a nurse, no doctor being present at the time. The patient was burned by the rays, & she alleged that her injuries were due to the negligence of the nurse in allowing her to be exposed for forty-five minutes. In an action against the infirmary for damages :—Held : no negligence on the part of the nurse had been established.—LAVELLE v. GLASGOW ROYAL INFIRMARY, [1932] S. C. 245.—SCOT.

86 xii. ——.]—A patient brought an action for damages against the governing body of a public hospital. He averred that the doctors in attendance failed to examine him properly, & ordered him to leave the hospital when he was unfit to do so; & that the nurses failed to administer medicine as prescribed by the doctors, & also failed to administer laxatives when required. He made further general averments that the nurses had failed to carry out their duties in regard to attendance & the supply of food :—Held : defenders were not responsible for the negligent discharge of their professional duties by competent doctors & nurses engaged by them.—REIDFORD v. ABERDEEN MAGISTRATES, [1933] S. 86 xiv. ——.]—When a hospital, even though the hospital in question is a charitable institution, is sued by a patient for damages caused by the negligence of its employees it is in exactly the same position as other employers & the question whether pltf. can succeed depends upon the facts of the particular case. In the present case it was found that the nurses had been negligent. The hospital contended, with respect to the negligence of one of them in adjusting a tube without informing the patient's doctor, as the patient requested, of the latter's condition, that when she attempted to adjust it she was acting under the orders of the interne, who should be deemed to have been acting temporarily as a substitute for the pltf.'s surgeon &, therefore, pltf.'s agent for giving instructions to the nurse :—Held : what the interne said to the nurse should not be regarded as instructions but merely advice from one whose advice she was not obliged to accept, &, in any event, he was, under the circumstances, the agent of deft. hospital by whom he was employed & the main negligence was that of the nurses in not disclosing the actual facts to him.—BEATTY v. SISTERS OF MISERICORDE OF ALBERTA, [1935] 1 W. puerperal fever & was for some time seriously ill. In an action by resp. to recover damages from applts. for injury caused by the negligence of their professional staff:—Held: applts. or their staff knew or ought to have known that in admitting resp. to the home they were exposing her to the danger of infection, & applts. were consequently negligent in not duly warning her of the existence of that risk.

87c. —— ——.]—Deft. S. performed a minor operation on pltf. in deft. council's hospital. After she had left the hospital pltf. complained of pains, & upon examination by her doctor she was found to be suffering from pyelitis, & a wad of surgical gauze was found in & removed from her body. Pltf. brought an action against S. for breach of duty & neglect to remove the plugging after the operation, & against deft. council for breach of duty & negligence arising out of a failure to nurse her properly. The negligence alleged against the council was that the nurses in their hospital had failed to remove the plugging, had failed to observe or report to the doctor in charge certain symptoms in pltf.'s condition, & had failed to take her temperature on the morning on which she had left the hospital. At the hearing counsel for S. put leading questions to witnesses for deft. council:—Held: (1) upon the evidence S. had negligently left the gauze in pltf.'s body & was liable in damages; the negligence alleged against the nurses was negligence in carrying out their skilled duties as nurses, for which deft. council were not liable; upon the evidence the nurses had no reason to know that the gauze had been left in, & inasmuch as pltf. had not complained of pain there was no duty upon the nurses to discover the presence of the gauze; inasmuch as the temperature had pursued a perfectly normal course & gave no indication that there was anything wrong, the nurses were not negligent in not taking pltf.'s temperature on the morning on which she left the hospital; the causes of action against the two defts. were quite distinct & arose to a substantial extent out of different facts, & counsel for the one deft. was entitled to cross-examine a witness for the other; there ought not to be an order that pltf. should recover the costs payable by her to deft. 87d. Liability of hospital—Diphtheria patient contracting smallpox.]—Resp., an infant patient in applt. hospital, who had suffered from diphtheria, was discharged as cured. Nine days afterwards she developed smallpox. The facts were that smallpox patients had been placed in rooms on the same floor as resp., & that the latter had been attended by the nurses who attended to the smallpox patients. In an action brought by resp., as pltf., against the hospital, as defts., for negligence, defts. pleaded (1) that the technique of which complaint was made by resp. was adopted by applts., on competent medical advice, & (2) that it was in accord with approved modern practice:—Held: having regard to the favourable opinion expressed by all applts.' medical witnesses regarding the technique followed in the hospital & to the accepted practice in regard to that technique appearing from the same evidence, the charge of negligence brought by resps. against applts. in this case was not established.—VANCOUVER GENERAL HOSPITAL v. MCDANIEL (1934), 152 L. Deft. was not there, but two friends, who were in the house, called in a doctor immediately after making the discovery. The doctor, considering the case to be a surgical one, brought in pltf. The wounded man said something to pltf., but the ct. found that he was in such a condition that no words of his could be construed as a request for pltf.'s services or as an acquiescence in their being rendered on a contractual basis:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover.—MATHESON v. SMILEY, [1932] 1 W. a ii. ——.]—The doctrine that the question whether treatment by a physician was negligent is to be tested by the principles of the physician's school is not applicable to the mechanical manipulative labour of a dentist involved in the pulling of teeth ; such work is governed by the rule applicable to all skilled labourers, i.e. that if the work undertaken by them implies skill it must be used, & when injury is sustained that could not have arisen unless there had been an absence of reasonable skill, or negligence, then there is liability.—DRINNEN v. DOUGLAS, [1931] 1 W. Deft. by an honest misunderstanding of pltf.'s instructions extracted, after he had put pltf. under an anæsthetic, twelve teeth, & pltf. brought this action for trespass, assault & battery upon his person :—Held : (1) deft. was negligent in that he failed to make sure what he had to do before rendering pltf. unconscious ; (2) as the action was not begun within six months from the day of the operation, it was barred by sect. 28 of Dentistry Act, R. On the facts :—Held : the dentist was negligent in placing an insufficiently covered hot-water bag against the patient's feet, & was liable for the damage sustained, but as the use of the hot-water bag was not part of the preparation of the patient on behalf of the anæsthetist, the doctor was not liable.—ARCHER & PALMER v. COLVIN (1934), 29 M. In answer to an action by resp. to restrain applt. from practising in a certain specified locality in terms of a covenant to such effect contained in the agreement, applt. pleaded the illegality of the agreement:—Held: a person carries on a business who employs a servant to work for him though he may take no practical part in it; & the agreement in the present case was illegal, as constituting the carrying on of the "practice of dentistry" by a person who was not a registered dentist in contravention of Dentists Amendment Act, 1921-22, ss. 2, 3.—SCOTT v. WATKINS, [1928] N. It was proved that applt. had published an advertisement offering low-priced plates made by experts, also offering to repair, burnish & sterilise plates & concluding, "we make & repair plates only"; also its business was conducted in premises connected by a door with the office of a registered dentist who had organised the co., & was for a time one of its directors; & when a customer decided to buy a plate & had selected it he was directed by the co. to that office for the taking of the impression & the fitting:—Held: the appeal should be allowed.—R. v. MECHANICAL DENTISTRY SCHOOL, [1935] 2 W. Board " (now the Ministry of Health). A Circular issued by the Ministry of Health contained a scale of fees, & clause 8 of the Circular provided (inter alia), that no fee should be payable where the doctor had agreed to attend the patient under arrangement made by or on behalf of the patient or by the club, medical institute, or other assocn. of which the patient or her husband was a member :—Held : (1) clause 8 of the Circular formed no necessary part of the establishment of a scale of fees ; it determined matters which did not belong, & ought not to be appended, to such a scale & was therefore (ultra vires) the Ministry of Health, which had no power under the Act of 1918 except to fix a scale of fees ; (2) " sufficient fee " in sect. 14 (1) of Midwives Act, 1918 (c. 43), was only intended to lay down that the doctors should be properly remunerated for their services, & that it had no relation to another source (the club, medical institute, or other assocn.) from which a payment might be made. He then put it into cartons, & sold it to the public with a label which described it as "Vapour Rub" & bore his trade mark. There was evidence that the words "Vapour Rub" alone described a class of medicines & not any individual one. They meant that the business might be conducted by a person who did not himself perform every act which formed part of the business; it was enough that he controlled & regulated it & had the power, which he exercised, of giving orders as to how it should be carried on. Accordingly, it was not sufficient to make it an offence under the section that one sale was not conducted by the chemist himself or by some other duly registered pharmaceutical chemist. "used as a generating station or for works shall be deemed to be special buildings to which the general provisions of Parts V., VI. & VII. of this Act & the First & Second Scheds. thereof do not apply." A generating station, coming within sect. 227, having been erected according to plans approved by the London County Council, the building being a steelframed building clothed with brickwork & reinforced concrete, to which sects. 58 & 59 in Part VI. of the Act were applicable, the district surveyor claimed from the builders the fees prescribed for a survey under Parts III. & IV. of the Fifth Sched. to the Act:—Held: the expression "general provisions" in sect. 227 limited the parts of the Act which were excluded by that sect. to those which applied to all buildings, & sects. 58 & 59, under which the building was erected, were not general provisions relating to all buildings but were special provisions relating to buildings constructed as therein mentioned, & were therefore not "general provisions of Parts V., VI. & VII." within sect. 227 which were deemed not to apply to the generating station, & therefore the district surveyor was entitled under sect. 173 (2) to the fees he claimed.—LANE v. MOWLEM & CO., LTD., [1935] 1 K. 46a. —— Building used for purposes of railway—Space enclosed under arch.]—A ry. co., incorporated by & acting under the provisions of statute, constructed their railway by a viaduct formed of arches of brickwork, & used the viaduct & arches for the purposes of the railway. Afterwards, a space was enclosed under an archway by building walls with gates at each end, & constructing two stories in the enclosed space. The space so enclosed was used by a lessee of the co. as a stable, & not for the purposes of the railway. After the passing of Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (c. 122), alterations were made in the enclosing walls. The district surveyor having claimed fees in respect of such alterations, under sect. 49 :—Held : the fees were not claimable, & the structure not liable to the operation of Part I. of the Act, but exempt, under sect. 6, as a building belonging to a ry. co., used for the purposes of such railway, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament ; since the archway itself was so used, & the addition did not, of itself, constitute a building : & this was not the case of an alteration of or addition to an old building, within sect. 9, that sect. applying only where the old building is itself within the operation of the Act.—Re BADGER (1858), 8 E. & B. 728 ; 120 E. Neither owner nor occupier having complied with a notice under sect. 5 of 1898 Act to take the bridge down or otherwise secure it, or with an order to the same effect made by a metropolitan police magistrate under sect. 107 of 1894 Act, the London County Council acting under their statutory powers took down the bridge themselves & then forthwith brought a complaint to recover the expenses thereof from the owners in fee simple :—Held : the complaint was rightly dismissed, as by sect. 173 (1) of 1894 Act, proceedings to recover their expenses must proceed in the first instance against the owner immediately entitled in possession to the premises or the occupier.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. STILGOE, [1932] 1 K. 98a. Height of wall for purpose of determining thickness—Bressummers between each storey—Whether one wall or series of walls.]—A building in London was constructed as follows : The front & rear exterior walls of the basement storey, & the rear exterior wall of the ground storey were on a different vertical plane from the front & rear exterior walls on the first, second, & third storeys. There was no front exterior wall on the ground storey, but in lieu thereof a shop front. The front & rear exterior walls were, respectively, in one vertical plane throughout the height of the first, second, & third storeys. Between each storey there was a metal girder or bressummer. These metal girders or bressummers were supported by metal pillars, those at the front standing at the ground floor level on brick pillars, those at the rear going down into foundation under the basement floor level. The wall or piece of wall between the first & second floors stood on one of those metal girders or bressummers. If this wall or piece of wall were taken away, the wall or piece of wall between the second floor & the roof would remain in position. The same facts applied mutatis mutandis to the walls or piece of wall between the second & third floors & the third floor & roof. The walls on each floor depended for their strength & support upon the girders or bressummers upon which they were built. The walls from outside appeared to be each one solid wall. The height of the building from the first floor to the top of the topmost storey was 38 feet. The height of the first storey was 14 feet, of the second 13 feet, & of the third 11 feet. On a complaint by the district surveyor for contravening the London Building Act, 1894, the builders contended that for the purpose of determining the thickness of the walls, the exterior wall of each storey at the front & at the back was a separate wall, that of the first storey 14 feet, that of the second 13 feet, & that of the third 11 feet, respectively. The metropolitan magistrate upheld this contention :—Held : without considering the question whether the walls began at the ground level, the front & rear walls were each one wall from the first floor to the top of the topmost storey, & consequently their height for the purpose of determining the thickness of the walls was 38 feet.—BLACK v. PARKER (GEORGE) & SONS, LTD. During the currency of the lease the London County Council served on defts. a dangerous structure notice in respect of the whole building, & defts. entered on both the demised floors to carry out the work necessitated by the notice. In an action in which first pltf. claimed damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, & in which second pltf. claimed damages for trespass, defts. pleaded that they were under no liability, as they were bound to do the work. 325a. —— —— ——.]—In considering whether it is in the national interest to grant ancillary rights to facilitate the proper & efficient working of minerals under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), the Railway & Canal Commission is entitled to take into account not only difficulties which physically obstruct the getting & carrying away of minerals, but also economic difficulties which militate against their effective marketing.

The expressions "carrying away" in sect. 1 (2), & "conveyance of minerals" in sect. 3 (2) (b), of the Act are to be construed not in a technical sense, but broadly as entitling the person to whom ancillary rights are granted under the Act to transport the minerals from the land where they have been won for sale elsewhere.

The Railway & Canal Commission made an order granting to a colliery co. the ancillary right under the Act to construct an aerial ropeway over the land of other persons from their colliery to Dover, a distance of seven miles, which would enable them to transport their minerals more cheaply & more conveniently than by other means:—Held: the Applts. contended that gold could not be said accurately to have been at a premium during the period in question herein since its price or value was not then in excess of par, i.e. the London price in sterling, English currency being then on the gold standard:—Held: since in Western Australia gold was during the period in question purchased at a price in terms of Australian currency which was more than its world price at par, i.e. in the then terms of sterling, it was appropriately described in the vernacular of commerce as being at a premium in the Australian market, although the increased payment was due to the depreciation of Australian currency rather than to the appreciation of gold in the world market; also it was the conditions of the Australian market that were contemplated by the statute in question, &, therefore, said increased payments were premiums within the statute.—SCRIVEN v. GREAT BOULDER PROPRIETARY GOLD MINES, LTD., [1931] W. 325c. —— Quarry.]—A co. quarrying granite wished to acquire adjoining fields ultimately for the purpose of quarrying the granite under them & immediately partly for the reason that there was a danger of fine stones from blasting operations doing damage on those fields. The co. upon approaching the apparent owners, were told the real owner was a Mrs. M., to whom they made an offer to purchase the property at £2,650. The offer was refused, Mrs. M. naming a purchase price of £6,750. Subsequently, they discovered that she was a mere nominee for certain persons who had been servants or officers of the co., & these persons were joined as resps. It was stated by resps. that they were about to develop these fields by the building of bungalows. The co. applied under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), for a compulsory purchase order in respect of these fields, but as this was beyond the provisions of the Act, the application was amended to ask for a right to work the minerals & such subsidiary rights as might be necessary:—Held: (1) the application to the owners to purchase the land was, in the circumstances of a quarry, a sufficient compliance with the statutory requirement that application must be made to the owner for the right to work the minerals, as the working of the quarry would so destroy the surface that it would be useless for any other purpose; (2) the offer had been unreasonably refused; (3) there was a danger of the minerals being left permanently unworked, because, (a) the co. were the only people likely to work them, & (b) the owners were minded to build bungalows on the fields; (4) the employment by the co. of a considerable number of men made the working of these minerals a matter of national interest; (5) although the minerals under the fields would not be worked in the immediate future, it was reasonable for the quarry owners to look some years ahead & acquire mineral rights in adjoining fields.—Re WEST OF ENGLAND ROAD METAL CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. 326a. Damage to railway by subsidence—Liability of mineowner—Construction of Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 85B (2).]—In 1893, 1895 & 1897 a ry. co. acquired the surface of three areas. In 1889, 1873 & 1889 a mining co. was granted leases of the same three areas with a right to let down the surface. In 1916 & 1920 the co. surrendered their leases for the purpose of & as part of the consideration for the granting of new leases on the same terms. The owners of the land were the same in all cases. The mining co. worked certain minerals under an area protected by Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 79A (1), contained in Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 15, & as the result of such working the ry. co. suffered damage:—Held: the mining co.'s right to let down the surface was not derived from a title antecedent to the acquisition by the ry. co. of their interest in the surface, within Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 85B (2), contained in Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 15, & they were not protected by that sect., &, therefore, they were liable to contribute, under sect. 79A (1), towards the expenses incurred in making good the damage caused by such working.—LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. Jurisdiction of Railway & Canal Commission—Ancillary right—Diversion of highway.]—The Railway & Canal Commission has no jurisdiction to make an order extinguishing or diverting a footpath as an ancillary right under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 3. The procedure to be followed in extinguishing or diverting public footpaths is laid down in Highway Act, 1935 (c. 50), ss. 84, 85, & there is no concurrent or alternative procedure under the Act of 1923.—HODDESDON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. BROXBOURNE SAND & BALLAST PITS, LTD., HERTFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. BROXBOURNE SAND & BALLAST PITS, LTD., [1936] 2 K. 327c. —— —— Repair of highway.]—Appct. co. was extending the works in connection with a limestone quarry & had agreed with neighbouring owners to construct a road leading to a public road. The latter road had recently been greatly improved by another quarry co. at its own expense, & the liability of repairs to the road had never been settled. Upon this further addition to the traffic on the road being suggested, the county council asked appct. co. to come to some arrangement with it as to the repair of the road. Upon an application for the grant of certain ancillary rights, appct. co. also asked for a declaration that the public road in question was a carriage road repairable by the inhabitants at large, &, in the events which had happened, by the Derbyshire County Council:—Held: the Railway & Canal Commission Ct. had no jurisdiction to make the declaration asked.—Re SOMERVILLE (T. 327e. —— Unreasonable refusal to grant lease—Question of law.]—Appcts., who were colliery proprietors owning mines which adjoined those of resps., were desirous of acquiring rights to work resp.'s mines, which were then unworked. Appcts. were willing to pay certain rents & royalties & a dead rent, but refused to give a covenant to work the mines diligently. Resp. declined to grant a mining lease not containing a covenant to work diligently. Appcts. thereupon applied to the Railway & Canal Comrs. for the grant of a right to work the minerals in accordance with the provisions of 1923 Act & sect. 13 of 1926 Act, & for the grant of certain ancillary rights in accordance with sect. 13 of 1926 Act. In their application they alleged (inter alia) that resp., being the person with power to grant the right to work, had unreasonably refused to grant it & had demanded terms which having regard to the circumstances were unreasonable. The Comrs. found that the conduct of resp. had been unreasonable & in substance made the order asked for. On appeal:—Held: (1) it was a condition precedent to the exercise by the Comrs. of their jurisdiction under the Acts that they should first find on the facts that resp. was unreasonable in his refusal or unreasonable in his demands; (2) the question of unreasonableness was a question of law for the decision of the Comrs.; (3) an appeal from their decision therefore lay to the Ct. of Appeal, notwithstanding Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1888 (c. 25), s. 17, which provided that "no appeal shall lie from the Comrs. upon a question of fact"; (4) resp. was not unreasonable in requiring as a condition of granting a lease that appcts. should enter into a covenant to work the minerals diligently.—GLASSBROOK BROS., LTD. v. LEYSON, [1933] 2 K. 327h. —— Meaning of "impeded"—Obligation to pay wayleave rent.]—The word "impeded" in Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), s. 13 (2), relates exclusively to something which impedes or obstructs the actual winning or carrying away of coal, & does not apply to financial obligations imposed by his lease upon the lessee of the coal. The words "terms" & "conditions" are similarly restricted in meaning. The Railway & Canal Commission has, therefore, no jurisdiction to relieve the lessee from an obligation to pay a wayleave rent imposed by his lease in connection with the transport of his coal.—CONSETT IRON CO., LTD. v. CLAVERING TRUSTEES, [1935] 2 K. 327j. —— Amalgamation—Validity of

A scheme for the partial amalgamation of coal mines, submitted for confirmation to the Railway & Canal Commission Ct., provided for the election by the colliery proprietors concerned of a committee which should have power to make & carry into effect plans for the closing of coal mines or undertakings, the purchase of mines or undertakings, the distribution of quota tonnage, the central purchasing of stores & the co-ordination of marketing. From the decision of the committee on any of these matters an appeal lay to arbitrators. The scheme did not provide for the fusion of two or more undertakings:—Held: the scheme ought not to be confirmed because (1) the scheme did not comply with the requirements of Part I. of Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), since it did not provide for the amalgamation into one unit of two or more existing units; (2) it did not comply with the requirements of Part II. of Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), since the ct. was not satisfied (a) that the scheme was in the national interest, (b) that it would result in lowering the cost of production or disposal of coal, (c) that it would not be financially injurious to undertakings to be amalgamated in respect of which there was no provision for compulsory purchase, or (d) that the terms of the scheme were fair & equitable to all persons affected thereby.—Re WEST YORKSHIRE PARTIAL AMALGAMATION (COAL MINES) SCHEME (1935), 153 L. 327k. Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34)—Quota exceeded—Standard tonnage wrongly assessed.]—A district scheme made in pursuance of Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), provided for the payment of penalties by the owners of coal mines who produced from their mines in any month a quantity of coal in excess of the standard tonnage allotted to them. The scheme further provided that the standard tonnage was to be ascertained by taking the average annual output for all the mines in the district for the years 1923, 1924, 1925, & 1927, & by subdividing that output amongst the several mines in the district by reference to the output of each mine in the year 1928. The year 1928 had been selected for this purpose in order to comply with the reference in sect. 3 (2) (c), of the Act to "some recent period during which no arrangements made by a voluntary assocn. or otherwise were in force regulating the output of any substantial number of coal mines in the district." In the district in question the year 1928 was the last year in which no such arrangements were in force. Pltfs. were a statutory body appointed to carry into effect in their district the provisions of the Act, & in this action they claimed penalties from defts., who were owners of a coal mine in the district, for having raised from their mine in the month of Mar. 1931, a quantity of coal in excess of the standard tonnage allotted to them. It was proved that the tonnage allotted to defts. had been calculated by reference to the output of the mines in the district during the year 1929, in which year a voluntary restriction was in force in the district:—Held: inasmuch as pltfs. had acted ultra vires their statutory powers, the ct. was entitled to question their decision so arrived at, because it had not been made in accordance with the scheme. The claim for penalties therefore failed & the appeal must allowed.—MIDLAND (AMALGAMATED) DISTRICT (COAL MINES) SCHEME, 1930, EXECUTIVE BOARD v. SHIPLEY COLLIERIES, LTD. (1933), 149 L. T. 290, C. 3271. —— —— "Solely occasioned by the performance of contracts."]—Applts., who were colliery owners, made in 1928 a contract with a coal distillation co. to supply them with 750 tons of small coal a day for fifteen years. The contract contained a force majeure clause that applts. should be under no liability if they failed to deliver the agreed quantity by reason (inter alia) of the operation of any scheme for the restriction of output. During one period of three days applts. withheld delivery at the request of the distillation co & sold to other customers the small coal 1,890 tons, produced during that period. The quarterly allowance of coal which, during the material period, applts. were allowed to produce under a scheme made under Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), was 92,787 tons. They produced an excess of 11,608 tons, in respect of which the Executive Board imposed a penalty. The matter went before an arbitrator sitting in pursuance of the Act & he held that no part of the excess output of 11,608 tons was solely occasioned by or reasonably necessary for the performance of the contract. A motion by applts. to set aside his award was also dismissed. On appeal:—Held: the arbitrator came to a correct determination in law on the construction of Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), s. 4 (2); as to 4,108 tons, the total output representing the 1,890 tons of small coal, the arbitrator found facts which made it impossible for applts. to resist the penalty; as applts. were excused in law by the force majeure clause from delivery of the balance of the excess, such delivery was not, under sect. 4 (2) (b), reasonably necessary for the performance of the contract; & the penalty was rightly imposed in respect of the full excess produced.—BEDWAS NAVIGATION COLLIERY CO. Defts. were assigned separate quotas for export supply, inland supply & the supply of coal for consumption in the working of the colliery or the supply of the workmen. The whole was called the output quota. One particular colliery was not limited to its own quota, if it could acquire the whole or part of the quota of another colliery. The contention of defts. was that it could exceed its output quota so long as it did not exceed its export & inland supply quotas, they having, in fact, exceeded their output quota by some 4,000 tons by reason of the fact that they had been able to acquire from other collieries more additional export & inland quotas than output quotas:—Held: there had been a breach of the scheme by defts., & they were liable to penalties under sect. 50 thereof in respect of the excess of output.—WILLIAMS, EVANS & LLEWELLYN v. CRUMLIN VALLEY COLLIERIES, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 327p. —— Increase in sectional tonnage—Right to increase in standard tonnage.]—The average annual sectional standard tonnage of the Derbyshire & Nottinghamshire Section of the Midland (Amalgamated) District (Coal Mines) Scheme, 1930, a scheme formulated in accordance with the provisions of the Coal Mines Act, 1930, was increased by the Standard Tonnage Committee of the section by a net addition of 1,232,507 tons, which was made up of three items of 335,007 tons, 697,500 tons, & 200,000 tons. The 335,007 tons had been added to provide for increases of annual standard tonnage to non-associated non-special mines, that was, to non-special mines which had not been members of the C. C. C. A. Scheme, the voluntary scheme which had preceded the Statutory Scheme:—Held: (1) on the construction of the material clause of the Midland Amalgamated scheme, that increase of 335,007 tons was to be divided so that associated non-special coal mines were entitled to a share thereof; (2) the Standard Tonnage Committee of the section was not entitled to subject the annual standard tonnage of an associated non-special coal mine to a general reduction of annual standard tonnage without having any regard to the special circumstances of that coal mine, or any other non-special coal mine in the section; (3) an award of an arbitrator, fixing the annual standard tonnage of a coal mine as being a certain percentage of the aggregate annual sectional standard tonnage, is final & binding in the sense that it is a finding that until circumstances change or warrant a change the mine is to have the standard tonnage on the aw

Seam, & that both shafts were to be used for ventilation & working. He found also that the coal from the S. Seam could be sold by the co. at a higher average price in the competitive market & could be worked at a lower working cost than the coal from the other seams worked at the two collieries:—Held: (1) the definitions of a coal mine in Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), s. 18 (1), clause 2 (d) of the scheme are not restricted & the words "coal mine" as used in clause 15 of the scheme (dealing with the Standard Tonnage Committee under the scheme) ought not to be narrowly construed; (2) the S. The question raised was whether, according to the true construction of "output" in Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), s. 18 (1), the expression "tonnage in coal" means tonnage in coal before it is picked, screened & washed, or whether it means tonnage in coal excluding the dirt picked, screened, washed or otherwise taken out of the coal:—Held: according to the true construction of the definition of "output" in sect. 18 (1) the expression "tonnage in coal" means tonnage in coal as it comes out of the pit in the tubs before any dirt is picked, screened, washed or otherwise taken out of the coal.—Re MIDLAND (AMALGAMATED) DISTRICT (COAL MINES) SCHEME, 1930, HOLLIDAY (ROBERT) & SONS, LTD. v. EXECUTIVE BOARD (1934), 152 L. 651a. —— Reservation of "mines, minerals, & mineral substances"—Whether sand & gravel included.]—(1) Primâ facie the meaning of the word "minerals" both in private deeds & in statutory provisions will yield to the expressed or implied intention of the parties.

(2) In arriving at the construction of a reservation of mines & minerals in a private deed, regard must be had to cases relating to the construction of the words "mines & minerals" in statutory provisions.

(3) The two main principles to be gathered from the authorities are: that the word "minerals" when found in a reservation out of a grant of land means substances, exceptional in use, in value & in character, & does not mean the ordinary soil of the district which, if reserved, would practically swallow up the grant, & (4) in deciding whether or not in a particular case exceptional substances are "minerals" the true test is what the word means in the vernacular of the mining world, the commercial world & landowners at the time of the grant & whether the particular substance came within that meaning. (5) The question whether a given substance is or is not a "mineral" within the meaning of the instrument in which it is mentioned is a question of fact to be decided according to the circumstances of the particular case. (6) For all practical purposes "minerals" & "mineral substances" are synonymous terms, & the latter yields to the expressed or implied intention of the parties as much as the former, & accordingly what is said in the authorities as to the meaning of the word "minerals" applies with equal force to the words "mineral substances." (7) A conveyance of land made in 1925 contained a reservation of "all mines, minerals, & mineral substances":—Held : that the words must be construed according to their meaning in the vernacular of the mining world, the commercial world & landowners at the time of the execution of the conveyance, & that, upon the evidence, the words did not include sand or gravel.—

st. Chattels appurtenant to lease—What are.]—Pltf. obtained an option on several mining leases. The ground had previously been worked by one H., who constructed a water system for washing the gravel, but after operating for a time abandoned the property, leaving certain chattels used in connection with the water system on the ground. Upon pltf. co. commencing operations it purchased the chattels from H.'s estate & used them until it in turn abandoned the properties. The owners took possession & refused to give up the chattels, claiming that the water licences authorising pltf. to use water were together with all works constructed appurtenant to the lease, & could not be separated from the property:—Held: defts. had not satisfied the burden of proof which was upon them to show that these chattels were in fact to be regarded as part of the works which are appurtenant to the leases. They were in fact parts of the mining machinery & appliances for recovering the gold, not of the water system, & were quite separate & distinct from those works, & not attached in any way to them or to the soil.—ENNIS GOLD MINING CO. v. HENDERSON (1927), 39 B. In sinking wells, which did not produce oil in commercial quantities, resps. found natural gas. They tapped the gas by pipes & for six years used it for their own purposes:—Held: applt. was not entitled to compensation for the gas so taken since (a) that right was not included in the right to royalties upon the oil won; & (b) the lease on its true construction was not merely a lease for the purpose of winning oil, & applt. having no property in the gas, resps. were entitled to reduce into possession & use it, provided they did so without injury to the leased property.—U PO NAING v. BURMA OIL CO., LTD. Resps. were tributers of the mine under tribute agreements made with applts. on May 15, 1930, & approved & registered by the warden. Resps. instituted proceedings in the warden's ct. in 1933, claiming in substance an account of all sums due to them from applts. under the tribute agreement. Applts., in their defence, contended that by an agreement of Mar. 18, 1932, the parties had agreed that applts. should pay to resps. for the gold delivered by them to applts. certain sums other than those stipulated for by the tribute agreements, & on making such payments should be released & discharged from their liability to make the payments agreed to be made in the tribute agreements, that they had made such payments & that the sums were received in full settlement of all claims. Resps. in reply maintained that the agreement of Mar. 18, 1932, was illegal & void as being contrary to the Mining Acts, 1904-23, s. 152:—Held: the Mining Act was intended to protect tributers in respect of their own contracts, & to interfere with their liberty of contract in their own interests, & its terms were plainly obligatory. 922a. Order of Railway & Canal Commission.]—(1) A mining co., for the proper working of its mines, obtained an order from the Railway & Canal Commission under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), & the Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), granting it facilities to work the coal under land adjoining its mines upon the terms & conditions therein stated. One of the paragraphs in the order was in these terms: "Every dispute concerning any matter or thing whatsoever arising out of this Order shall be referred to the Commission." The owners of the land brought an action for injury done to their property by a subsidence which took place subsequent to the date of the order. The co. took the preliminary objection that the action was not maintainable, & that the questions in dispute were wholly questions to be determined by the Commission, & not by the High Ct. :—Held : the Railway & Canal Commission had no jurisdiction enabling it to oust the jurisdiction of the High Ct., but the effect of an order made by that Commission, under the above-mentioned Acts, may be to make not actionable an act or acts which apart from the order would have been tortious &, in this way, to deprive a pltf. of a cause of action which he would otherwise have had, or it may affect the relief to which pltf. would otherwise have been entitled.

(2) A mining co., for the proper working of its mines & having made an application to the Railway & Canal Commission for an order, under the above-mentioned Acts, giving it facilities to work minerals under adjoining land together with ancillary rights of working including that of letting down the surface on payment of compensation, committed a trespass by working under adjoining property before the order was granted but after the application was filed. An action was brought by the owners of the adjoining land for damages for trespass for working the coal without an order of the Commission so to do :—Held : in the circumstances, the trespass was not wilful & pltfs. were entitled only to reasonable damages & not to penal damages, the co. being allowed all expenses of hewing & raising.—TOWNEND v. ASKERN COAL & IRON CO., [1934] Ch. 463 ; 103 L. She further averred that it was the duty of defenders, in working these seams, to avoid any operation which might render the house unsafe for any of its occupants, & that, in breach of this duty, they had proceeded with their operations, although aware that she was living in the house & that its stability was being imperilled :—Held : although defenders were under no obligations to pursuer qua landlords of the house, her averments set forth a relevant case of negligence towards her on their part qua proprietors of the underground workings, which, if established, would entitle her to damages.—M'CORMICK v. FIFE COAL CO., [1931] S. In addition the following clause was included in the lease : "5. The lessor shall have the full & absolute right subject as aforesaid to the use of the surface of all land hereby demised & the lessee co. shall not interfere with or damage the surface of any of the said land except so far as such interference or damage may be unavoidably occasioned by the working of the demised mines in accordance with the provisions of these presents." In answer to a question of law argued before trial :—Held : the mining lease carried with it & conferred upon the Colliery Co. the right to let down the surface of the land in so far as such letting down may be unavoidably occasioned by the working of the demised mines in accordance with the provisions of the mining lease ; & the Colliery Co. was not bound to abstain from removing any part of the coal in order to avoid or reduce such letting down ; to this extent the rights of the Colliery Co. under the mining lease were inconsistent with the full continuance of the natural right of support.—WARD v. PUKEMIRO LAND CO., LTD., & PUKEMIRO COLLIERIES, LTD., [1936] N. 944a. —— Reservation of mines & minerals on sale of land under Land Tax Redemption Act, 1802 (c. 116)—"Proper & necessary powers of working."]—In 1804 land in the city of Coventry was sold by a bishop in exercise of the power conferred by this Act, & in 1903 a lease of the mines & minerals under the land for the term of ninety-nine years was granted by his successors in title. The question arose whether the lessees of the mines & minerals were entitled to work & get them in such a manner as to damage & let down the surface of the land & the erections thereon :—Held : the reservation of the mines & minerals together with all proper & necessary powers for opening & working the same, did not reserve either expressly or by necessary implication the right to work the mines & minerals so as to let down the surface. As it was not known at the date of the Act & the conveyance, as it was at the present time, that the mines & minerals could not be worked safely & with commercial efficiency without letting down the surface of the land, there was, in the absence of express words, nothing to affect the ordinary presumption that the land when conveyed was conveyed with the common right to support.—WARWICKSHIRE COAL CO., LTD. v. COVENTRY CORPN., [1934] Ch. 488 ; 103 L. 976a. —— Plaintiff formerly tenant—Whether damages for subsidence while tenant recoverable.]—S., a yearly tenant of a certain farm, subsequently purchased the fee simple of the surface of the land. The underlying minerals had been reserved to the original owners by a previous conveyance, together with the right to work the same, but there was a proviso in that conveyance granting reasonable compensation to the surface owner for damage caused to the surface by the working of the minerals. This proviso constituted a covenant between the parties running with the land. The conveyance to S. was subject to this reservation of the underlying minerals, & S. accordingly obtained the benefit of the covenant. The minerals had been worked for some time both before & after the sale to S., & damage had been caused to the surface thereby. In an action by S. claiming compensation for damage caused to the surface by the working of the underlying minerals both before & after the conveyance to him, it was admitted that compensation for damage caused after the date of the conveyance was recoverable by him :—Held : he was not entitled in the absence of an express assignment to recover under the covenant any compensation for damage which had accrued before the conveyance to him of the surface.—SNOWDON v. ECCLESIASTICAL COMRS. 1106a. Wages agreement—Decision of chairman of conciliation board—Whether award.]—By a Conciliation Board agreement provision was made for the payment of a subsistence allowance to low-paid colliery workers in South Wales, &, the parties having failed to agree as to the amount & conditions of payment, the matter came before the independent chairman of the board, & he gave a decision. The parties failed to agree as to the interpretation of the decision, & representative workmen then brought an action against representative employers for declarations, (a) that on the true construction of the decision the subsistence allowance ought to be calculated for each shift separately, & (b) as to the method of reckoning overtime for the purpose of calculating subsistence allowance. The judge in chambers, on the grounds that the wages agreement incorporating the conciliation agreement amounted to a submission to arbitration, & that the chairman's decisions were awards, made an order that the action be adjourned & that the awards be remitted to the chairman to deal with the two questions raised by the pleadings. The Ct. of Appeal set aside the order of the judge & granted the declarations claimed :—Held : the chairman had decided both questions in favour of pltfs. & they were entitled to the declarations claimed—CARDIFF COLLIERIES, LTD. v. MEREDITH (1929), 45 T. 1116a. Agreement for payment on large coal gotten—Small coal necessarily produced.]—Applt., a collier, was employed on terms embodied in a Conciliation Board Agreement dated Feb. 9, 1931, which provided that "the mineral to be gotten is clean large coal only as hereinafter described," & that his wages were to be paid on the weight of the large coal gotten by him. The rate of wages payable to him was contained in a price list. In the process of mining coal the collier had of necessity to produce a certain amount of small coal in the course of mining large coal. He contended that the agreement was illegal as being in contravention of Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887 (c. 58), s. 12, which stated that "where the amount of wages paid to any of the persons employed in a mine depends on the amount of mineral gotten by them, those persons shall be paid according to the actual weight gotten by them," & he claimed to be paid on a contract basis which included payment for small coal :—Held : his wages were to be calculated on a quantum meruit basis on the weight of both the large & small coal gotten by him.—MATTHEWS v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. 1119a. Dismissal—Whether available for re-election.]—Pltf., a checkweigher duly appointed under Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872 (c. 76), s. 18, received a fortnight's notice to quit his employment from the men employed in the mine. Before the notice expired, the men held a fresh election, at which pltf. (with others) presented himself as a candidate, & was again appointed :—Held : the true construction of sect. 18 was to limit the class of persons from whom the men might appoint a checkweigher to persons employed in the mine by the mine-owner ; pltf. ceased to have any employment under the mine-owner when he was first appointed checkweigher by the men ; & therefore his second appointment was invalid.—HOPKINSON v. CAUNT (1885), 14 Q. 1126a. —— —— Act need not be unlawful.]—A checkweigher at a certain pit was also secretary of the local branch of the miners' union of which the men employed at that pit were members. It had been the custom of the district to work a short shift on a Saturday. The colliery gave notice that a full shift would in future be worked at that pit on a Saturday instead of a short shift. The checkweigher tried to persuade the managers of the colliery to work only a short shift on Saturdays. On the Friday he chalked on the pavements in the neighbourhood of the colliery words to the effect that the workmen at that pit had decided at a mass meeting not to work on Saturday unless a short shift should be worked. On Saturday a number of miners assembled at the pit in their pit clothes with their water bottles filled & day's food. After the checkweigher had been told by the manager that the mine would work a full shift instead of a short shift, he went to the men & said: "It's a full shift. Come on, lads," & walked away, & the men did the same & did not work that day:—Held: there was evidence upon which the justices were entitled to come to the conclusion that the checkweigher had interfered with the management of the mine contrary to Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887 (c. 58), s. 13, & to make an order removing him from his office of checkweigher.

Per AVORY, J. It was sufficient that the act of the checkweigher did in fact interfere with the management of the mine. It was not necessary that the act should be unlawful either as being in breach of some statute or unlawful according to the common law.—HAMPTON v. WEST CANNOCK COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1932] 2 K. 1148a. —— Failure to provide safe system of working.]—In an action by a miner against his employers for damages for personal injury alleged to be due to the negligence of the employers in that they had failed to provide a reasonably safe system of working the colliery, questions were raised (i) whether the employers were liable at common law for a defective system of working negligently provided or permitted to be carried on by a servant to whom the duty of regulating the system of working had been delegated by the employers, the employers' board of directors being unaware of the defect, & (ii) if they were liable, whether the employers were relieved of their liability in view of the prohibition contained in Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 2 (4), against the owner of a mine taking any part in the technical management of the mine unless he is qualified to be a manager:—Held: (1) the employers were not absolved from their duty to take due care in the provision of a reasonably safe system of working by the appointment of a competent person to perform that duty. Although the employers might, & in some events were bound to, appoint some one as their agent in the discharge of their duty, the employers remained responsible; (2) the doctrine of common employment does not apply where it is proved that a defective system of working has been provided. To provide a proper system of working is a paramount duty, &, if it is delegated by a master to another, the master still remains liable.—WILSONS & CLYDE COAL CO., LTD. v. ENGLISH, [1937] 3 All E. 1173a. Liability of manager—Provision of refuge holes—Proceedings without consent.]—A manager was charged with omitting to provide refuge holes of the character required by Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 44. The actual duty of providing them fell on others, but under sect. 75 the manager also was personally liable. By the same sect. he escaped responsibility if he proved that he had taken all reasonable means of enforcing (inter alia) the provisions of sect. 44. This applt. failed to prove:—Held: the omission to provide such holes was not an offence committed personally by the manager within sect. 102 (5) of the Act, & consequently the justices had no jurisdiction to entertain a prosecution by the resp., who was not an inspector nor acting with the consent in writing of the Secretary of State.—DAVIES v. MAY, [1937] 2 K. In an action for damages based upon a breach by applt. co. of its duty under Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 55, to keep securely fenced dangerous parts of the machinery used in or about the mine, applt. co. contended that, as the cover which fenced the machinery in question had necessarily to be removed for a short time to enable the co.'s engineer to inspect the machinery when it was being tested after repair, & as absolute compliance with sect. 55 was therefore impossible, applt. co. was protected by 1184b. —— —— ——.]—Resps., as owners of a mine, & the agent & manager thereof, were charged with unlawfully contravening the Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 55, in that all exposed & dangerous parts of machinery used in or about the mine, to wit, the return end of a belt conveyor, were not kept securely fenced. The bottom portion of the belt was 4 ins. from the floor, & the distance between the top & bottom portion of the belt was 3 ft. The rollers of the belt conveyor were encased in a cab or cage, which purported to shield them in such a manner as to prevent their being an object of danger to those employed in & about the belt conveyor. At each side of the cab or cage was a D-shaped aperture, which would enable the human arm to be put through for the purpose of oiling the rollers, when necessary. In front of the rollers, & between the top & bottom parts of the belt, there was no fencing. On Oct. 19, 1936, at a time when the belt conveyor had stopped, a fitter employed in connection therewith got on to the bottom portion of the belt & commenced to crawl along it on his hands & knees towards the return end & towards the rollers, apparently attempting to discover the cause of the stoppage. The belt, which was driven by an engine, & controlled by an operator some 50 yds. away, commenced to move. A shout was heard, the belt was stopped, & the fitter was found dead, with his head & arm fast between the top rollers of the bottom set at the return end. The information was dismissed on the grounds that the fitter, when he met with the accident, was acting in a wrong & extraordinary manner, & that, if he wished to get at the rollers, he could & should have got at them through the D-shaped apertures, & that the machinery in question was undoubtedly dangerous, but was not exposed within sect. 55 of the Act of 1911 :—Held : (1) it was wrong to assume that no offence was committed because the workman could have got at the rollers in some other ....., because the Act of 1911 was designed to protect not only the careful workman, but also the person who, through carelessness or forgetfulness, got near to machinery ; (2) the machinery was exposed as well as dangerous within the meaning of sect. 55 of the Act of 1911.—CAREY v. OCEAN COAL CO., LTD., CAREY v. RICHARDS, CAREY v. REES, [1937] 4 All E. The pursuer averred that, in breach of Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 49, which provides that the roof of every working place shall be made secure & that a person shall not (with an immaterial exception) work in any working place which is not so made secure, his son was ordered or permitted to work in a working place where the roof had not been made secure, & that, while he was there at work, part of the roof fell & killed him :—Held : these averments disclosed a case of " personal negligence of the employers " within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 29 (1), & the action was competent.—LOCHGELLY IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. M'MULLAN, [1934] A. While acting as chairman & vice-chairman respectively, B. & S. entered on their own account into secret speculations in cocoa, a commodity in which the N. There was a specific alternative claim that the agreements of settlement & the payments under them were made under a mistake of fact. The jury negatived the charges of fraud, & found that at the time of negotiating the compensation agreements B. & S. had not in mind their breaches of duty:—Held: the action failed as to unilateral mistake, on the ground that defts. under their contracts of service with the L. The hire-purchase agreement was then entered into between pltf. firm & the purchaser. It was a stipulation of the agreement between pltf. firm & defts. that the purchaser should pay not less than one-third of the purchase price as a deposit, & in the present action fraud was alleged against defts. by reason of the fact that they (a) in some cases had allowed a discount to the purchaser which was set off against the initial deposit, (b) in other cases had effected the same result by buying from the purchaser a used car at a price greater than its value, & (c) in other cases had caused pltf. firm to enter into such hire-purchase agreements purporting to be in respect of new cars, when they had in fact allowed the purchaser to use the car for such a period that its value was so depreciated that it was not a proper security for the balance of the purchase-price:—Held: the intention to deceive is not necessarily an intention to injure or to cheat, & if defts. made to pltf. firm a statement as to price & deposit which they knew to be untrue,

510a. ——.]—A testator by his will & codicil appointed W., B. & H. trustees & directed the income of his residuary estate to be paid to his son H. S. for life & after the death of H. S. his wife was to recive an annuity out of residue during widowhood & thereafter a similar annuity was to be paid to the daughter of H. S. Upon the death of the daughter the residue was to go to her children as she should appoint, & in default of children there was a gift over to a named charity. The trustees had power to retain investments existing at the date of the testator's death; & the number of the trustees was not to fall below three. At the death of testator there were living H. S., the wife of H. S., & their daughter who was married & had two children living. Testator's residuary estate consisted of shares in two brick-making cos., both of which were well managed & paid an extremely high rate of dividend, but which held their brickfields upon leases expiring in 1950, & the shares were therefore wasting securities. After H. S. had enjoyed the income of the two cos. for 10 years, it occurred to the trustees that something should be done to protect the interests of the remaindermen; & they accordingly proposed to H. S. that they should either sell the shares in the cos. & invest the proceeds in trustee securities, or that they should create a sinking fund out of the income of H. S. In reply to this, H. S. offered to settle £40,000 (his wife consenting) on his daughter & her children, the interests of the daughter & the grandchildren not to take effect until his death. This offer was accepted by the trustees. The settlement, however, was not made. H. (one of the trustees) then died, & H. S. wanted to be appointed in his place. Shortly afterwards W., another trustee, died. H. S. wrote to the sole remaining trustee, B., saying that the draft deed to settle the £40,000 had been prepared & was only awaiting the appointment of two new trustees. Relying on this letter B. appointed H. S. & the latter's friend Q. as trustees. H. S. then died, & it appeared that no settlement had been made or even prepared. H. S. had a private fortune of £120,000, which he left by his will wholly to his mistress & their two illegitimate children. The trustee B. then brought this action against the exors. of H. S., claiming specific performance of the promise to make a settlement. It was contended that (a) this action could not be brought by B., but only by the trustees of the will as a body; (b) there was no consideration moving from the daughter & her children to H. S.; (c) the contract could not be enforced, as the appointment of H. S. as a trustee of the will was a breach of trust :—Held : (1) B. & W. had been contracting for a benefit to the daughter & her children, not in the capacity as beneficiaries under the will, but for a benefit for them entirely outside the will; (2) the consideration was the withdrawal of a valid objection to H. S. as trustee; (3) the appointment of a tenant for life as trustee was not a breach of trust. If it were, specific performance should be decreed, because a contract involving an innocent breach of trust is enforceable; (4) H. S. by his conduct

17a. ——.]—Pltf. & the first deft. verbally agreed that the first deft. should take a lease of pltf.'s coal mine & pay pltf. a royalty of threepence per ton free of tax on all coal sold. The terms of this agreement were set out in a memorandum signed by pltf. containing the words " free of tax " in pltf.'s writing. The lease provided that the first deft. should pay the rent therein mentioned & the royalty free of tax. He carried out both provisions until he assigned the lease to deft. co., & he did not pay the income tax on the royalty. The co. continued to pay the royalty free of tax, & also not to pay the income tax thereon, until the Inland Revenue authorities demanded it. It was then paid to date, & the co. deducted the whole of it from the current instalment of royalty, & claimed to be entitled to deduct it rateably from future instalments, on the ground that the provision in the lease for the payment of royalty free of tax was in contravention of the Income Tax Acts. On a claim by pltf. for rectification of the lease by substituting for the provision for the payment of the royalty of threepence free of tax a provision for the payment of a royalty of such an amount as after the deduction of income tax of the standard rate from time to time should leave threepence :—Held : that there was " strong irrefragable evidence " of the parties' intention on executing the lease, & it must be rectified in accordance with pltf.'s claim.—JERVIS v. HOWLE & TALKE COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1937] Ch. 67 ; [1936] 3 All E. 34a. —— ——.]—There is no authority for the proposition that if two parties enter into what is on the face of it a binding contract, in ignorance of their legal rights, each believing the other to be legally bound to enter into such a contract when he is in fact not so bound, the contract so entered into is not enforceable. To hold otherwise would be to decide that a common mistake of law vitiated a contract.

On Feb. 1, 1935, pltf. co. by a formal contract in writing agreed with deft. K. that pltf. co. should have the exclusive right to the services of K. & his band for the purposes of making gramophone records for twelve months. The terms & conditions were set out in the contract. Clause 1 of the contract was in the same terms as those of clause 1 of the contract of Mar. 15, 1934, except that the inapt word " hereinafter " was omitted. When making the contract both K. & the representative of pltf. co. thought that they were legally bound to do so by the terms of clause 1 of the contract of Mar. 15, 1934 :—Held : the contract was enforceable.—BRITISH HOMOPHONE, LTD. v. KUNZ & CRYSTALLATE GRAMOPHONE RECORD MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. Part III.—Mistake of Fact.

58a. ——.]—The L. Co., who held more than 99 per cent. of the share capital of N. Co., agreed with one B. that he should be in the service of L. Co. for a term of years, during which he should act as chairman of the board of directors of N. Co. at a salary of £8,000 a year. They made a similar agreement with one S. that he should be vice-chairman of the board at a salary of £6,000 a year. While acting as chairman & vice-chairman respectively, B. & S. entered on their own account into secret speculations in cocoa, a commodity in which N. Co. dealt, of such a character as, on the finding of the jury in answer to a specific question, would have justified the L. Co. in terminating their agreements of service & N. Co. in dismissing them from their offices of chairman & vice-chairman. Subsequently N. Co. became amalgamated with another co., & it became necessary to cancel the appointments of B. & S. as chairman & vice-chairman. Being unaware of the aforesaid breaches of duty by B. & S., L. Co. agreed to pay to B. £30,000 & to S. £20,000 as compensation for terminating their services; B. & S. agreed to accept these sums, & they were duly paid. The jury, in answer to a further specific question, found that the L. Co. if they had been aware of the breaches of duty by B. & S. would have terminated their agreements, & B. & S. would have been dismissed from their offices without any compensation. The action in which the jury so found was brought in the first instance by the L. Co. alone, N. Co. being joined in the course of the proceedings as co-pltfs., against B. & S., claiming rescission of the compensation agreements & repayment of sums paid thereunder on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, & alternatively, as the House construed the points of claim, on the ground of unilateral mistake induced by fraud, but not on any ground of mutual mistake innocently made by the defts. so far as they were concerned. There was a specific alternative claim that the agreements of settlement & the payments under them were made under a mistake of fact. The jury negatived the charges of fraud, & found that at the time of negotiating the compensation agreements B. & S. had not in mind their breaches of duty:—Held: the action failed; as to mutual mistake, on the ground that the mutual mistake related not to the subject-matter, but to the quality of the service contracts.—BELL v. LEVER BROS., LTD., [1932] A. 53 ii. —— ——.]—Deft. as purchaser signed a contract of sale & purchase of a piece of land, which, in her ignorance, she believed was a contract for the purchase of an option to purchase the land. Deft., however, pleaded that she informed pltf.'s agent that she desired an option only, & that later the agent saw her & said that he had seen pltf. & "fixed it up." She alleged that the contract which was signed was put forward & signed in the belief that it gave effect to an agreement for an option only. The jury found that such belief was not induced by the representations of pltf.'s agent:—Held: as deft. had herself misconstrued the document she was bound by the contract, &, as she had charged fraud & failed, she should not succeed on another ground.—BURROWS v. WINTER (1931), 24 Tas. L. R. 45.—AUS.

54 ii. —— Status of individual.]—Pltf. a sharemilker under agreement with deft. D., met with an accident of which due notice was given & deft. co., D.'s insurer, admitted liability. Some nineteen months after the accident a doctor was able to pronounce that pltf. had suffered a 50 per cent. permanent disability. The co. was then advised that pltf. was not a "worker" within Workers' Compensation Act, 1922. Pltf. claimed compensation in the Arbn. Ct. on the grounds (1) that pltf. was a "worker" within the Act, & (2) that deft. D., through his insurers, had agreed to admit liability & to pay compensation. The judgment of that ct. was that pltf. was not a "worker" within the Act & that being so, the ct. had no jurisdiction to enforce the alleged agreement. Pltf. then brought this action for specific performance of the alleged agreement, or, alternatively, for £1,000 damages for breach of contract. On the evidence set out in the judgment:—Held: giving judgment for defts. there was no consideration in the ordinary sense for the admission & nothing in the nature of a compromise & the admission was made through a mutual mistake of fundamental fact.—DAVIDSON v. ATLAS ASSURANCE CO., LTD. & DAYSH, [1932] N. 84 i. Unilateral mistake.]—Deft. was offered a house described as "No. 6"; he carelessly went & inspected No. 16 in the same street, & then signed an offer for No. 6 believing it to be the house he had inspected. The mistake was deft.'s & was in no way attributable to pltf. or her agent, neither of whom was made aware of the fact that deft. had made the inspection. Deft. knew he had inspected No. 16, & afterwards signed the offer for No. 6 after reading it. In an action by pltf. for specific performance, or, alternatively, for damages:—Held: the case was one of mistake as to the identity of the subject-matter of the contract, but such mistake was purely unilateral, as pltf. was guiltless of such mistake & was unaware until the contract was complete that deft. believed he was buying No. 16. Deft. was accordingly bound by the contract.—WALLACE v. MCGIRR, [1936] N. Z. L. R. 483; G. L. R. 388; 12 N. Z. L. J. 187.—N. Z.

Part IV.—Mistake in Expression of Intention and Relief Therefor.

203a. ——.]—P. & M., who had been partners as garage proprietors, agreed to dissolve the partnership as from Mar. 4, 1929, on the terms, as was found, that M. should take over all liabilities of the firm incurred after Mar. 4. P. informed his father, who was a solr., of the dissolution of the partnership, & the father prepared a written agreement to carry it out. By this document M. was made liable to indemnify P. in respect of all rent due before Mar. 4. This agreement was handed to M., who was asked to read it, & he looked through it & signed it, although he said he could not understand it. On a claim by P. to be indemnified in accordance with the written agreement in respect of rent accrued due before Mar. 4, M. pleaded that he signed the agreement under the belief that it embodied the oral agreement of Mar. 4, that it was drawn up under a mutual mistake of fact, & that the only agreement arrived at was that M. should indemnify P. to the extent agreed upon orally. Fraud was not pleaded, nor was rectification claimed in the pleadings. At the trial the judge found that M. signed the agreement handed to him with practically no consideration of its terms, & that as a stipulation had been inserted therein which he had not orally agreed to, that term could not be relied upon, &, accordingly, that the written agreement must be rectified to make it conform to the oral agreement. P. appealed :—Held : (1) as M. knew that the agreement which he signed was an agreement for the dissolution of the partnership between him & P., it was not open to him, in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation by P. as to the legal effect of the document, to rely on the plea of non est factum merely because if he had carefully read & understood the document he would have objected to one of its terms as not in accordance with the oral agreement ; (2) in the absence of any allegation of fraud or conduct amounting to fraud, & in the absence of any claim for rectification, it was not open to the judge to rectify the written agreement ; (3) there was no evidence of mutual mistake.—BLAY v. POLLARD & MORRIS, [1930] 1 K. 312a. ——.]—In an action for a declaration that, upon the true construction of an agreement under the seals of a district council & a city corpn., for an additional supply of water to the council by the corpn. therein expressed to be "at a pro rata charge as £540 is to 450,000 gallons subject to measurement," the council were entitled to such additional supply at a pro rata charge of £540 "per annum" for 450,000 gallons "per diem" or in the alternative, for rectification of the agreement on the ground of mutual mistake by the insertion therein of the words "per annum" & "per diem" :—Held : the agreement bore the construction which the council claimed to have placed upon it. If that construction were wrong the ct. would, notwithstanding the absence of any antecedent binding contract, rectify the instrument of agreement, so as to give effect to what was proved to have been the concurrent intention of the parties at the moment of executing the same—namely, to contract on the basis of a payment of £540 "per annum" for a supply of 450,000 gallons "per diem" subject to measurement.

The statement in the judgment of JAMES, V.-C. in Mackenzie v. Coulson (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 368, at p. 375 : "It is always necessary for a pltf. to show that there was an actual concluded contract antecedent to the instrument which is sought to be rectified ; & that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument" does not warrant the suggestion that the jurisdiction of the ct. cannot be exercised, even in cases of clear mutual mistake in the attempt to embody in the instrument the concurrent intention of the parties existing at the moment of the execution of the instrument, unless a previously existing contract can be proved.—SHIPLEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. BRADFORD CORPN., [1936] Ch. 375 ; 105 L. The hotel formed part of a building standing on land in the city of Sydney, the property of the lessor. The hotel occupied part of the ground floor & the whole of the first floor of the building, the other part of the ground floor being occupied by a shop leased to another lessee. The council rated the land as an undivided lot & forwarded the rate notices in each of several years to the owner, who in turn sent them to the lessee of the hotel. The lessee paid the rates under the impression that the notices only referred to the land occupied by the hotel. In an action against the council to recover that portion of the rates which he had not covenanted to pay :—Held : the lessee could not recover that part of the rates from the council as it paid the rates voluntarily to the council instead of to the owner of the land, who alone was in legal relationship with the rating authority.—TOOHEY'S, LTD. v. SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL (1936), 13 L. sg. Extent of onus of proof.]—In order to succeed in an action to recover back money paid under a mistake of fact pltf. must prove, not only the mistake of fact which induced him to part with the money, but also that under the particular circumstances the law is able to impute to deft. the fiction of a promise to repay it. 466 i. General rule.]—In a proper case money paid under a mistake of fact may be recovered back. The four conditions of a proper case are : (a) the mistake was an honest one, i.e. there was a genuine bonâ fide belief on the part of the payer of the money that certain facts existed which did not exist ; laches or negligence do not of themselves affect the bona fides of his belief, & means of knowledge will not impute knowledge unless he wilfully abstained from inquiry ; (b) the mistake must have been between the payer & the receiver of the money, i.e. the receiver must have been in some way a party to the mistake, either as inducing it or as responsible for it or connected with it ; (c) the facts as they were believed to be must have imposed an obligation, legal, equitable or moral, to make the payment ; (d) the receiver of the money had no legal, equitable or moral right to retain the money as against the payer.—ROYAL BANK OF CANADA v. R., [1931] 1 W. 484a. —— Mistake of agent.]—Pltf. co., which had its head office at G. & had a district office at N., contracted with defts. for the supply of water to their branch factory at S. The original contract, in 1925, provided for a minimum quarterly payment of £375 by pltfs. In 1927 a new contract was made, under which the quarterly payment was reduced to £100. This contract was negotiated by pltfs.' managing director at G., & by mistake the factory manager at S. was not notified of the new contract, nor was the commercial manager at N. Defts., also by mistake, continued to send out demands at the old rate of £375, which were passed for payment by pltfs.' branch manager at S. & forwarded to the commercial manager at N., who drew cheques which were signed as a mere matter of routine without further inquiry by the managing director on his next visit to N. The error was not discovered until 1936, when pltf. co. sought to recover the amounts overpaid :—Held : (1) the mistake was a mutual mistake of fact, not of law, & pltfs. were primâ facie entitled to recover ; (2) even if the principles on which a co. is held liable for the fraud of an agent apply equally to cases of innocent mistake, the mistake of the factory manager & the commercial manager was the mistake of pltf. co., which could rely on it, & it was immaterial that the managing director of the co. knew of the existence of the second contract, he not being aware that it was not being acted on.—ANGLO-SCOTTISH BEET SUGAR CORPN., LTD. v. SPALDING URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1937] 2 K. 583a. Deduction of tax on sum regarded as interest —Sum dealt with by Inland Revenue as capital.]—Certain claims arose to be settled in connection with the increased burden falling upon pltf. council consequent upon the alteration of the boundaries of the city of Oxford under Oxford Extension Act, 1928. Terms of settlement were recommended to the parties by accountants appointed to negotiate a settlement, & by letter pltfs. stated that they accepted the following settlement : capital sum, £4,100 ; one year's burden in respect of highways, £1,925 ; plus interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from Oct. 1, 1929 [the amount being left blank]. Defts. in reply sent a cheque for £6,759 5*s.* & a receipt for execution under pltf. council's seal. This receipt stated that the sum of £6,759 5*s.* was received " in full satisfaction & discharge of all claims of pltfs. upon defts. in connection with or arising out of the alteration of the boundaries of the city of Oxford under Oxford Extension Act, 1928, as follows : capital sum, £6,025 [the total of the two capital sums above-mentioned]; interest at 5 per cent. per annum from Oct. 1, 1929, to Dec. 31, 1932, £979, less income tax at 5*s.* in the £, £244 15*s.*" The income tax authorities regarded the payments, including the so-called interest portion, as capital sums, & intimated that they would not look to defts. to account for tax in respect of the deductions made. Pltfs. claimed from defts. £244 15*s.*, the sum stated in the receipt to have been deducted in respect of income tax :—Held : as the settlement was expressed to be in full satisfaction & discharge of all claims upon defts., & the contract was not entered into under a mistake as to the present existence of an essential fact recognised by law as the foundation of the contract, the settlement could not be re-opened & pltfs. could not recover the sum claimed.—BULLINGDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. OXFORD CORPN., [1936] 3 All E. 15a. Salary in Turkish pounds—Employment in Cyprus.]—In 1905 resp. became a member of the pensionable staff of a Turkish banking corpn. of which applts. were the Cyprus branch. By the contract then made he was entitled on retiring to a pension based upon his salary in the previous year. His salary was a sum in Turkish pounds. Before the war the Turkish pound was a coin of specified gold content, but in 1915 paper money was issued by the Turkish Govt. & made legal tender in Turkey. Resp., who previously had served in Turkey, was transferred to Cyprus in 1923, & was employed there by the applts. until the end of 1931, when he retired. In Cyprus his salary was paid at the rate of 100 Cyprus pounds per 110 Turkish pounds. That rate was adopted when both England & Turkey were on the gold standard, & was based upon the gold content of the English sovereign, which was interchangeable with the Cyprus pound, & of the Turkish pound. The Cyprus currency had since depreciated in terms of gold:—Held: resp.'s pension was payable in Turkish gold pounds converted into Cyprus currency at the rate of exchange on the day of each payment.—OTTOMAN BANK OF NICOSIA v. DASCALOPOULOS, [1934] A. PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

16 i. Mortgage debt.]—Where a contract provides that the money payable thereunder shall be paid in a foreign country the question as to what currency it is payable in is determined by the intention of the parties as expressed by the terms of the contract. Where by a contract money payable in a foreign currency is made payable at a fixed & definite time, the time so fixed for payment is the date as to which the rate of exchange is to be calculated. Under a mtge. made in Winnipeg on Winnipeg property the mtgor. covenanted to pay the principal on Nov. 1, 1932, "in gold or its equivalent at the office of the mtgee. in the City of Detroit"; & covenanted to pay interest at 7 per cent. per annum by half-yearly payments at the same place "in gold or lawful money of Canada." The mtge. also provided that all interest in arrears should become principal & bear interest at the rate aforesaid:—Held: the mtgee. was entitled to payment of the principal in an amount in Canadian dollars which on Nov. 1, 1932, would have bought the principal amount in United States dollars, but that the clause specifically providing that interest might be payable in lawful money of Canada governed the payment of interest. Moreover the clause which provided that all interest should become principal made the interest principal only for the purpose of bearing interest.—JOHNSON v. PRATT, [1934] 1 W. W. R. 321; 2 D. L. • i. ——.]—Provisional sentence was claimed upon a mtge. bond in which deft. acknowledged her indebtedness to pltfs. in the sum of "two hundred & fifty pounds (£250) sterling, arising from & being the balance of purchase-price & agreed costs in connection with the purchase" of a certain motor car bought by deft. from pltfs. A condition of the bond provided that all payments of interest & principal should be made in "British sterling money" at a particular place in Natal:—Held: as the parties could not have intended, in a transaction which was between South Africans in South Africa concerning such an ordinary article of commerce as a motor vehicle, that the amount to be paid in discharge of such a purely domestic debt should vary with the exchange between South Africa & Great Britain, the word "sterling" in the acknowledgment of debt meant nothing more than standard money, & if deft. could discharge her obligation by a payment in British sterling money, it would have to be equivalent to £250 in South African money, & provisional sentence must therefore be granted, for £250 as prayed.—FISHER, SIMMONS & RODWAY (PTY.), LTD. v. MUNESARI, [1932] N. • ii. ——.]—Pltf. was the holder of debentures issued by deft. municipal corpn. in which it promised to pay "to the holder of this Debenture the sum of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) of lawful money of the Dominion of Canada, or £102 14s. 10d., its sterling equivalent, at the rate of $4.86 2/3 to the one pound sterling, on the 13th day of Nov. 1933, at any branch of the Bank of British North America, either at Victoria, B.C., Toronto, Montreal, the City of New York, U.S.A., or London, England, at the holder's option." On the due date English money was at a premium over Canadian money. On said date pltf. duly presented the debentures for payment at the Bank of Montreal, Victoria, B.C. (the successor to the Bank of British North America) & demanded payment in English money of £102 14s. 8d., or its equivalent in Canadian money at

17a. —— Agreement to pay in sterling in gold coin—Payment in bank notes.]—One F. was the holder of a bond for £100, one of a series of bonds issued in 1928 by a Belgian co. Each bond provided for payment of £100 on Sept. 1, 1963, or at an earlier date in accordance with indorsed conditions, & of interest during the continuance of the security at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum, " in sterling gold coin of the United Kingdom of or equal to the standard of weight & fineness existing on the first day of Sept. 1928," by equal half-yearly payments on every Mar. 1 & Sept. 1 in accordance with coupons attached thereto. One of the indorsed conditions provided that the bond should be construed & the rights of the parties regulated according to the law of England as a contract made & according to the terms thereof to be performed in England. A half-yearly instalment of interest on the bond having fallen due, the co. claimed to pay the nominal sum specified in the coupon in whatever might be legal tender in England at the day of payment in full discharge of their obligation under the bond. Upon an originating summons, F., as pltf., claimed such a sum in sterling as would purchase in the market on the day of payment gold of the weight & fineness contained in the gold coin of the United Kingdom sufficient to discharge the payment if falling due on Sept. 1, 1928 :—Held : pltf. was entitled to a declaration that upon the true construction of the bond he was entitled as the holder thereof to receive from the co. from time to time by way of principal & interest thereunder & on the due dates of payment therefor such a sum in sterling as should represent the gold value of the nominal amount of each respective payment, such gold value to be ascertained in accordance with the standard of weight & fineness existing on Sept. 1, 1928, &, where the nominal amount comprised a fraction of a pound, a sum in sterling representing a corresponding fraction of the gold value, ascertained as aforesaid, of a pound, part of the nominal amount aforesaid.—FEIST v. SOCIÉTÉ INTERCOMMUNALE BELGE D'ÉLECTRICITÉ, [1934] A. 17b. —— —— Payment in gold illegal.]—In 1917 the British Govt. made an offer in New York of 5½ per cent. secured loan convertible gold Notes, the principal & interest of which & of the bonds into which they might be converted were to be payable, without deduction for British taxes, in New York in United States gold coin, or, at the option of the holder, in London, in sterling at the fixed rate of 4·86½ dollars to the pound. The offer was made " subject to the approval by our counsel of necessary formalities." Resps. were the holders of a bond, in exchange for a the rate of exchange on the due date, which demand was refused by the bank, but at the same time the bank offered to pay pltf. £500 in Canadian money in respect of each debenture which in turn pltf. refused. Pltf. thereupon brought an action claiming the said sum in English money or its equivalent at the rate of exchange at the date the writ was issued, but at the trial pltf.'s counsel conceded that, if pltf.'s contentions were upheld, it would be entitled to payment at only the rate of exchange at the due date of the debentures :—Held : pltf. was entitled to only the face value of the debentures in Canadian dollars, i.e., £500 per each debenture. The words " its sterling equivalent " indicate that the amount of English money was to be of the same value as the amount in Canadian dollars & the addition of the words & figures " at the rate of $4.86 2/3 " makes it clearer that the intention was that the English money should be the equivalent of 500 Canadian dollars. The purpose of inserting the latter words was to fix the rate of exchange. No matter in what foreign currency an obligation is payable in Canada, any judgment obtained in our cts. must be for an amount in the currency of this country.—ROYAL TRUST CO. v. OAK BAY CORPN., [1934] 3 W. 1 l. —— Municipal debentures payable in Canadian currency or sterling.]—A provincial statute empowering cities to pass bye-laws for the issue of debentures stated that " The bye-law may provide that the debentures & coupons shall be payable in lawful money of Canada or in sterling money of Great Britain or as to part thereof in one & part thereof in the other of the said moneys of equivalent value, & may be made payable at any place or places in Canada, Great Britain or the United States of America ; the equivalent value of the said moneys shall be the value provided in the Currency Act of Canada ; . . . " :—Held : the power of the cities thereunder was limited to the issue of debentures payable either in lawful money of Canada or sterling money ; &, therefore, payment of certain debentures issued by pltf. city expressed to be payable both as to principal & interest in dollars either in New York or in London could be lawfully made by payment of the specified amount in Canadian currency, converted, when necessary, into the lawful money of the place of payment, notwithstanding that the currency of the place of payment was at a premium over Canadian currency.—SASKATOON CITY v. LONDON & WESTERN TRUSTS CO., LTD., [1933] 2 W. The principal sums secured by the mtges. were expressed in pounds. On May 1, 1931, applt. paid to the credit of resp.'s account with a bank at Rabaul nine hundred Australian one pound notes in full payment of £900 interest falling due under the mtges. on June 30, 1931. At all material times the equivalent of £900 in gold in Rabaul was eleven hundred & seventy-two Australian pound notes :—Held : the provisions of sect. 60H (1) (b) of Commonwealth Bank Act, 1911-1931, applied to the territory of New Guinea &, therefore, the payment of nine hundred Australian one pound notes satisfied the debt of £900 due under the mtges.—JOLLEY v. MAINKA (1934), 49 C. Note, by which the British Govt. promised to pay one thousand dollars on Feb. 1, 1937, either in New York, at the office or agency to be maintained there by them, in gold coin of the United States of the standard of weight & fineness existing in Feb. 1917, or in London in sterling money at the fixed rate of 4·86½ dollars to the pound. The payment was to be made without deduction for any British taxes. In 1933 by a Joint Resolution of the Congress of the United States, which it was admitted had the force of law, it was provided that every provision contained in any obligation which purported to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold or a particular kind of coin or currency, or in an amount in money of the United States measured thereby, was against public policy, & that any such obligation should be discharged upon payment, dollar for dollar, in any coin or currency which at the time of payment was legal tender for public or private debts. On a petition of right by resps. claiming that they were entitled to be paid such a sum in dollars as would equal in value the number of dollars of the standard specified in the bond—namely, of the weight & fineness which was prescribed by the law of the United States existing in Feb. 1917:—Held: (1) a consideration of all the circumstances relating to the offer of the loan—the fact that the Notes were issued in the first instance in the United States, were expressed to be in terms of United States currency, & were to be paid on one option in New York on a value estimated by reference to United States coins—pointed to the law of the United States being the proper law of the contract; (2) the Joint Resolution of Congress had the statutory effect of requiring the bond to be discharged upon payment of dollar for dollar of the nominal amount.—R. v. INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEE FOR PROTECTION OF BONDHOLDERS AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT, [1937] A. 17c. —— ——.]—(1) Defts. issued on Aug. 1, 1884, 6,000 First Mtge. Gold Bonds of like amount, tenor & date. The bonds were secured by a mtge. trust deed & all became due on Aug. 1, 1934. The bonds stated that on that date defts. for value received promised "to pay to the bearer or registered holder thereof £100 sterling gold coin of Great Britain of the present standard of weight & fineness at its agency in London, England, with interest thereon" at 5 per cent. per annum payable in London or at the holder's option at deft.'s office in New Brunswick. The interest coupon stated that the co. would pay the bearer £2 10*s.* sterling at its agency in London, England, or at its office in New Brunswick on Aug. 1, 1934. Pltfs., holders of 992 such bonds, claimed in respect of each bond the sum in sterling calculated on Aug. 1, 1934, then representing the gold value of £100 on Aug. 1, 1884:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to be paid on such gold basis, but only £100 sterling; because upon the true construction of the bond, & the question was purely one of construction, the contract was not one for a payment of gold in specie, but one for the repayment of £100 sterling. The interest was similarly payable in sterling.

(2) In an action between the same parties upon one of the said bonds pltfs. obtained judgment on Nov. 7, 1934, upon the gold basis now claimed, the present defts. not having put in any defence to that action. The statement of claim in that action did not allege that all the bonds were identical in their terms:—Held: there was no estoppel by record, because each bond was a distinct contract &, further, the record of the previous action did not show that all the bonds were in the same terms.—BRITISH & FRENCH TRUST CORPN. v. NEW BRUNSWICK RY. —— Debenture payable in London or New Zealand.]—Resps. were the holders of a number of debenture bonds in denominations of £100, dated 1920, & the interest coupons outstanding under them, which were issued by the Auckland, New Zealand, Corpn. under the Local Bodies Loans Act, 1913, & sect. 26 of Appropriation Act, 1915, in payment for the purchase by the Corpn. from a private undertaking of the City's tramway system. The debentures & the interest thereon, at the rate of 5¼ per cent. per annum, were payable at the holder's option either in Auckland, New Zealand, or in London. The currency of New Zealand having become depreciated resps. exercised their option to be paid in London, &, having been there offered payment of the equivalent in sterling of the nominal amount in New Zealand currency, they claimed a declaration that they were entitled to be paid in sterling—in the currency of England—both as to principal & interest, without any deduction for exchange:—Held: that there being a common unit of account, the pound, in England & New Zealand, the mode of performance of the contract must be governed by the law of the place of performance, & accordingly the debt must be discharged by payment in the currency of the place of payment. Provided, therefore, that the bearer exercised his option to be paid in London, the interest coupons were payable in English currency without any allowance for exchange, as also were the debentures when they fell due. The Local Bodies Loans Act, 1913, which contained a code regulating the conditions & the procedure under which a local authority in New Zealand were entitled to borrow money for public purposes, did not take the present case out of the ruling in the Adelaide case, No. 17i, post. The word "pound" contemplated & authorised by that Act meant the common unit of account current in Great Britain & in various parts of the British Empire, & the currency which it connoted in the case of any particular loan would be determined by the place, whether within or outside New Zealand, stipulated as the place of payment in the debenture.—AUCKLAND CORPN. v. ALLIANCE ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1937] A. 17e. Bill payable abroad—Sum in sterling—Of "value cheque on London."]—Resp., a British subject residing in Manchester, was in the habit of consigning Manchester goods to customers in Beyrout. The course of business was for him to draw a bill at sight on the customers for the amount in sterling, representing the cost of the goods & commission, & to hand it, with the bills of lading & invoices, to the Manchester branch of applts., a bank incorporated in Turkey. The Manchester branch then made an advance to him on the bill, & sent the documents to their Beyrout branch, who collected the price from the customer in exchange for the goods. On the Manchester branch being advised by the Beyrout branch that the price had been paid, a cheque for the sterling value of the goods, less any advance made, was handed to resp. In accordance with this practice resp. consigned to Beyrout goods which arrived there shortly before the outbreak of war, on Nov. 5, 1914, between this country & Turkey, on which date applts. held the bills & the documents representing the goods. The bills were in the following form: "Please pay to our order value cheque on London the sum of £ sterling. Shipping documents attached to be given up on payment." After the outbreak of war the Beyrout branch of applts. delivered the goods to the customers, taking payment in piastres of a sum fixed by the Beyrout branch as the price of sterling in London, & on the conclusion of the war, the piastres having fallen in value, the applts. claimed that they were only liable to pay the resp. an amount in sterling which at the then current rate of exchange represented the value of the piastres they had received for the goods. Resps. sued applts. to recover the sterling amount of the bills, or, alternatively, damages for the conversion of the goods:—Held: the words "value cheque on London" meant that the payment, which would ordinarily be in Turkish currency, must be so calculated on the exchange of the day as to represent the price of a cheque on London for the amount of the bill.—OTTOMAN BANK v. JEBARA, [1928] A. In 1930 he demanded repayment of the balance of his account in gold, but the bank refused to pay otherwise than in the paper piastres which were then the currency at Smyrna. In an action against the bank to recover the value of the the balance on a gold basis with compound interest evidence was given that by decisions of the Turkish Cts., even if the original contract was to repay in gold, the debt could, in consequence of certain decrees, be satisfied by payment in paper:—Held: that in these circumstances pltf.'s claim failed—KRICORIAN v. OTTOMAN BANK (1932), 48 T. 17h. Insurance policy—Application of Treaty of Lausanne.]—In 1909 an insurance co., whose principal place of business at all times material was at Trieste, issued a policy to a man & his wife, Ottoman subjects domiciled in Palestine, agreeing that upon the death of either the co. would pay 10,000 gold francs to the survivor. Trieste was Austrian territory in 1909, but in 1920 it became Italian territory under the Treaty of St. Germain. The Treaty of Lausanne made between the allied powers, including Italy, & the Ottoman Empire was signed on July 24, 1923, & became part of the municipal law of Palestine in 1924. The Treaty, as translated, provided that "life assurance policies contracted in currencies other than Turkish pounds, entered into before Oct. 29. 1914, between cos. possessing at this date [actuellement] the nationality of an allied power & Turkish nationals" should be settled, if the amount was stipulated in gold francs, by paying French francs for the period before Nov. 18, 1915, & Turkish paper pounds for the period after that date. The wife having died in 1925, the husband claimed 10,000 gold francs under the policy. The co. was willing to pay 10,000 francs at the then rate of exchange in Paris; that was more favourable to the assured than payment in Turkish pounds:—Held: the provision of the Treaty of Lausanne applied, as the co. was of Italian nationality at the date of the Treaty, & consequently the assured was not entitled to payment in gold francs.—ASSICURAZIONI GENERALI v. SELIM COTRAN, [1932] A. 17i. Dividends of Australian company payable in England.]—The A. E. Co. was an English co. incorporated under Cos. Acts, 1869 to 1909, as a co. limited by shares & having its registered office in London & a branch office in Adelaide, South Australia, where it carried on its business of supplying electric light. The capital of the co. included certain 5 per cent. A cumulative preference shares (A shares) & certain 6½ per cent. C cumulative preference shares (C shares). On June 1, 1925, & thenceforward the P. Co. was & remained registered in England as the holder of A shares which had been issued in England in 1919. In 1924 & 1928 the same co. was registered as the holder of C shares which had been offered for subscription concurrently in England & Australia.

In 1921 by special resolutions duly passed & confirmed the whole conduct & control of the A. E. Co.'s business, except formalities required by statute to be observed in England, were transferred to Australia, & it was provided that all dividends should be declared at general meetings to be held in Australasia & should be paid in & from Adelaide or elsewhere in Australasia, & that all preference dividends declared by the board of directors should be declared at meetings to be held in Australasia & should be paid in & from Adelaide or elsewhere in Australasia, & that no part of the profits of the co. should be transmitted to the United Kingdom except in payment of dividend to members ordinarily resident there. In 1929 the A & C shares were converted respectively into A stock & C stock. On & since Mar. 1, 1931, the A. E. Co. paid dividends on its stock by delivering to the stockholders warrants payable at the Bank of Adelaide, South Australia. The P. Co. claimed a declaration that they & all other holders of A stock & C stock registered in the A. E. Co.'s register in England were entitled to be paid their dividends in sterling in England in English legal tender for the full nominal amount thereof & not subject to deduction for Australian exchange, & to an order for payment accordingly less the amount already received in respect of the dividends :—Held : inasmuch as the dividends were by agreement between the parties to be paid in Australia, the A. 30a. Voluntary undertaking to pay money—Legacy of sum payable under undertaking.]—In 1911, S., a German subject living in England, executed in Germany, together with his brothers & sisters, a document which recorded their intention to make gifts to certain members of the next generation of the family. S. undertook inter alia to give to E. B. S. on attaining the age of twenty-five, or marrying under that age, 100,000 marks. In June, 1922, being then a naturalised British subject domiciled in England, S. made his will & directed his trustees to fulfil his obligations under the document of 1911. S. died in Oct. 1922, & E. B. S. attained the age of twenty-five in 1934. Upon a summons taken out to determine the validity of the document of 1911 & what, if any, sum should be paid to E. B. S., either under that document or under the will of S. :—Held : the document of 1911 was merely a record of intention & not a deed of family arrangement & was not enforceable in a German ct. ; the legacy under the will was one not of 100,000 marks, but of such sum as would give to E. B. S. a sum which S. would have had to give her if there had been an enforceable obligation under the document of 1911 ; the German ct., acting according to German law, if it had to value the obligation treated as a binding obligation, would have put the figure at approximately £5,000, & E. The rights of the parties were subsequently, in 1905, the subject of a compromise approved by the German ct., under which, so far as is material to this case, the female pltf. was to receive an annuity of 8,000 marks. In 1926 the trustees, in pursuance of a decision of the Ct. of Appeal in England, appropriated £8,489 14*s.* 11*d.* 5 per cent. War Loan in respect of this annuity. Deft. contended that the female pltf. was entitled to only the produce of this War Loan—which had been converted into 3½ per cent. stock—& the female pltf. contended that she was entitled at the present time to receive 8,000 reichsmarks :—Held : (1) the female pltf. was not restricted to the actual sum produced by the appropriated investment ; (2) she was not entitled to 8,000 reichsmarks, but to such a sum as a German ct. would award having regard to the original liability & to all the circumstances of the case, in this case found to be £500 per annum, payable in reichsmarks at the rate of exchange on the dates of payment ; (3) the assessment of such a sum was not an exercise of the discretion of the ct. which could be made by a German ct. only, but a question of fact, which could be determined by the ct. in England.—KORNATZKI v. OPPENHEIMER, [1937] 4 All E. The principal sums secured by the mtges. were expressed in pounds. On May 1, 1931, applt. paid to the credit of resp.'s account with a bank at Rabaul nine hundred Australian one pound notes in full payment of £900 interest falling due under the mtges. on June 30, 1931. valid payment, even against the will of the creditor, by depositing the amount owed in a Chilean bank in the name of the creditor, &, the exchange value of the peso having fallen heavily, defts. deposited in a bank at Valparaiso 80,000 pesos in pltfs.' name, an amount which defts. alleged was more than sufficient to cover the whole claim with interest at 6 per cent. On pltfs.' application for a day to be fixed for the hearing of the reference, defts., on the ground that the claim had been paid in full, moved to have the action dismissed & the bail discharged. LANGTON, J., held that so far as the payment related to the claim in pesos it was a good discharge, but having regard to the fall in the exchange it was not necessarily a good discharge for the items of the claim in other currencies, & that so far as they were concerned there must be a reference to the registrar to report whether the amount deposited in pesos was in fact sufficient to cover these items with interest. Both parties filed notice of appeal. Before the appeal was heard, however, pltfs. accepted a sum tendered in respect of the small items in currencies other than the Chilean pesos, & the appeal was confined to the question whether the payment in Chile of the 80,000 pesos in respect of repairs & demurrage was a good discharge:—Held: on the evidence there was no final decision by the Chilean cts. that the payment in depreciated pesos was sufficient, while proceedings were still pending in the English ct.; accordingly the reference must proceed, & the registrar must treat the payment in Chile as a payment on account of the sums expended & lost in pesos in respect of the repairs & demurrage, & ascertain, in accordance with the decision in The Volturno, No. 55, the amount due to pltfs. by converting the sums so expended & lost into sterling at the rate of exchange prevailing at the time the pesos were paid or lost.—THE BAARN, [1933] P. 251; 102 L. 61a. Debentures of Australian company—Option for payment in Australia or London—Payment in London.]—In Oct. 1920, an Australian co. incorporated in Victoria, & having also a registered office in London, England, issued mtge. debentures secured by a trust deed. By each of the debentures the co. covenanted to pay the principal moneys on Oct. 1, 1940, or such earlier date as they should become payable in accordance with the conditions indorsed thereon, & in the meantime to pay interest thereon at 7 per cent. per annum in accordance with the coupons annexed thereto. Under the conditions both principal & interest were payable in either Australia or London, at the holder's option. In accordance with a supplemental trust deed dated Sept. 1, 1921, an additional register of debentures was established in London, & the co. had power to make provision for (inter alia) transfer of registration from one register to the other. At the date of the last drawing of debentures for redemption before this summons—namely, Oct. 7, 1931, over 6,000 debentures were outstanding, of which 137 were on the London register:—Held: on the true construction of the debentures & of the annexed coupons there was no implied stipulation that, in the event of a debenture holder exercising his option to be paid in London, the co. could be required to pay the principal moneys & interest thereby secured in sterling & not in Australian currency. Therefore, the appeal must be allowed, & there must be a declaration that the sums payable by the co. in London in redemption of, & for interest on, the debentures in question ought in all cases to be paid in Australian currency converted into sterling at the rate of exchange current in London on the due date for payment thereof.—BROKEN HILL PROPRIETARY CO., LTD. v. LATHAM, [1933] Ch. 373; 102 L. 353a. Note or memorandum signed by borrower—Contract contemplating security—Whether contract must set out terms of security.]—Money-lenders brought an action against a borrower to recover sums of £200, £100, & £100 lent by them to the borrower & alleged to be due upon three promissory notes payable at a specified address, the first in fourteen monthly instalments with interest at 60 per cent. per annum, & the others in three months after their respective dates with interest at 80 per cent. per annum until payment. If default were made the whole unpaid principal & interest thereon became due & was to carry interest in the case of the first sum at 60 per cent. per annum & in the case of the other two sums at 80 per cent. per annum from the date of default until payment. In intended compliance with Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, in each case before the money was lent there was made & signed by the borrower a note or memorandum of the contract stating that the sum referred to therein was advanced on the security of a promissory note, but not stating where repayment of the sum was to be made. Copies of the notes or memoranda were duly delivered to the borrower:—Held: (1) the note or memorandum in each case was sufficient. The ct., without deciding the point, inclined to the view that the terms of a security given for repayment of a loan need not be set out in the note or memorandum of the contract, at any rate where the security does not impose terms more onerous than those stated in the note or memorandum.

(2) Where the interest charged exceeds the rate mentioned, Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 10 (1), imposes on the money-lender the burden of showing that the interest is not excessive & that the transaction of loan is not harsh or unconscionable; & in the circumstances pltfs. had in each case discharged themselves of this burden.—READING TRUST, LTD v. SPERO, SPERO v. READING TRUST, LTD., [1930] 1 K. 353b. —— —— Substituted contract in settlement of action to recover loan.]—The male deft. borrowed, by promissory note, money from pltfs., a firm of money-lenders, & agreed to repay the same by monthly instalments. In this transaction the requirements of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, were duly complied with. The borrower made default in paying the instalments, whereupon pltfs. issued a writ to recover the amount. Negotiations then took place, & in the result an arrangement was made by which the male deft. & the second deft., his wife, gave pltfs. a joint & several promissory note in respect of the amount unpaid on the first promissory note, an amount for interest, & certain agreed costs. A memorandum of this contract was signed by both defts., but no copy was sent to them within seven days, as required by sect. 6. The amount of the promissory note not having been repaid on the due date, pltfs. sued defts. to recover the same:—Held: (1) although the contract sued on was a substituted agreement for, or a variation of, the original contract entered into by the male deft., it was nevertheless a contract "for the repayment by a borrower of money lent to him" within sect. 6; (2) as a copy of the contract had not been sent as required by that sect., the contract was unenforceable against the male deft.; (3) it was likewise unenforceable against the female deft., inasmuch as it appeared that she signed the promissory note solely as a surety, & the male deft. not being liable she also was discharged from liability.—ELDRIDGE & MORRIS v. TAYLOR, [1931] 2 K. 353d. —— —— —— Post-dated cheques.]—A lady of no business experience borrowed money from money-lenders, & in respect of the loan gave them a promissory note payable by instalments & post-dated cheques in respect of the instalments. The cheques were handed over with the note before the transaction was completed. The interest secured by the notes was 81·23 per cent., & the money-lender knew the borrower was a lady of some means but made no further inquiry on the matter:—Held: (1) the handing over of the cheques formed a term of the contract & must be mentioned in the memorandum of the contract of loan given in accordance with the provisions of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6. As they were not referred to therein, the loan was unenforceable by the money-lender; (2) the transaction was harsh & unconscionable within sect. 10 of the Act & the interest must be reduced to 25 per cent.—COLLINGS v. CHARLES BRADBURY, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 353k. —— Rate of interest incorrectly stated.]—Pltfs., who were registered money-lenders, agreed to lend a borrower the sum of £500 in consideration of the additional sum of £150, the whole sum of £650 to be repaid by two instalments of £325 each paid at the end of the first & second months. In the memorandum of the contract dated May 25, 1933, the loan was stated to be payable with interest at the rate of £240 per cent. per annum & to be made upon the terms of a promissory note of the same date, a copy of which was attached. The promissory note contained a promise to pay £500 together with interest at the rate of £240 per cent. per annum " such sum of £500 to be paid together with interest then due by consecutive monthly instalments of £325 each " on June 25 & July 25, 1933 :—Held : the rate of interest was incorrectly stated in the memorandum & therefore the contract was unenforceable. Having regard to the form of the memorandum the rate of interest could not be treated as having been calculated in accordance with the provisions in Sched. I. to Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), & in order that the instalments should include interest at £240 per cent. per annum the second instalment must have been £330 & not £325.

Per SLESSER and ROMER, L.JJ. : In a case where the rate of interest stated in the memorandum has been calculated in accordance with the provisions of Sched. I. to the Act, this fact must be stated in the memorandum in order to comply with sect. 6 of the Act.—PARKFIELD TRUST, LTD. v. CURTIS, [1934] 1 K. B. 685 ; 103 L. J. K. B. 609 ; 150 L. T. 486, C. 353l. —— ——.]—A borrower, who had had several loan transactions with a firm of registered money-lenders, was adjudicated bkpt. in July, 1933, & the money-lenders proved in that bkpcy. for £257 in respect of [illegible] & interest but received no dividend in respect thereof. In May, 1934, the borrower applied to the money-lenders for a loan of £100, &, on the money-lenders refusing to make the loan, offered that £50 out of the £100 advance should be retained by the money-lenders to compensate them in part for the loss they sustained in his bkpcy. The money-lenders thereupon made the loan, two cheques for £50 each being made out by the money-lenders, one of which was endorsed by the borrower & returned to the money-lenders. The memorandum & promissory note, which were signed by the borrower, stated that an advance of £100 had been made with interest at the rate of £64 per cent. per annum to be repaid by fourteen consecutive monthly instalments of £10 each. In the default clause in the memorandum the principal sum was stated to be £140, but the typist who typed the document said in an affidavit that she typed £140 by mistake & that the sum ought to have been £100. The money-lenders brought an action on the promissory note on a failure by the borrower to pay more than one monthly instalment :—Held : the memorandum did not contain all the terms of the contract, inasmuch as the amount actually lent was only £50, & therefore the amount of the principal of the loan was not correctly stated according to the definition of " principal " in Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 15 ; the sum of £50, given by the borrower or retained by the money-lenders, was an amount in excess of the principal, paid to the money-lender in consideration of the loan, & was therefore " interest " within the definition of " interest " in sect. 15, & accordingly that the interest charged on the loan was not truly stated in the memorandum, & therefore the contract for the repayment of the money lent to the borrower by the money-lenders was, under sect. 6 (1) of the Act of 1927, unenforceable.

Per SLESSER & ROCHE, L.JJ., the insertion in the default clause of the memorandum of £140 instead of £100 was a material error which would invalidate the transaction.—DUNN TRUST, LTD. v. FEETHAM, [1936] 1 K. B. 22 ; 105 L. J. K. B. 52 ; 154 L. T. 53, C. A.

353m. —— ——.]—In each of two money-lending transactions secured by a promissory note for payment of £70 by fourteen monthly instalments the memorandum of the contract stated that " the amount of principal being advanced in respect of the said promissory note for £70 is £50, & the interest charged of £20 is equivalent to interest at the rate of £64 per cent. per annum." The rate of interest was in fact calculated in accordance with the provisions of Sched. I. to Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21). After default had been made in payment of instalments the assignees for value of the promissory notes, who were also money-lenders, brought proceedings to recover the balance of principal & interest :—Held : the contracts & promissory notes were unenforceable having regard to sect. 6 (2) of the Act, because the memorandum failed to state that the rate of interest was calculated in accordance with the provisions of Sched. Although the borrower does not appear to the writ, or does not further defend the action, the onus is still on pltf. money-lender to satisfy the ct. on these two points. He must therefore prove a transaction which comes within Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, & consequently he must prove a note or memorandum of the contract made in accordance with that sect.

(2) Such a note or memorandum is a memorandum of a contract within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 1 & Sched. I. to that Act, & therefore must be stamped with a 6*d*. stamp.—PARKFIELD TRUST, LTD. v. DENT, [1931] 2 K. B. 579; 101 L. J. K. B. 6; 146 L. T. 90.

353u. —— Renewal—Must appear on second memorandum.]—When the time for payment of an original loan granted by a money-lender has expired without complete repayment, there is no objection to extending the time for repayment on altered terms by treating the old loan as paid off by means of a new loan on the altered terms, provided that the fact that this is being done is shown on the face of the second memorandum signed by the borrower before the new security is given. Such a memorandum is signed by the borrower before the money is lent within the meaning of sect. 6 (1) of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (1).

At the time when the second memorandum is signed neither a cheque nor cash need be handed over by the money-lender to the borrower & then returned. 353v. —— —— ——.]—(1) Every contract between a money-lender & a borrower for the repayment by the latter of money lent to him, & that includes a promise by the borrower to pay the balance of money previously lent to him, is brought within the purview of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6. Where a transaction is the renewal of an old loan, the fact that it is such ought be set out in the memorandum in order to comply with sect. 6.

(2) If the transaction between a money-lender & a borrower is unenforceable against the borrower by reason of non-compliance by the money-lender with the requirements of sect. 6, for example, by the omission from the memorandum of the date on which the loan was made, it is equally unenforceable against a person who has guaranteed the payment of the debt.

(3) A security "given by the borrower" within sect. 6 of the Act of 1927 may take the form of a guarantee given by a third party.

(4) Gaskell, Ltd. v. Askwith, No. 353h, ante, did not decide that a mere clerical error in the memorandum required by sect. 6 will invalidate the memorandum; & it must not be taken that a mere clerical error will have that effect (SCRUTTON, L.J.).

353w. —— Real transaction must be stated.]—Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: The memorandum of the transaction of Aug. 5, 1931, was void because it did not state the real transaction. It contained an admission by the mother that £575 was then due & owing by her, whereas at that date nothing was due, & if it were assumed that the principal & pro rata interest were then to be paid, the amount payable would only be £535, & there would be a bonus to the money-lenders of about £40 for accepting payment before it was due, which ought to have been stated on the face of the memorandum, but was not. In effect the money-lender was obtaining interest on interest, which was prohibited under Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 7.—LANCASHIRE LOANS, LTD. v. BLACK, [1934] 1 K. B. 380; 103 L. J. K. 353x. —— Loan on security of bill of sale—Number of instalments payable not stated in memorandum.]—A loan was made by registered money-lenders on the security of a bill of sale given by the borrower on his furniture. The transaction was a money-lending transaction within the meaning of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21). The memorandum of the transaction stated the date of the loan, the amount of the principal advanced & the rate of interest charged. The bill of sale, which was in the form required by Sched. to Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882 (c. 43), was also set out verbatim in the memorandum. Under the bill of sale the borrower agreed to pay to the lenders the principal sum advanced together with the interest then due by equal monthly payments of £3 to be paid on a specified date of each month until the whole amount including principal & interest was repaid. Neither the bill of sale nor the memorandum stated the number of instalments that had to be paid. Objection was taken that the contract was unenforceable, as the memorandum did not contain all the terms of the contract because the number of instalments payable had not been stated therein:—Held: the contract was enforceable, as the memorandum set out the particulars specifically required by Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (2), & also set out verbatim the bill of sale, which was in the statutory form, & accordingly contained all the terms of the contract. What had not been set out was the effect of those terms according to the decisions of the cts. in various cases, but the statute did not require that to be set out in the memorandum.—SIMMONS v. RUSSELL FINANCIERS, LTD., [1934] 2 K. 353bb. —— Appropriation of payments to—After default—Whether compound interest.]—A borrower was in debt to a money-lender in the sum of £301 19*s.* 10*d.* On June 14, 1935, he received a further sum that made his total indebtedness £500. The memorandum stated that the principal sum was to be applied in discharge of the previous advance. It also stated that the interest upon the sum of £500 was to be £200, & was at the rate of 34·65 per cent. per annum. The repayment was to be made in equal instalments, which were appropriated to principal & interest in proportions other than that of the principal to the total interest. If an instalment was more than seven days overdue, the whole balance of the principal was then to become due with interest to date. The memorandum then stated: "the principal sum outstanding in the schedule of repayments shall become immediately repayable, together with the instalment of interest due as shown in the schedule aforesaid, together with simple interest at the rate per cent. per annum aforesaid on the sum payable (whether for principal or interest) until payment, & such interest shall not be reckoned as part of the interest charged in respect of the loan." In accordance with this clause pltfs. took the amount of principal & interest due at the date of default, namely £451 2*s.* 10*d.*, & charged interest thereon until the date of the first payment on account. Such interest amounted to £173 0*s.* 5*d.* The payment then made of £169 9*s.* 7*d.* was appropriated to interest, leaving the principal sum of £451 2*s.* 10*d.* still due & a balance of £3 10*s.* 10*d.* of interest still due. Further interest was afterwards charged on the principal sum of £451 2*s.* 10*d.*:—Held: (1) the loan was one at an actual rate of interest, & the provisions of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 15 (2), which required instalments to be allocated to principal & interest in the proportion of the principal to the total interest, did not apply; (2) the memorandum sufficiently showed that nature of the transaction in respect of the past loan; (3) the appropriation of payments after default to interest did not amount to a charge of interest upon interest contrary to the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 7.—MUTUAL LOAN FUND ASSOCN., LTD. v. SANDERSON, [1937] 1 All E. 377a. Before proceedings taken by money-lender for recovery of money lent.]—(1) A county ct. has jurisdiction under Money-lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), s. 1 (2), to entertain an application by a borrower from a registered money-lender to reopen a money-lending transaction, only when the amount of the money lent, whether repayable by instalments or otherwise, without the addition of any claims arising under any agreement to pay interest or an amount charged for "expenses, inquiries, fines, bonus, premium, renewals, or any other charges," is within the jurisdiction of the county ct.

(2) If this condition is fulfilled, the ct. may entertain the application, although the money-lender has not taken any proceedings to recover the money lent, & although the time has not come for taking such proceedings.—CROSSINGHAM v. PARK, [1928] 1 K. 381a. —— —— ——.]—(1) Held: in Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 5 (3), the words "no person shall act as such agent or canvasser" must be construed as meaning

" no person shall act as an agent or canvasser employed by a money-lender or any person on his behalf for the purpose of inviting any person to borrow money or to enter into any transaction involving the borrowing of money from a money-lender." The Act does not, therefore, prohibit canvassing or touting for this purpose, where the canvasser acts without the authority or mandate of the money-lender to whom he is introducing a customer.

(2) Although a rate of interest on a loan not exceeding 48 per cent. does not carry the legal presumption introduced by sect. 10 of the Act that the transaction is harsh & unconscionable; yet, where in addition to his contract for repayment of the loan the borrower gives a bill of sale over his furniture of ample security for such repayment, a rate of 48 per cent. is, in such circumstances, so excessive as to render the transaction harsh & unconscionable for the purposes of Money-lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), s. 1.—VERNER-JEFFREYS v. PINTO, [1929] 1 Ch. 401; 98 L. sl. Although security unenforceable.]—By a mtge. bond resp. mtged. certain property therein specified as security for the repayment of sums of money lent to him by appts. upon certain promissory notes. The promissory notes admittedly did not comply with the provisions of sect. 10 (1) of the Ceylon Money-lending Ordinance, 1918, inasmuch as they did not state the "interest, premium, or charges" deducted or paid in advance, & they were consequently unenforceable under sub-sect. (2) of sect. 10 of the Ordinance. It was further admitted that the default was not due to inadvertence, & that the promissory notes must be taken to be fictitious to the knowledge of the lender within the meaning of sect. 14 of the Ordinance. On a claim by appts. to recover the sums lent on the security of the bond & upon the promissory notes :—Held : although the promissory notes were notes in which the amounts stated as due were to the knowledge of the lender fictitious within the meaning of sect. 14 of the Ordinance, & could not be enforced by reason of the provisions of sect. 10, the trial judge had jurisdiction under sect. 2 of the Ordinance to re-open the transactions & to take an account between the lender & the person sued. The provisions of sect. 13 of the Ordinance, which make the taker of a fictitious promissory note liable to a penalty, do not prevent the ct. from re-opening the transaction & taking the account under the provisions of sect. 2. Where, however, the trial judge exercises his discretion & re-opens the transaction & takes the account, the unenforceable promissory notes must not be admitted in evidence to prove the loans.—SOCKALINGHAM CHETTIAR v. RAMANAYAKE, [1937] A. 20a. Distinguishes mortgage for sale.]—In a transaction of sale the vendor is not entitled to get back the subject-matter of the sale by returning to the purchaser the money that has passed between them. In the case of a mtge. or charge, the mtgor. is entitled, until he has been foreclosed, to get back the subject-matter of the mtge. or charge by returning to the mtgee. the money that has passed between them. The second essential difference is that if the mtgee. realises the subject-matter of the mtge. for a sum more than sufficient to repay him, with interest & the costs, the money that has passed between him & the mtgor. he has to account to the mtgor. for the surplus. If the purchaser sells the subject-matter of the purchase, & realises a profit, of course he has not got to account to the vendor for the profit. Thirdly, if the mtgee. realises the mtge. property for a sum that is insufficient to repay him the money that he has paid to the mtgor., together with interest & costs, then the mtgee. is entitled to recover from the mtgor. the balance of the money, either because there is a covenant by the mtgor. to repay the money advanced by the mtgee., or because of the existence of the simple contract debt which is created by the mere fact of the advance having been made. If the purchaser were to resell the purchased property at a price which was insufficient to recoup him the money that he paid to the vendor, of course he would not be entitled to recover the balance from the vendor (ROMER, L.J.).—Re GEORGE INGLEFIELD, LTD., [1933] Ch. 1, 27; 101 L. A distinction has been made, by the Ct. of Chancery, between contracts originally founded upon lending & borrowing money, with an agreement for a purchase in a certain event; & cases, where after a mtge. a new agreement hath been entered into & executed by the parties for an absolute purchase; although there be a subsequent declaration, that the mtgor. may have his estate upon payment of interest, principal, & costs; or where a release of the equity of redemption is given, with a collateral agreement to re-convey upon re-payment of the purchase-money; & in the latter cases it hath been determined that no re-purchase shall be allowed, unless upon strict performance of the conditions stipulated.—ENSWORTH v. GRIFFITHS (1706), 5 Bro. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

o i. ——.]—Under Act Respecting Homesteads, s. 2, the registrar cannot register a mtge. of homestead land if the same is not signed by mtgor.'s wife, although in a paper attached to the mtge. she purports to have relinquished her homestead rights in favour of mtgee.—Re LAND TITLES ACT, [1919] 1 W. W. R. 711.—CAN.

o ii. —— & acknowledgment.]—A mtge. by a husband of his homestead was in fact consented to by his wife of her own free will & knowing what it was. To it was attached her written consent & a certificate by a comr. of her acknowledgment of execution of it of her own free will, etc. Being on its face in compliance with the Dower Act, 1917, it was registered. The facts, however, were that the wife had not made before the comr. the acknowledgment to which he certified. The husband had participated in this breach of the statute in order, apparently, to save his wife, who was in ill-health, the inconvenience of going from the farm to the comr.'s office :—Held : since the wife's consent was not evidenced in the manner prescribed by the statute, the mtge. was, in this sense, not made with her consent, & was null & void as against her dower right; there were no grounds for holding her estopped. But since the husband by his conduct had induced the mtgee. to believe that his wife's consent had been properly & regularly given & the mtgee. had on the strength of this belief parted with the property for the payment of which the mtge. was security, the husband was estopped from setting up her lack of effective consent as a defence to an action on the mtge. Moreover, he was, in any event, personally liable on the covenant.—PARSLOW v. MOORE, [1930] 2 W. W. R. 340; 4 D. L. R. 750.—CAN.

The mtgor., after the date of the mtge., moved on to the land two wooden granaries which were built on skids & were moved about the land as the farming operations required. The mtgor. defaulted & gave the mtgee. a quit-claim deed & the latter sold the land to deft., who took possession of the granaries & moved them on to other lands. The mtgor. sued for their value, & his action was dismissed. On appeal:—Held: even if the granaries retained their character of chattels, they had become part of the mtge. security by virtue of the word "buildings" in the clause above quoted, & since it was the intention of the quit-claim deed that the mtgee. should have all its security the deed divested the mtgor. of any interest he had in the granaries.—HERRIOTT v. CRONIN, [1935] 1 W. The trust deed also contained a capitalisation clause, the effect of which was that if any interest should be in arrear for a period of six months, it should be added to the principal sum due under the debenture, & treated as principal money for all purposes. The debentures were expressed to become payable on Jan. 11, 1938. The mtgor. claimed that stamp duty was payable not on a limited sum, but as on an amount "uncertain or without limit":—Held: the amount which the trust deed was intended to secure was a sum readily ascertainable by arithmetical calculation, &, therefore, was not "without any limit" within Sched. 1 of Stamp Duties Act, 1882, & that duty should be paid in respect of £100,000. — CASCADE BREWERY CO., LTD. v. A COLLECTOR OF STAMP DUTIES (1929), 23 Tas. The mtgor. defaulted & the mtgees. served on him a notice to quit. By a tenancy agreement dated Oct. 8, 1935, defts. granted a lease of part of certain premises included in the legal charge, from Sept. 29, 1935, upon a yearly tenancy. Pltfs. were not asked for & did not give their consent to the execution by defts. of the tenancy agreement & no counterpart thereof had at any time been delivered to pltfs. in accordance with the requirements of sect. 99 (11) of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20):—Held: defts., in granting the lease of Oct. 8, were not exercising their statutory power, & consequently they did not commit any breach of the covenant contained in the legal charge of Oct. 1.—IRON TRADES EMPLOYERS INSURANCE ASSOCN., LTD. v. UNION LAND & HOUSE INVESTORS, LTD., [1937] Ch. 313; [1937] 1 All E. The mtgor. effected great improvements on the mtged. premises which might increase the rateable value of the premises. The mtgee. claimed that the improvements & the covenant had rendered the rent under the lease not the best rent reasonably obtainable in the circumstances, & the lease was void under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 99:—Held: in the absence of any covenant by the landlord to effect improvements which might increase the rateable value of the property or of any actual increase of the rateable value the covenant to pay the rates, though unusual in the case of a lease for a long term, was not sufficient to render the rent reserved not the best rent reasonably obtainable, & upon the evidence the rent reserved was, having regard to the condition of the property at the time when the lease was granted, the best rent reasonably obtainable, & the action by the mtgee. failed.—COUTTS & CO. v. SOMERVILLE, [1935] Ch. 438; 104 L. 772 i. What leases within powers—Lease with no condition of re-entry—Void.]—A mtgor. in possession made an agreement in writing whereby he let to a tenant a public-house & dwelling together with certain lands "as a yearly tenancy at a yearly rent of £35 payable quarterly in advance." The agreement provided that the tenancy should commence from a certain date, & that the tenant should pay the first quarter's rent on that date, & that he would "punctually pay the rent thereafter according to the terms of this agreement." The agreement also provided that the tenancy might be determined by either party giving to the other three months' notice in writing. There was no condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid:—Held: although the undertaking to pay the rent contained in the agreement might be a sufficient compliance with Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 18 (7), as to payment of the rent, since the agreement, not being under seal, there could be no covenant therein, yet the omission of a condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid invalidated the agreement as against an incumbrancer, the provision in the agreement entitling the landlord to determine the tenancy by a three months' notice to quit not being sufficient to satisfy the condition.—MURPHY & CO. v. MARREN, [1933] I. PART VI. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 6.—B. (a).

784 vii. —— ——.]—Where a lease made by a mtgor. is subsequent to the mtge., the mtgee. has not the right at common law to require the tenant to pay the rent to him & to sue for its recovery unless the relationship of the landlord & tenant has been created between them by mutual agreement; & the mere fact of the tenant remaining in possession after notice from the mtgee. to pay the rent to him is not evidence of such an agreement. The provision in Real Property Act, R. S. M., 1913, s. 114, that a mtgee. upon default by the mtgor. "may enter into possesson of the mortgaged or encumbered land by receiving the rents & profits thereof," does not give the mtgee. a right of action for rent against a tenant holding under a lease made by the mtgor. after the mtge.—AIKENHEAD v. SPIVAK, [1931] 2 W. 995a. The covenants in the mtge. were made applicable to a further charge given in 1926, by which another endowment policy was mortgaged. This policy would mature in 1942, & the further charge provided that if the mtgor. survived the date of maturity, the policy moneys with profits should be paid to the mtgee. in reduction of the mtge. debt. The other policy also would mature before the date for redemption :—Held : the postponement of redemption for twenty years, together with the other provisions which made the policies in effect irredeemable, was a clog on the equity, & the mtgor. was entitled to judgment in an action for redemption.—DAVIS v. SYMONS, [1934] Ch. 442 ; 103 L. 946 iv. —— ——.]—Roman-Dutch law as applied in Ceylon recognises a principle which bears a close resemblance to the principle of English law embodied in the maxim "once a mtge. always a mtge."

A syndicate purchased forest land in Ceylon & conveyed it by deed to resp., who had provided the greater part of the purchase-price. A second deed of the same date recited the facts, & provided that resp. should hold as absolute owner with power to manage & to sell the lands for the best available price, approval to be obtained if the price was less than Rs. 100 per acre, & to apply all moneys realised in payment of sums due to him for purchase-price or management expenses, & that he should pay over the balance pro rata, according to their interests, among the syndicate. A year later, before the lands had been sold, members of the syndicate sued claiming to redeem. Resp. had settled with all pltfs. except two, who were represented by applt. :—Held : upon the true construction of the two deeds they created a security for money advanced, there being imposed upon resp. duties & obligations of the nature of trusts, & that applt. was entitled to redeem the shares of the two pltfs. on payment of their rateable proportion of the amount due, which was to be ascertained on taking accounts as directed. —SAMINATHAN CHETTY v. POORTEN, [1933] A. The co. then gave M. a sub-lease for the same term less one day & M. mtged. the sub-lease to the co. The sub-lease contained a brewer's tie that the sub-lessee would deal exclusively with the sub-lessor for all liquors & would not during the term of the lease purchase or obtain any liquors from any other person. B. subsequently purchased from M. the unencumbered fee simple & the unexpired term of the sub-lease. B. obtained an advance from a bank & repayment was guaranteed by the brewery co. The mtges. over the freehold & sub-lease were released & M. transferred to B. the sub-lease & the freehold free of mtge. B. then gave a mtge. over the sub-lease to the brewery co. to secure the moneys owing to the bank. B. paid off the loan from the bank & asserted that he held the property free of the brewer's tie. 1017a. Mortgage by company—Dissolution of company—Whether bona vacantia.]—In 1899 a limited co. mortgaged to trustees of a will certain leasehold properties by way of absolute assignment subject to the equity of redemption. In 1910 the co. went into liquidation, & in 1913, the trustees having called in the mtge., the co. made default & the trustees appointed a receiver. In 1916 the co. was dissolved, the income of the property being at that time insufficient to meet the mtge. interest, & nothing was done in respect of the equity of redemption as the liquidator considered it to be of no value. The value of the property having since largely increased, the surviving trustee claimed to be entitled to the property absolutely, & the Crown claimed the equity of redemption as bona vacantia :—Held : (1) Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 296, did not apply, as that section was not retrospective ; (2) after the disappearance of the legal entity which had had the right of redemption the Crown was entitled to the property as bona vacantia.

(3) The equity of redemption, then, was a right of property which could be disposed of by the mtgor. In a general sense the mtgee. was not a trustee for the mtgor. ; their interests were antagonistic, though the mtgee. might be trustee in a limited sense—that was, in respect of surplus purchase-moneys after his own claims had been satisfied (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—Re WELLS, SWINBURNE-HANHAM v. HOWARD, [1933] Ch. 29 ; 101 L. 1916a. —— ——.]—The provisions of sect. 113 of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), are merely concerned with relieving persons who are investigating title to land from being affected by notice of & from making inquiries into equitable interests, of which they may have actual or constructive notice, relating to the money secured by mtges. on the land. There is nothing in the sect. giving to a person who acquires an equitable interest in the mtge. debt last in point of time a better equity than that of a person whose equitable interest is earlier in point of time.—BEDDOES v. SHAW, [1937] Ch. 81 ; [1936] 2 All E. 1903 iv. ——.]—By a memorandum of agreement, made in 1915 between C. & his aunt, M., C. agreed to give M. " during her life the exclusive use of the drawing-room & bedroom over same, with fuel & suitable support & maintenance," in a certain dwelling-house, " free of charge, the consideration for same being natural love & affection & services rendered " by M. to C. ; & C. thereby agreed with M. " to execute a deed whenever called upon to carry out & give effect to the foregoing contract." No deed was ever executed pursuant to the said agreement. The agreement was not registered in the Registry of Deeds. M. went into exclusive occupation of the two rooms, & so continued, & was supplied with fuel & maintenance. The rest of the house was in the occupation of C., who held the premises under a fee-farm grant. In 1921 C. deposited the title deeds of the premises with a bank by way of equitable mtge. to secure the payment of present & future advances. In 1927, C. being indebted to the bank for a large sum, the bank issued a summary summons to enforce the mtge. against C. M. claimed to be entitled under the agreement to an equitable life interest in the two rooms, & also to a charge on the whole of the premises in her favour for fuel & suitable support & maintenance during her life, & that the bank's equitable mtge. was pulsne to her life interest & charge. She stated in an affidavit that on the faith of the agreement, & on the security of the rights thereby conferred on her, she had from time to time made advances to C. of sums amounting to £252. The manager of the bank stated in an affidavit that at the date of the deposit the bank had no knowledge of any claim by M. against the premises :—Held : M. was entitled to an equitable life estate in the two rooms, which interest was not subject to the bank's equitable mtge. The land was sold at a considerable profit. On the completion of the purchase, a mtge. was given by the purchasers to applt. for £1,800, which purported to be a loan by applt., but, in fact, part of this amount was the balance of the purchase-money which applt. was to hold in trust for C., subject to a charge for money advanced. Resp. entered a caveat against dealings with the mtge. :—Held : applt. had, at most, a claim against C. under his contract to an account, & for payment of any moneys found due thereon, &, accordingly, had no caveating interest.—SHEPHERD v. HOUSTON, [1927] S. The transfers, though absolute in form, were made merely as security for the debt, but resps. lodged no caveat. Subsequently the transferee mtged. the land to applt. to secure a loan then made. Applt. had no notice that the resps. had any equitable interest, but had not searched the register. The mtge. to him was not registered :—Held : resps.' equity should be postponed to that of applt., because resps. had armed their transferee with power to deal with the lands as owner ; applt.'s failure to search the register did not affect the case, because his priority did not arise from any representation to him by resps., & because they had lodged no caveat. Further, it was to be inferred that resps. had authorised their transferee to raise money upon the lands, & accordingly the case was one of an agent exceeding his authority but acting within its apparent indicia.—ABIGAIL v. LAPIN, [1934] A. The sale to the servant was made in good faith & not at an undervalue. It was the servant's duty to help generally in the administration of the bank's business in the district where the land was situate, but he had no power to sell land, & all he could do was to submit offers to the head office of the bank, which had a separate sales department. The servant was the person who would have received tenders if any had been made, but he would have transmitted them to the head office with such advice as he thought fit. In fact, no tender & no offer had been received, & the servant had taken no active step in relation to the exercise of the bank's power of sale :—Held : the sale to the servant was not wrongful.—SEWELL v. AGRICULTURAL BANK OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA (1931), 44 C. 2331 i. Position of mortgagee—Whether a trustee.]—A mtgee., in exercising his power of sale, must exercise it in good faith. He has a right to look after himself first, but he is not at liberty to look after his own interests alone. He must not wilfully & recklessly deal with the property in such a manner that the interests of the mtgor. are sacrificed. Therefore, he is bound to take reasonable precautions in exercising the power of sale to see that the advertisements of the sale are adequate & that the property is not sold at such a manifest undervalue as in itself to indicate disregard of the mtgor.'s interest.—HARTLEY v. HUMPHRIS, [1928] S. 2479a. —— By contract of sale.]—The ct. will not grant to a mtgor. tendering the moneys due under the mtge. an injunction restraining the mtgee. from completing by conveyance a contract to sell the mtged. property in exercise of his power of sale unless it is proved that the mtgee. entered into the contract in bad faith.

A co. entered as mtgee. into a contract for the sale of the mtged. property. The mtgor. had been given many opportunities to find the money due under the mtge. &, at his request & upon his undertaking to put the property up for sale by auction, the co. had refused a good offer to purchase. When the mtgor. did put the property up for sale by auction, when the period within which he had undertaken to do so was past, no acceptable bid was received, &, after a long period during which he was to the co.'s knowledge negotiating with a third party for a fresh loan on the security of the mtged. property, & during which the co., in order to help him as much as possible, had postponed selling, the co. ultimately contracted to sell the property for an amount less than that which it had refused at his request & upon his undertaking. On a motion by the mtgor. for an injunction to restrain completion on the grounds that there was no sale until conveyance & that the contract had been entered into in bad faith at a gross undervalue, & for leave to redeem the property upon paying into ct., as he claimed to be able to do, the moneys due under the mtge. :—Held : (1) a mtgee.'s exercise of his power under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 101 (1) (i), to sell the mtged. property by public auction or private contract is binding on the mtgor. before completion unless it is proved that he exercised it in bad faith ; (2) the fact that a contract for sale was entered into at an undervalue is not by itself enough to prove bad faith.—WARING v. LONDON & MANCHESTER ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1935] Ch. 310 ; 104 L. 3140a. —— ——.]—A District Council having advanced the sum of £200,000 upon the security of freehold houses, the mtgor. became bkpt. The council put in a proof for their debts, valuing their security at £160,000, without obtaining a professional valuation. The council also issued a foreclosure summons against the mtgor., again valuing their security at £160,000, & a foreclosure order nisi was made according to the form in Seton's Judgments & Orders, 7th ed., vol. iii., p. 1892, which has been in use in such cases for many years. The order contained a declaration that pltfs. were entitled to hold the mtged. property as security for £160,000 & interest thereon. The council subsequently obtained a professional valuation of the mtged. property at £200,000, & they moved in bkpcy. to amend the valuation in their proof. The judge in bkpcy. held that he could not consider the application as long as the valuation of £160,000 in the foreclosure order stood. The council then moved in the Ch. Div. for leave to amend the foreclosure order by increasing the valuation to £200,000: —Held: the foreclosure order as it stood prevented the council from exercising the right they had in bkpcy. to apply to amend their proof, & notwithstanding the long period between the date of that order & the date of the application & the long period during which the form of order had been used, it was right to discharge the order & make a fresh order with a declaration that pltfs. were entitled to hold the mtged. properties for the respective amounts of principal & interest due to them upon the security of the mtges.—HAYES & HARLINGTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. WILLIAMS TRUSTEE, [1936] Ch. 315; 105 L. Part XIV.—Discharge of Mortgages.

3384a. —— Assignment of one property subject to mortgage.]—M. was entitled to a life interest & a contingent reversionary interest under a settlement. He mtged. these interests together with a life policy & subsequently was adjudicated bkpt. The trustee in bkpcy. sold the interests under the settlement & assigned them subject to the mtge. but retained the life policy. The purchasers of the interests under the settlement paid the mtge. interest & the premiums on the policy as they fell due. M. then died & the mtge. was satisfied out of the policy moneys. The question raised was whether the discharge of the mtge. debt fell (i) wholly upon the proceeds of the policy, or (ii) wholly upon the settlement interests, or (iii) must be apportioned between the proceeds of the policy & the settlement interests in the proportion of their respective values :—Held : the mtge. debt must be rateably apportioned between the policy moneys & the settlement interests. The assignment was subject to the mtge., & there was nothing in the assignment or in the relevant surrounding circumstances to displace the primâ facie rule that contribution takes place. It was true that the trustee in bkpcy. stood in no better position than the bkpt., but the latter, though he retained one of the properties mtged., was not compelled to bear the whole debt when he had expressly assigned the other subject to the mtge.—Re MAINWARING, MAINWARING v. VERDEN, [1937] Ch. 96 ; [1936] 3 All E. The widow died in 1923, having appointed her two daughters, E. & A., exors. of her will. The mtge. contained no personal covenant for payment of the principal, & the mtgee. accepted interest at 3½ per cent., reduced in 1924 to 3 per cent. In 1924 W., who was on very friendly terms with his brother's family, gave the deeds relating to the farm, other than the mtge. deed, to E. & A. to retain in their custody. On Dec. 11, 1927, W., who had since 1922 been suffering from an incurable disease & knew that he could not possibly live long, called upon his nieces, who were aware of his state of health, & gave them an envelope indorsed in his own handwriting: "Deeds relating to X. farm to be given up at death. The mtge. on its face was one for $30,000, bearing interest half-yearly at 7½ per cent. per annum, & containing no reference to the bonus. Applt. issued its cheque to T. Co. became insolvent, &, the mtge. being in arrear, applt. advertised the property for sale, & the liquidator paid off the amount owing, on the basis of the full face amount of the mtge., without knowledge of the bonus. He sued to recover the $3,000, with interest paid thereon, invoking sects. 6 to 9 of Interest Act, R. S. C., 1927 (c. 102):—Held: he could not recover. sf. ——.]—"Gross negligence" in the phrase "gross negligence or wilful & wanton misconduct" in sect. 8 of 1936, c. 106, amending sect. 85 of Vehicles Act, 1935, connotes criminal negligence, which differs from civil negligence because, objectively, it implies a want of care which may endanger human life while, subjectively, it implies a state of mind indifferent to consequences. By reserving to a passenger a cause of action against the owner & operator of a private motor vehicle for injuries sustained by him by reason of gross negligence on the part of the driver, besides those arising from wilful & wanton misconduct, the Legislature meant to make sure that he would have the right to recover for conduct of a certain tortious quality in regard to matters of omission as well as in regard to those of commission. While, therefore, there is thus obviously a distinction between the ideas involved in these terms so stated alternatively, yet the fact of their association as if affording equal grounds for liability is a reasonable basis for the assumption that the legal gravity of the fault to be predicated of the one is on a parity with that included in the other. Since "gross negligence" in said sect. does not imply so much an intention to do wrong but rather the absence of an intention to do right, the trial judge's charge to the jury herein was erroneous in so far as it instructed them in effect that the conduct constituting "gross negligence" must be intentional ; but this defect was cured by the fact that he also told them that the driver would be guilty of "gross negligence" if his conduct had shown a reckless disregard for, i.e. a complete indifference to, the safety & rights of others ; & by the supplemental instruction, in which in answer to the jury's question as to what kind of indifference could constitute gross negligence, he told them in the circumstances it would mean that indifference which showed that the driver was careless of the consequences & "took a chance."—SHORTT v. RUSH & BRITISH AMERICAN OIL CO., LTD., [1937] 2 W. 33 xxv. ——.]—An action of damages was brought against a firm of ginger beer manufacturers on behalf of two children who had been injured through drinking a bottle of ginger beer, manufactured by defenders, which contained the decayed body of a mouse. The bottle was bought from a retailer, but the mouse, unknown to the manufacturers, was in the bottle when it left their factory. It was possible for mice to enter empty bottles at a factory, but the manufacturers' system of cleansing & inspecting the bottles before filling was the best system known in the trade. There was no affirmative proof of carelessness by any of the manufacturers' servants in carrying out the system :—Held : defenders fell to be assoilzied ; on the ground that, as defenders neither knew that the contents of the bottle were dangerous, nor were dealers in articles per se dangerous, they owed no duty to the consumers, who had not contracted with them.—MULLEN v. BARR & CO., LTD., M'GOWAN v. BARR & CO., LTD., [1929] S. One of the conditions of the licence was that defts. should make good all damage done to premises X. by reason of the demolition operations. In the course of the operations defts. allowed debris to drop on an inaccessible part of the roof of premises X. & did not remove all the debris therefrom when the demolition work was completed. In July pltf. became the occupier of premises X. under a lease. In Sept. a heavy storm of rain washed the debris which had been left by defts. on the roof of premises X. into the gutters on the roof, & a gulley was choked & the basement of premises X. was flooded, & goods which pltf. kept there were damaged. later overheard deft. in his office inform one of her fellow-employees that he was going out to shoot himself or some one. Deft. was drunk. Shortly afterwards deft.'s statement was repeated to pltf. by the employee to whom it was made & pltf. became nervous. Deft. left his office & pltf. heard a shot fired, but shortly afterwards deft. returned unharmed. Later still, deft. continuing his erratic behaviour, tore up banknotes in pltf.'s presence, saying that he would not be there in the morning to mend them & that a death would be heard of. Pltf. alleging that deft.'s conduct shocked her & caused her to become ill, sued deft. for damages for negligence, breach of contract, assault, & for wilfully causing her harm. At the trial of the action a verdict was entered by direction of the trial judge for deft. The film co. pleaded that they themselves were not responsible for the lighting & pltf. joined the second deft. who, pltf. alleged, was in charge of the lighting. Defts. then added a defence of common employment :—Held : (1) lighting of the intensity used was not frequently used in the production of films & there was a duty upon the film co. to warn the artistes or to take precautions against injury to them ; (2) it was the system of lighting that was at fault & there was no question of common employment ; (3) the second deft. took no responsibility for the effect of the lighting upon the performers. He was there to provide the lighting the co. required, & the likelihood of damage to the performers was known to the film co., & was a risk which they took upon themselves. Applt. claimed damages :—Held : applt. had been burnt by steam generated in a cylinder passing through the aperture of a clip to the scalp, & not by a heated clip coming into contact with the scalp ; in the case of a steam burn the duty was on resp. through his assistants, first to adjust the apparatus properly, secondly to warn applt. to co-operate, & thirdly, upon a complaint by applt., to take immediate steps to relieve her ; on the evidence, resp. had discharged those duties ; resp.'s assistant stopped what burning was going on as soon as a complaint was made ; applt. was burnt before she complained & she did not make the complaint in sufficient time to enable the assistant to prevent the mischief, & applt. was not entitled to succeed.

Deft. having been found liable for the first accident, the question arose whether he was liable also for the additional injuries suffered by the female pltf. in the second accident :—Held : deft. could not be held so liable. 196a. ——.]—Pltf. was the widow of a man employed by deft. co. as a derricker. Deceased had left the barge on which he was employed & volunteered to act temporarily as tipper on a second barge in order to relieve a fellow workman. The fellow workman was in fact a director of the co., but at the time he was acting merely as a foreman over the job, & was not there as representing the board of directors. While engaged as a tipper in these circumstances he stumbled & fell into the hold, sustaining minor injuries. He was removed to hospital & given an anæsthetic under which he collapsed & died. The post mortem examination showed that he had a diseased heart, but neither the history of the man's activities nor the use of a stethoscope did or would have disclosed the man's condition. At the trial it was held that the death was due to the negligence of defts., who were ordered to pay to pltf. £785, of which sum £300 was not to be recoverable in any event. On appeal:—Held: on the facts there was no negligence on the part of defts.; the fact that the fellow worker was a member of the board of directors did not in a case where he was in fact acting as a foreman bar the defence of common employment; on the work upon which deceased was engaged at the time he was merely a volunteer & the defence of volenti non fit injuria applied; the administration of the anæsthetic was not a wrongful act intervening between the accident & the death, & could not be relied on as a case of novus actus intervenions.—BLOOR v. LIVERPOOL DERRICKING & CARRYING CO., LTD., [1936] 3 All E. Pltf. charged negligence in respect of the rotten condition of the board. sp. Independent contractor.]—C., while engaged in cleaning out a septic tank connected with deft.'s hospital, was killed by poisonous gas that had accumulated in the tank. The widow brought an action under Fatal Accidents Act. The judge instructed the jury that its first duty was to determine whether the relationship of C. to deft. was that of a servant or that of an independent contractor. He then told the jury that in answering the question, "Was deft. negligent," it should apply a higher standard of care if it had found that C. was a servant than it should apply if it found that C. was a contractor: in the former case deft. was negligent if it had let C. do the work knowing that it was dangerous or if it should have made inquiries to ascertain if the work was dangerous, but that, if he was a contractor, then deft. was required merely not to lead him into a trap. The jury found that the relationship was that of principal & independent contractor & there was no negligence on the part of deft.:—Held : the charge to the jury was objectionable because deft.'s duty to C. was the same whether he was an independent contractor or a servant & therefore the jury should not have been asked to find in which capacity he was employed, & also because it told the jury that the duty of deft. towards an independent contractor was merely not to lead him into a trap. The proper questions for the jury were, first, whether deft. knew of the danger, & second, if it did not know, could it by the exercise of reasonable care & diligence have become aware of the existence of the danger.—COTE v. LAMPMAN UNION HOSPITAL BOARD, [1933] 2 W. 228 i. Customer in shop.]—Pltf., a customer in deft.'s store, slipped when approaching the steps leading to the ground floor, fell down a few steps & was injured. There was no question of structural defect or lack of lighting or handrails or guards. No one saw exactly how she came to fall, & she did not know; but alleged that it was due to a pool of water caused by drippings from an umbrella:—Held : pltf. had not proved any negligence on the part of deft. Even if there was a pool of water as alleged, & it was found that there was not, it was not a danger such as deft. ought to have known of; & it would be unreasonable to expect the deft. to employ people throughout the shop to mop up any dampness or moisture or drippings from umbrellas.—WITT v. DAVID SPENCER, LTD., [1935] 2 W. 242 i. Spectator at public exhibition.]—At a motor cycle race meeting conducted by a co., a spectator was injured through a motor cycle getting out of control, & after colliding with another motor cycle, jumping over the fence. The racing took place at high speeds on a flat track surrounded by a wire mesh safety fence, a foot outside which was a picket fence of the same height. In addition, in places, there was another fence erected on top of the picket fence. Outside the picket fence there were seats, & the heads of persons sitting thereon would be below the level of the picket & safety fences. The spectator, who had not been to motor cycle races before, attended in consequence of an advertisement, paid for admission, & took a seat at a place where there was no fence above the picket fence. He saw a notice: "Danger. Do not lean on fence." He assumed that the fence gave him sufficient protection. Unknown to the spectator, a motor cycle had on a previous occasion similarly gone over the fence:—Held : deft. was liable.—CHATWOOD v. NATIONAL SPEEDWAYS, LTD., [1929] S. R. (Q.) 29.—AUS.

242 iii. ——.]—The infant pltf. while watching a hockey game at deft.'s rink was hit by a puck & seriously injured. He had paid for his ticket & had selected a seat in a front box on a level with the ice. He had played hockey for a number of years. The negligence of which he complained particularly was the absence of wire or other netting for the protection of spectators. The evidence was that such protection was not provided at other rinks in Winnipeg or other cities:—Held : the action failed; deft. was not an insurer against dangers incident to the game which any reasonable spectator could see, & pltfs. must be held to have had a thorough knowledge of the risks assumed by the spectators of hockey & of the protection customarily afforded them.—ELLIOTT v. AMPHITHEATRE, LTD., [1934] 3 W. 242 vi. ——.]—The W. Racing Club was the owner of a racecourse at T., where the saddling-paddock was an area of about an acre & a half, & the conditions surrounding it were of the usual kind on racecourses. Pltf. was walking on a footpath bordering the saddling-paddock when he was kicked by one of two horses owned by the other defts., but as he was unable to identify the horse that kicked him he was non-suited in respect of those defts. Pltf. had full opportunity of avoiding the negligence complained of as against the club, as he observed that one of the horses was fractious & pulling away from the stable-boy in charge, & yet continued to walk in close proximity to it whilst there was ample room to keep clear, as there was the full width of the footpath (8 ft. to 9 ft.), & there was grass on the farther side. There was no evidence that a saddling-paddock is ever fenced on racecourses; or that the particular horse was more fractious than ordinary racehorses; that it was a kicker; or that it required more strength to restrain it than in the case of any other horses; or that the boy in charge was less capable of controlling it than a full-grown man. No such accident had happened before, or at least during the previous thirteen years. In an action by the injured spectator, who was a paying visitor to the course, the question for the ct. was whether or not he was entitled to recover damages, in respect of the injuries sustained by him, from the Racing Club itself:—Held : it was the duty of the club to see that its premises were as free from danger as reasonable care & skill could make them: but it was not an insurer against accidents which no reasonable diligence could foresee, or against perils which the ordinary spectator might be expected to appreciate & take precautions against, or against perils incidental to the ordinary conduct of a racecourse which a reasonable spectator can foresee & of which he takes the risk. As the conditions surrounding the position & conduct of the saddling-paddock were similar to those in racecourses generally & for at least thirteen years there had been no accident on the course in the nature of the present one, which was an unlikely & improbable accident against which it would be unreasonable to expect the club to provide & which would not have occurred if pltf. had taken ordinary reasonable care, there was no breach of duty on the part of the club, or failure to comply with any terms or implications arising from the contract.—MOLOUGHNEY v. WELLINGTON RACING CLUB, [1935] N. 243a. ——.]—Resps. were the proprietors of a space of land known as "Dreamland," which was a place for the entertainment of the public. On part of this land the "Atlantic Flyer" was erected by S., under the terms of an agreement with resps., by which a part of the land at "Dreamland" was taken over by S. for the purpose of erecting & running the "Atlantic Flyer." Resps. under the agreement were to be paid 33⅓ per cent. of S.'s gross receipts, but all moneys were in the first instance to be paid to the resps., who had the right to appoint the cashiers. Under rules & regulations attached to the agreement, a right was reserved to resps. to refuse admission to any person & to charge for admission to the ground. S. was bound to provide at his own expense a ticket-taker. Resps. advertised inviting persons to "Dreamland." W. was killed while on one of the boats of the "Flyer" in consequence of a bolt giving way & the occupants being flung out. Applt., as his mother & partial dependant, claimed damages under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), against resps.:—Held: on the terms & rules of the agreement, there was no contractual relation between resps. & deceased, & as the advertisements of resps. did no more than invite people to the area of land owned by them, there was no invitation to deceased to enter upon property on which there was a hidden danger under the control of the inviter.—HUMPHREYS v. DREAMLAND (MARGATE), LTD. 243c. ——.]—Pltf. had paid for admission to witness motor car races on a course occupied & managed by defts. As the result of a collision between two motor cars near the railing behind which pltf. was standing one of the cars leapt into the air & went right through the railing, with the result that pltf. & several other spectators sustained serious personal injuries. It was not disputed that this accident was the first time when any spectator had been injured by a car leaving the track. In an action claiming damages for personal injuries the jury found (inter alia) that defts. had omitted to take reasonable precautions for the safety of spectators, & awarded damages to pltf. On appeal:—Held: there was no evidence that defts. had failed to take proper care to make their premises reasonably safe for spectators. Defts. were not under any obligation to insure safety under all circumstances, but only to provide against damage to spectators which any reasonable person in their position would have anticipated as likely to happen. The spectator himself took the risk of remoter damage when he elected to attend the races.—HALL v. BROOKLANDS AUTO-RACING CLUB, [1933] 1 K. B. 205; 101 L. J. K. B. 679; 147 L. T. 404; 48 T. L. 246a. Relation visiting paying patient in hospital.]—Pltf., the mother of a patient occupying, for payment, a private ward in a hospital desired to consult one of its honorary surgeons, with whom she had made a personal contract for the treatment of her son. He invited her into a small room often used, to the knowledge of the hospital authorities, for such consultations between the honorary medical staff & relatives of patients. The floor was highly polished for antiseptic reasons. She trod on a mat, which slid along the floor beneath her foot, so that she fell & suffered personal injury:—Held: in these circumstances pltf. was an invitee of deft. hospital, because she was in the room in pursuance of an interest common to her, the surgeon, & the hospital, &, therefore, the hospital authorities owed her the duty of taking reasonable steps to make the room safe, which duty they had not discharged. The mat was an unusual danger, of which they ought to have known, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—WEIGALL v. WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL, [1936] 1 All E. R. 232; 52 T. L. R. 301; 80 Sol. Jo. 146, C. A.

242 vii. ——.]—Two ladies, proceeding along the passage-way towards the auditorium of deft.'s picture theatre, fell & injured themselves in tripping over the end of a strip of linoleum forming part of the floor covering. The accident happened where two strips met. The ends were not secured but one partly overlapped the other so that the upper end faced the street. On a claim for damages:—Held: the omission of deft. to make the junction of the two ends as little dangerous as could reasonably be, was a breach of its duty to pltf., & as they were not negligent they were entitled to recover damages for the injuries received.—DODDS v. KEMBALL THEATRES, LTD. aa. Child in corporation playground.]—Deft. city corpn. established & conducted "supervised playgrounds" throughout the city & employed supervisors to take charge of them:—Held: the corpn. assumed, or held itself as having assumed the obligation of taking reasonable care of such children as should resort to the playgrounds, & was bound to make some reasonable effort to protect them from dangers known or reasonably to be apprehended.—MCSTRAVICK v. OTTAWA, [1929] 4 D. ab. Person sharing offices with friend.]—Pltf. had for a number of years shared with a friend an office in deft.'s building which the friend leased from deft. Pltf. paid the friend half of the rent, & they gave one another mutual assistance in their business. When pltf. was entering a passenger elevator in the building it began to slide downwards, with the result that pltf. fell forward & was injured. A jury returned a verdict for damages on which judgment was given for pltf., & deft. appealed:—Held: pltf. was an invitee, &, therefore, deft. was under the duty towards him of taking reasonable care that the promises were safe.—GORDON v. CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE, [1931] 3 W. Pltf., a workman employed by the sub-contractors, was working on the scaffolding when he saw a ladder, by which he had ascended, being removed by two men employed by R. These two men informed pltf. that there was another ladder at the other end of the scaffolding. Pltf. found this other ladder & was descending by it, when, as two rungs were missing, he slipped & sustained injuries. The evidence showed that the defective ladder had been put on a dump with discarded plant, a place from which no employee of R. had any right to remove it & again put it in use. There was no evidence as to how, or by whom, the defective ladder had been placed against the scaffolding. In an action for negligence against R. :—Held : pltf. could not succeed

st. Person driving car in another's drive.]—Held : per the Lord Justice Clerk, if it were the law that a person driving a car in another person's avenue was, as a mere licensee, entitled to no higher right than that of protection against hidden dangers or traps, a car negligently driven by the owner of the avenue or his servant might, & in the present case did, constitute such a hidden danger or trap.—BOWIE v. SHENKIN, [1934] S. sw. Premises rented for musical recital—Person assisting pianist.]—Deft. rented its auditorium to H. for a musical recital which H. was giving, & permitted H., without charge, to use it for a rehearsal previous to the recital. Pltf., H.'s brother, was, for a fee, which also covered his preparatory work, to assist H. as a pianist in the recital. During the rehearsal, while pltf. was playing a piano on the stage of the auditorium, the lens of a spotlight suspended above the piano burst & a piece of broken glass cut his hand. He sued deft. for damages :—Held : pltf. was a mere licensee of deft., without an interest, pltf. not having entered the auditorium upon business which concerned deft. upon deft.'s invitation, express or implied. Upon the evidence, the spotlight in question was not a trap or hidden peril within the meaning of the cases.—HAMBOURG v. T. EATON CO., LTD., [1935] S. C. R. 430; 3 D. L. R. 305.—CAN.

He further averred that he had believed that the footway was free from obstructions, & that all the seats were on the platforms & not on the footway; that he was entitled to expect that the footway would be kept safe for foot traffic, or guarded & lighted if not so; the defenders ought to have known that the seat was in a dangerous position, & in leaving it unlit after dark they were guilty of negligence :—Held : as pursuer was merely a licencee, defenders' only duty was not to subject him to a trap & there were no relevant averments of a trap.—BOLTON v. GOUROCK MAGISTRATES, [1932] S. Pltf. claimed damages from deft., the occupier of a public park, for injury caused to her by her foot slipping into a hole covered by a piece of paper. The hole was in a water table adjacent to a retaining wall, & pltf. after entering the park was proceeding along the water table, which lay between the retaining wall & a garden plot, for the purpose of viewing a procession. At the trial pltf. was non-suited on the ground that no invitation express or implied, was extended to her to use the particular part of the park where she was injured. Upon appeal :—Held : the case should have been left to the jury to determine on the evidence whether the right or license of pltf. to use the park did in fact extend to the place where the injury was sustained &, if so, whether the injury was caused by a concealed trap of which deft. was aware.—PETTIET v. SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL (1936), 36 S. 306 vii. ——.]—In an action against the Municipal Council of Sydney evidence was given that pltf. was injured by stepping into a hole in a narrow space between a raised wall & a light iron fence erected round some flower beds in Hyde Park, which is vested in the council under the Public Parks Act, 1912. The hole was in a drainage gutter & would have been plainly visible to any one walking in the vicinity, but for the fact that it had become covered with rubbish & papers, which were wet. A number of other people were sitting near the hole & newspapers were scattered about :—Held : there was no evidence upon which the jury were entitled to find that deft. was aware that the hole had become covered & a verdict should be entered for deft. The pltf.'s counsel asked the trial judge to direct the jury that the council was bound not to expose persons visiting the park to a hidden peril & that if it knew of a danger in the park it must warn them & owed a duty to them not to lay a trap :—Held : he had not asked for a direction that deft. was liable, if by the exercise of reasonable care it ought to have known of the extent of the danger, & the ct. could not consider the question whether a finding by the jury, that the council had failed to exercise such reasonable care, would have rendered deft. liable for the injury sustained.—PETTIET v. SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL (No. 2) (1936), 13 L. His daughter, the infant pltf., who had accompanied him, remained seated in the truck. It was struck by a car of deft.'s which was pushed over the end of a railway siding. The truck was damaged & the infant pltf. injured :—Held : the infant pltf. was a mere trespasser & could not recover.—BETTLES v. CANADIAN NATIONAL RYS., [1929] 4 D. L. R. 175; 35 Can. Ry. 307a. ——.]—Applts. were members of a stevedores' gang employed to load a steamship from resps.' barge H. The cargo in the hold of the barge consisted of bicarbonate of soda in bags & soda in kegs on top of the bags. The foreman required the bags to be loaded before the kegs. The kegs were therefore laid along the deck of the barge to enable the bags to be slung on board the steamer by the ship's derricks. After this had been done the crew of the barge replaced the hatch covers on the after portion of the hatch, unsupported by the fore & aft beam. The engineer threw a sling on one of the hatch covers & applts. placed seven kegs in the sling. When they were moving the eighth keg, the hatch covers gave way & the applts. fell into the hold & were injured. The men knew that it was dangerous & improper to load cargo off the hatch covers :—Held : applts. had no cause of action against resps. because : the crew of the H. had no authority to invite applts. to use the hatch covers for the purpose for which, or in the way in which, they were used ; consequently, applts. in so using the hatch covers were trespassers, & not invitees of resps ; even if they were invitees they were guilty of contributory negligence.—HILLEN & PETTIGREW v. I. 309a. —— ——.]—A piece of waste land, whose owner was laying it out as a building estate, adjoined the highway & was unfenced, & the children of the neighbourhood, without any licence to do so, used it as a playground. On the land there was a large elm tree, & by a contract between the owner & deft.. who was a nurseryman, the latter undertook to fell the tree. On the day on which the tree was expected to fall there were many children on the land, & deft. or his assistant more than once drove them back from the tree. At 5.15 p.m. the tree was held up by one root only, & deft., knowing that when that root was cut the tree would fall within two minutes & without giving any further warning to the children, cut that last root, whereupon the tree fell & in its fall hurt pltf., a boy ten years of age. In an action in the county ct. by pltf. against deft. for personal injuries the judge found that deft. had been guilty of negligence in not warning the children that the tree was about to fall, & that pltf.'s injuries were due to that negligence ; but he further found that pltf. was a trespasser on the land, & on that ground he gave judgment for deft. On appeal :—Held : deft. owed a duty even to a trespasser not to do any act, which would alter the condition of the land & might injure him, without giving him warning; the judge in finding that deft. had been negligent had found that he had committed a breach of that duty towards pltf., though a trespasser ; & pltf. was entitled to judgment.—MOURTON v. POULTER, [1930] 2 K. d i. —— Window broken by negligence of servants.]—Defts. were the occupiers of a building abutting on the street. Two servants of defts. were engaged on the third floor of the building in moving a large table by means of an electric hoist. Overlooking the street on this floor was a window, half of which was projecting over the street, having been opened to give the table more play. One servant was holding the table top, & the other servant was working the hoist. At a time when the table was suspended in the air, the foot of the servant holding the table slipped, & in consequence the table struck that half of the window projecting over the street. The window was broken & the glass fell on pltf. passing in the street below & injured him. The other windows on this floor of the building had been broken on previous occasions by rolls of linoleum whilst being moved by the electric hoist :—Held : pltf.'s injuries were caused by the negligent use & management of defts.' property by their servants, & that such negligence was the effective cause of pltf.'s injuries.—MORE v. EDWARDS & LAMB, [1929] S. d iii. —— Snow falling off roof.]—Pltf., while walking on the street in front of a building owned by deft. was struck on the head by snow which slid off the roof. Deft. knew that snow had accumulated on the roof & that if it was not removed it would slide on to the street ; & it gave orders to its caretaker with respect thereto which, apparently, were not carried out :—Held : these was a duty on deft. : it was negligent in discharging that duty ; & that negligence caused the accident.—ZIEMER v. COLUMBUS HALL ASSOCN., LTD., [1935] 3 W. sx. Unguarded excavation on properly—Property unfenced from sidewalk.]—Deft. owned a property at the corner of F. Street & First Avenue. There was a fence along F. Street but no fence on First Avenue. There was an unguarded excavation on the property intended for the basement of a house, about two feet from the line of F. Street & about twenty feet from the line of First Avenue. On a dark & foggy night pltf., who was a stranger in the town, was walking to his home He missed his way on First Avenue where there was no sidewalk, fell into the excavation & was injured :- Held : as there was no fence, pltf. in straying upon deft.'s land was not a trespasser, & there was a duty upon deft. not to maintain a trap such as this excavation. Pltf. was therefore entitled to recover—BLANCHARD v. VAUGHAN (1930), 42 B. C. R. 446.—CAN.

353a. —— Hot water boiler—Heated by gas burner without flue.]—Defts., who were builders, sold a house to a purchaser, the contract providing that before conveyance the house was to be completed with a design similar to that of other houses on defts.' building estate & to be fit for habitation. In these houses the hot water for the bath was provided by a kitchen boiler heated by a gas burner with no flue to carry off waste products & with a linen shoot between the kitchen & the bathroom. A similar apparatus was installed by defts. in the house in question, & after the installation the gas co., on behalf of the purchaser, who was already in occupation as a tenant-at-will pending completion, set the regulator at 45 feet an hour, & the apparatus, when so regulated, was perfectly safe. The purchaser or his wife, in all probability, afterwards altered the regulator to 75 feet an hour, which was dangerous, & they were found dead in the bathroom, death being due to the inhalation of carbon monoxide. On behalf of their infant daughter their administrators brought against defts. an action for damages, (a) for breach of a contract to render the house fit for habitation, & (b) for negligently installing the apparatus so that noxious gases or products of combustion would be emitted into the house. The evidence established that such an installation, properly regulated, was not dangerous, & that defts. had nothing to do with the regulation:—Held: (1) since, apart from statutory exceptions which did not apply, a landlord or a vendor of real estate was not, in the absence of express contract, liable to his tenant or purchaser for dangerous defects, & since there was no evidence of the house being unfit for habitation with the apparatus properly regulated, pltfs. could not succeed on the ground of contract; (2) since the apparatus as installed by defts. was not dangerous, pltfs. could not recover on the ground of tort.—BOTTOMLEY v. BANNISTER, [1932] 1 K. sc. Defective stonework on building—Natural disintegration.]—Pltf. was in possession of a car under a hire-purchase agreement. The car was standing on a public road at a conveyance stand when an ornamental stone structure of the building near by broke off & fell on the car damaging it. In a suit to recover damages for negligence against the owner of the building:—Held: deft. was not liable, as the fall was due to an internal flaw which led to a gradual disintegration of the inside material of the stone, & this was not capable of being easily detected.—D'SOUZA v. CASSAMILLY (1933), I. Co. had, five years before the alleged injury, installed gas appliances in P. Co.'s premises, & it supplied gas to P. Co. At the trial the jury found that pltf. was injured by gas; that it escaped from gas appliances on P. Co.'s premises; that P. Co. had not satisfied the jury that it was not guilty of negligence causing or contributing to the escape; that O. Co. did not take the precautions it ought to have taken in installing & maintaining the gas appliances; that its failure to take such precautions caused or contributed to the causes of the injury; that O. Co. was guilty of negligence in the installation or maintenance, causing in whole or in part the injury, "in failing to install fume pipe on boiler when said boiler was installed"; that there was a verbal agreement between P. Co. & O. Co. "to install the aforementioned boiler & maintain same in good order"; & that the cos. failed to observe the terms of such agreement "by not insisting on the installation of fume pipe on boiler at the time said boiler was installed"; that O. ——.]—Pltf.'s husband, who was a dust collector employed by a local authority, was asked by deft.'s wife to take away with the refuse from deft.'s house a metal cylinder which in fact contained gas but which deft. did not know to be dangerous. The cylinder was put in a pail at the back of the dust-cart & soon afterwards it exploded & caused fatal injuries to pltf.'s husband. In an action for negligence the jury found that the death of pltf.'s husband was caused by the handling of the cylinder, & the judge held that in view of the small quantity of gas in the cylinder it was not dangerous in the condition in which it was handed over to the dustman, & he gave judgment for the deft. :—Held : as there was evidence to support the judge's decision it must be affirmed.—PATTENDON v. BENEY (1934), 50 T. by her & used in a store occupied by her for her separate business. He knew that the use of gasoline for dry-cleaning was dangerous but he did not take any precautions to minimise the risk. The bringing of such a quantity of gasoline into the house was a violation of a city bye-law :—Held : independently of the covenants in the lease & of any negligence by his wife, deft. had violated his general duty to his landlord to guard against damage to the house from its use for purposes beyond those incident to its natural & ordinary use as a dwelling. Moreover, his duty to the landlord was, under all the circumstances, an absolute one.—CHAMBERLIN v. SPERRY, [1933] 3 W. W. R. 74; [1934] 1 D. L. R. 189. —CAN.

364 i. —— —— —— Article dangerous owing to unknown defect.]—Pltf. alleging that his health had been injured as the result of his drinking part of the contents of a bottle of coca cola which contained a deleterious substance, brought an action for damages against the manufacturer. The bottle had been purchased from a retailer who had obtained it from the manufacturer, & it was capped in a way that showed the manufacturer intended it to reach the consumer unaltered; it had not been tampered with & there were no means of inspection which could disclose the alleged danger from the time it was distributed by the deft. to the retailer until it reached pltf. Caustic soda in solution was used by deft. in cleaning the bottles before filling them, & pltf. alleged that through deft.'s negligence the soda was intermingled with the beverage & thus rendered it poisonous. Pltf. contended that upon proof that the bottle contained caustic soda, that the beverage was manufactured & bottled by deft. & distributed by him for consumption, & that injury to pltf. had ensued upon drinking of its contents, the principle of res ipsa loquitur applied. —Crane manufacturers sold a crane in parts to a firm of builders, the arrangement being that the parts were to be assembled by the builders' men. The builders had in their employment an experienced crane erector, who in assembling the parts found that certain cog-wheels worked stiffly, did not fit accurately, & required to be remedied; he accordingly marked in chalk the places where there was inaccurate fitting, saying at the same time that he would have to report the matter to his employers. Before the defects so discovered had been remedied the erector began working the crane, & while he was so engaged a part of it fell & killed him, the fall being due to the defects above mentioned. In an action by his widow under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), against the manufacturers of the crane:—Held: the defects being discoverable on reasonable inspection, &, having in fact been discovered by the deceased man, the manufacturers owed him no duty & were not liable for the accident.—FARR v. BUTTERS BROS. & Co., [1932] 2 K. 364c. —— —— —— —— ——.]—Defts. were the manufacturers of a bull-ring, a ring through which an overhead trolley-wire passed, & which had been supplied to a local authority to be used in their overhead system of wires. An employee of the local authority, while working on the wires, was knocked from a wagon & killed by the breaking of the ring. The ring had not at any time been subjected to any test, either by defts. or by the corpn. Pltf., the widow of the employee, sued defts., alleging that the breaking of the ring was due to the negligence of defts. She also sued as administratrix of her husband, &, as such, claimed damages for his loss of expectation of life:—Held: (1) although defts. were negligent in the manufacture of the ring, & such negligence was the cause of the accident, there was an opportunity for intermediate examination of the ring by the local authority, which examination would have disclosed the defect. Defts. as manufacturers of the ring were not, therefore, liable in damages to pltf.; (2) if defts. had been liable, the damages for the loss of expectation of life would have been £500, & this sum, under the Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 46, would be the absolute property of the widow.—DRANSFIELD v. BRITISH INSULATED CABLES, LTD., [1937] 4 All E.
